Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.

Lady P. Wouldst thou have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still. 240 Hot. Neither; 'tis a woman's fault. Lady P. Now God help thee! Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that? Hot. Peace! she sings.

[Here the Lady sings a Welsh song. Hot. Come, Kate. I'll have your song too. Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot. Not yours, in good sooth! Heart! vou swear like a comfit-maker's wife. ' Not you, in good sooth' and 'As true as I live' and 'As God shall mend me' and 'As sure as day '. And givest such sarcenet surety for thy oaths

As if thou never walk'st further than Finsbury

Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art, A good mouth-filling oath; and leave 'in sooth

And such protest of pepper-gingerbread To velvet-guards and Sunday-citizens. Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be redbreast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will. [Exit.

Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer; you are as slow

As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go. By this our book is drawn; we'll but seal, And then to horse immediately. Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

Scene II. London. The palace.

Enter the King, the Prince of Wales, and Lords.

King. Lords, give us leave; the Prince of Wales and I Must have some private conference; but be near at hand,

For we shall presently have need of you.

For some displeasing service I have done. 5 That, in his secret doom, out of my blood He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me:

But thou dost in thy passages of life Make me believe that thou art only mark'd For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven

To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else, Could such inordinate and low desires, Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts.

Such barren pleasures, rude society, As thou art match'd withal and grafted to, Accompany the greatness of thy blood And hold their level with the princely heart?

Prince. So please your Majesty, I would I could

Quit all offences with as clear excuse, As well as I am doubtless I can purge Myself of many I am charg'd withai; Yet such extenuation let me beg, As, in reproof of many tales devis'd, Which oft the ear of greatness needs must

By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmongers, I may, for some things true, wherein my youth

Hath faulty wand'red and irregular, Find pardon on my true submission. King. God pardon thee! Yet let me wonder, Harry At thy affections, which do hold a wing 30 Quite from the flight of all thy anc stors. Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost, Which by thy younger brother is supplied, And art almost an alien to the hearts Of all the court and princes of my blood. 35 The hope and expectation of thy time Is ruin'd, and the soul of every man Prophetically do forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been, So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men, 40 So stale and cheap to vulgar company, Opinion, that did help me to the crown, Had still kept loyal to possession And left me in reputeless banishment A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.

By being seldom seen, I could not stir But, like a comet, I was wond'red at ; That men would tell their children 'This is he '; would sav 'Where, which Others Bolingbroké?'

And then I stole all courtesy from heaven, And dress'd myself in such humility That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts, Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths.

[Exeunt Lords. Even in the presence of the crowned King.

Thus did I keep my person fresh and new. Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops 55 My presence, like a robe pentifical, Ne'er seen but wond'red at, and so my state. Seldom but sumptuous, show'd like a least And wor by rareness such sclemnity. With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits, Soon kindled and soon burnt: carded his state.

Mingled his royalty with cap'ring fools; Had his great name profaned with their scorns,

And gave his countenance, against his name,

To laugh at gibing boys and stand the push Of every beardless vain comparative; Grew a companion to the common streets, Enfeoff'd himself to popularity; That, being daily swallowed by men's eves. They surfeited with honey and began

To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little

More than a little is by much too much. So, when he had occasion to be seen, He was but as the cuckoo is in June, Heard, not regarded, seen, but with such eyes

As, sick and blunted with community, Afford no extraordinary gaze, Such as is bent on sun-like majesty When it shines seldom in admiring eyes; 80 But rather drowz'd and hung their eyelids down.

Slept in his face, and rend'red such aspect As cloudy men use to their adversaries, Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.

And in that very line, Harry, standest thou; For thou hast lost thy princely privilege With vile participation. Not an eye But is aweary of thy common sight,

Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more ;

Which now doth that I would not have Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

Prince. I shall hereafter, my thricegracious lord,

Be more myself.

Kine. For all the world As thou art to this hour was Richard then When I from France set foot at Ravenspurgh;

And even as I was then is Percy now. Now, by my sceptre and my soul to boot. He hath more worthy interest to the state Than thou the shadow of succession; For of no right, nor colour like to right, 100 He doth fill fields with harness in the realm: Turns head against the lion's armed jaws; And, being no more in debt to years than thou.

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

How now, good Blunt! Thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the business that I come to speak of.

Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word That Douglas and the English rebels met The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury. A mighty and a fearful head they are, 167 If promises be kept on every hand,

As ever off'red foul play in a state.

King. The Earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day.

With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster; For this advertisement is five days old. On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward;

On Thursday we ourselves will march. Our meeting

Is Bridgenorth. And, Harry, you shall march Through Gloucestershire; by which account,

Our business valued, some twelve days hence

Our general forces at Bridgenorth shall meet.

Our hands are full of business. Let's away. Advantage feeds him fat while men delay. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Easicheap. The Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fall'n away vilely since this last action? Do I not bate? Do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown; I am withered like an old apple-john. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse. The of a hair was never lost in my house before.

company, hath been the spou of me. Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful you Fal. Why, there is it; come, sing me a bawdy song, make me merry. I was as victuously given as a gentleman need to be; Virtuous enough: swore little, dic'd not above seven times a week, went to a pawdyhouse not above once in a quarter-of an hour, paid money that I borrowed-three or four times, lived well, and in good compass; and now I live out of all order, out or all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that of all reasonable compass, Sir John.

Fat. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life. Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poop, but 'tis in the nose of thee; thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does you no harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's head or a memento mori: I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that lived in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy tace: my oath should be 'By this fire, that's God's angel'. But thou art altogether given over, and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern; but the sack that thou hast drunk me would have bought me lights as good cheap at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two and thirty years: God reward me for it!

Bard. 'Sblood, I would my face were in vour belly!

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burnt.

Enter Hostess.

How now, Dame Partlet the hen! Have you inquir'd yet who pick'd my pocket?

Host. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John? Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have search'd, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant. The tithe shav'd and lost many a hair, and I'll be sworn my pocket was pick'd. Go to, you are a woman, go.

Host. Who, I? No, I defy thee. God's light. I was never call'd so in mine own house before.

Fa: Go to. I know you well enough. Host. No. Sir John, you do not know me, Sir John. I know you. Sir John: you owe me money. Sir John: and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fàl. Dowlas, filthy dowlas! I have given them away to bakers' wives; they have made bolters of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it; let him pay.

Host. He? Alas, he is poor; he hath

Fal. How! poor? Look upon his face: what call you rich? Let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a younker of me? Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn but I shall have my pocket pick'd? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's worth torty mark.

Host. O Jesu, I have heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper!

Fal. How! the Prince is a Jack, a sneak-'Sblood, an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog if he would say so. 66

Enter the PRINCE marching, with Peto; and Falstaff meets him, playing upon his truscheon like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad! Is the wind in that door, i' faith? Must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion. Host. My lord, I pray you hear me. What say'st thou, Prince. Quickly? How doth thy husband? I love him well; he is an honest man.

Hest. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Prithee, let her alone, and list to me. Prince. What say'st thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras and had my pocket pick'd; this house is turn'd bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

Prince. What didst thou lose, Jack? 100 Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? Three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

Prince. A trifle, some eight-penny matter. Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your Grace say so; and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-

Fal. Ye lie, hostess: Baidolph was mouth'd man as he is, and said he would cudgel you.

Prince. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood, in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, Maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go. 115
Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing! Why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it; I am an honest man's wife; and setting knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host, Say, what beast, thou knave, thou? Fal. What beast! Why, an ofter. Prince. An otter, Sir John! Why an otter?

Fal. Why, she's neither fish nor flesh: a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so: thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave, thou!

Prince. Thou say'st true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day you ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! A million. Thy love is worth a million: thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he call'd you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea, if he said my ring was copper. Prince. I say 'tis copper. Darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare; but as thou art prince, I fear thee as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp. Prince. And why not as the lion?

Fal. The King himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? Nay, an I do, I pray God my girdle break.

Prince. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine-it is all fill'd up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, emboss'd rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, memorandums of baway-licuses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-commy to make thee long-windedin thy pocket were enrich'd with any other injuries of timese, I am a vulam. And yet you will stand to it, you will not pocket-up wrong. Att thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? Thou knowest in the state of innocency Adam fell: and what should poor Jack Falstaff do in the days of villainy? Thou seest I have more tiesh than another man, and therefore more rrailty. You confess, then, you pick'd my pockét?

Prince. It appears so by the story. Fal. Hostess, I torgive thee. Go make ready breakfast, love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests. shalt find me tractable to any nonest reason. Thou seest I am pacified still. Nay, prithee, oe gone. [Exit Hostess] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad, how is that answered? 175

Prince. O, my sweet beer, I must still be good angel to thee: the money is paid back again.

Fal. O. I do not like that paying back: 'tis a double labour. 170

Prince. I am good friends with my father, and may do anytining.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwasn'd hands too.

Bard. Do, my loid. 164 Prince. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would it had been of hoise. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O for a fine thief, of the age of two and twenty or thereabouts! I am hemously unprovided. Well, God be tnanked for these repels they offend none but the virtuous; I laud thein, I praise them.

Prince. Bardoiph!

Bard. My lora?

Prince. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster,

To my brother John: this to my Lord of Westmoreland. [Exit Burdotph. Go, Peto, to horse, to horse; for thou and I Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner-[Exit Peto. tıme.

Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple Hall

At two o'clock in the afternoon: There shalt thou know thy charge, and there receive Money and order for their furniture. The land is burning; Percy stands on high;

And either we or they must lower lie. [Exit.

Fal. Rare words! brave world! Hostess, my breakfast, come! 204 O. I could wish this tavern were my drum! Exit.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. The relel camp near Shrewsbury. Enter Hotspur, Worcester, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot. If speaking truth

In this fine age were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Douglas have As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world.

By God, I cannot tratter; I do defy

The tongues of soothers, but a braver place

In my heart's love hath no man than yourself.

Nay, task me to my word; approve me. lord. Doug. Thou art the king of honour:

No man so potent breathes upon the ground But I will beard him.

Hor. Do so, and 'tis well,

Enter a Messenger with letters.

What letters hast thou there ?- I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your tather.

Hot. Letters from nim! Why comes he not himself? Mess. He cannot come, my lord, he is grievous sick. Hot. Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick In such a justling time? Who leads his power? Under whose government come they along? Mess. His letters bears his mind, not I, my lord. Wor. I prithee tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth;

And at the time of my departure thence He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Wor. I would the state or time had first been whole

Ere he by sickness had been visited: His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now! droop now! This sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise: Tis catching hither, even to our camp. 30 He writes me here that inward sickness-And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet

To lay so dangerous and dear a trust On any soul remov'd, but on his own. Yet doth he give us bold advertisement That with our small conjunction we should

To see how fortune is dispos'd to us; For, as he writes, there is no qualling now. Because the King is certainly possess'd 40 Of all our purposes. What say you to it? Wor. Your father's sickness is a maim to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd Is marching hitherwards; with him Prince off.

And yet, in faith, it is not. His present want Seems more than we shall find it. Were it good

To set the exact wealth of all our states All at one cast? To set so rich a main On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour? It were not good; for therein should we read

The very bottom and the soul of hope. The very list, the very utmost bound Of all our fortunes.

Faith, and so we should: Where now remains a sweet reversion. We may boldly spend upon the hope of what Is to come in.

A comfort of retirement lives in this. Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto, If that the devil and mischance look big Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Wor. But yet I would your father had

The quality and hair of our attempt Brooks no division. It will be thought By some, that know not why he is away, That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence; And think how such an apprehension May turn the tide of fearful faction And breed a kind of question in our cause; For well you know we of the off'ring side Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement, 70 And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence

The eye of reason may pry in upon us. This absence of your father's draws a curtain

That shows the ignorant a kind of fear Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far. 75 I rather of his absence make this use: It lends a lustre and more great opinion, A larger dare to our great enterprise, Than if the earl were here; for men must

If we, without his help, can make a head 80 To push against a kingdom, with his help We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down. Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.

Doug. As heart can think; there is not such a word Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear. 85 Enter SIR RICHARD VERNON.

Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.

Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord. The Earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,

John. Hot. No harm; what more?

Ver. And further, I have learn'd The King himself in person is set forth, Or hitherwards intended speedily, With strong and mighty preparation.

Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his son,

The nimble-footed madcap Prince of Wales. And his comrades that daff'd the world aside And bid it pass?

All furnish'd, all in arms: Ver. All plum'd like estradges, that with the wind Bated like eagles having lately bath'd: Glittering in golden coats, like images; 100 As full of spirit as the month of May And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer: Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.

I saw young Harry with his beaver on, His cushes on his thighs, gallantly arm'd, Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury,

And vaulted with such ease into his seat As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus, And witch the world with noble horsemanship. Hot. No more, no more; worse than the sun in March,

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come.

They come like sacrifices in their trim, And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war All hot and bleeding will we offer them. 115 The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh And yet not ours. Come, let me tas.e my horse.

Who is to bear me like a thunderbolt 120 Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales. Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse, Meet, and ne'er part till one drop down a corse. O that Glendower were come!

Ver. There is more news. I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along, 125 He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.

Hot. What may the King's whole battle the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as reach unto?

Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be: 130 My father and Glendower being both away, The powers of us may serve so great a day. Come, let us take a muster speedily. Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear

Of death or death's hand for this one haif year. [Exeunt.

Scene II. A public road near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack. Our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton Co'fil' to-night

Bard. Will you give me money, Captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all; I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at town's end.

Bard. I will, Captain; farewell. [Exit. Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a sous'd gurnet. I have misused the King's press damnably. I have got, in exhange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been ask'd twice on the banns; such a commodity of warm slaves as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl or a hurt wild-duck. I press'd me none but such toasts-and-butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies—slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the Glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as indeed were never soldiers, but discarded unjust servingmen, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers trade-fall'n; the cankers of a calm world and a long ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old-fac'd ancient. And such have I, to fill up the rooms of them as have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered Prodigals lately come from swinekeeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets and press'd the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat. Nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gives on; for indeed I had the most of them out of prison. There's not a shirt and a half in all my company; and the half shirt is two napkins tack'd together and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stol'n from my host at Saint Albans, or the red-nose innkeeper of Daventry. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter the PRINCE OF WALES and WESTMORELAND.

Prince. How now, blown Jack! how now, quilt!

Fal. What, Hal! how now, mad wag! What a devil dost thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy; I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The King, I can tell you, looks for us all; we must away all night.

Fal. Tut, never fear me; I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

Prince. I think, to steal cream indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

Prince. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss; food for powder, feed for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare—too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, I am sure they never learn'd that of me.

Prince. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers in the ribs bare. But, sirrah, make haste; Percy is already in the field.

[Exit. Fal. What, is the King encamp'd?

West. He is, Sir John: I fear we shall stay too long. [Exit.

Fal. Well, 76
To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast

Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest. [Exit.

Scene III. The rebel camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Douglas, and Vernon.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.
Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him, then, advantage, Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful. Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd, stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

You do not counsel well; You speak it out of fear and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas; by my

And I dare well maintain it with my life, If well-respected honour bid me on, I hold as little counsel with weak fear As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives:

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle Which of us fears.

Doug.

Yea, or to-night. Content.

Ver. Hot. To-night, say 1.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be. wonder much.

Being men of such great leading as you a.e.

That you foresee not what impediments Drag back our expedition: certain norse Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up: Your uncle Worcester's horse came but today :

And now their pride and mettle is asleep, Their courage with hard labour tame and dull.

That not a horse is half the half of himself. Hot. So are the horses of the enemy In general, journey-bated and brought low; The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the King exceedeth

For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in. [The trumpet sounds a parley.

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King.

If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect. Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and would to God

You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well; and even those some

Envy your great deservings and good name, Because you are not of our quality, But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,

So long as out of limit and true rule You stand against anointed majesty! But, to my charge. The King hath sent to know

The nature of your griefs; and whereupon And in the neck of that, task'd the whole You conjure from the breast of civil peace 506

Such bold hostility, teaching his queous land

Audacious cruelty. If that the King Have any way your good deserts to got. Which he couresseth to be manifold,

He bids you mame your griefs, and with all speed

You shall have your desires with interest, And pardon absolute for yourself and these Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hot. The King is kind: and well we know the King

Knows at what time to promise, when to pav.

My father and my uncle and myself

Did give him that same royalty he wears: And when he was not six and twenty strong,

Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low.

A poor ummuded outlaw sheaking home, My father gave him welcome to the shore: And when he heard him swear and yow to

He came but to be Duke or Lancaster. To sue his livery and beg his peace. With tears of nunceatry and terms of zeal, My father, in kind neart and pity mov'd, Swore min assistance, and perform'd it too. Now when the loads and barons of the realm Perceiv'd Northumperland did lean to him. The more and less came in with cap and knee : Met him in boroughs, cities, vulages; Attended him on budges, stood in lanes, Laid gifts before him, profter'd him their oaths.

Gave him their heirs as pages, followed

Even at the heels in golden multitudes. He presently—as greatness knows itself-Steps me a little higher than his vow Made to my father, while his blood was poor, Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh; And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees

That lie too heavy on the commonwealth: Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep Over his country's wrongs; and by this face,

This seeming brow of justice, did he win The hearts of all that he did angle for: Proceeded further: cut me off the heads 85 Of all the favourites that the absent King In deputation left behind him here, When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this. Hot. Then to the point. In short time after, he depos'd the King;

Soon after that depriv'd him of his life; state:

To make that worse, suff'red his kinsman March-

Who is, if every owner wer, well plac'd, Indeed his king—to be enged'd in Wales, 95 There without ransom to lie forfeited: Disgrac'd me in my happy victories; Sought to entrap me by intelligence; Rated mine uncle from the council-board; In rage dismiss'd my father from the court: Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong:

And in conclusion drove us to seek out This head of safety, and withal to pry Into his title, the which we find Too indirect for long continuance. 105

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the King?

Hot. Not so, Sir Walter; we'll withdraw awhile.

Go to the King; and let there be impawn'd Some surety for a safe return again. And in the morning early shall mine uncle Bring him our purposes. And so, farewell.

and love.

Hot. And may be so we shall. Blunt.

Pray God you do. Exeunt.

SCENE IV. York. The Archbishop's balace. Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, and SIR MICHAEL.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael; bear this sealed brief

With winged haste to the Lord Marshal: This to my cousin Scroop; and all the rest To whom they are directed. If you knew How much they do import, you would make haste.

Sir M. My good lord,

I guess their tenour.

Like enough you do. Arch. To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men Must bide the touch; for, sir, at Shrewsbury,

As I am truly given to understand. The King with mighty and quick-raised power

Meets with Lord Harry; and I fear, Sir Michael,

What with the sickness of Northumberland. Whose power was in the first proportion, 15 And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence,

Who with them was a rated sinew too And comes not in, o'errul'd by prophecies, I fear the power of Percy is too weak

To wage an instant trial with the King. 20 Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not

There is Douglas and Lord Mortimer. Arch. No. Mortimer is not there.

Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord Harry Percy, And there is my Lord of Worcester, and a

Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is; but yet the King hath drawn

The special head of all the land together: The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,

The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt:

And many moe corrivals and dear men Of estimation and command in aims.

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear :

And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed: For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the King

Dismiss his power, he means to visit us-For he hath heard of our confederacy-Blunt. I would you would accept of grace And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against him:

Therefore make haste. I must go write again

To other friends; and so farewell. Sir Michael. Exeunt severally.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. The King's camp near Shrewsbury. Enter the King, the Prince of Wales, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, SIR WALTER Blunt, and Sir John Falstaff.

King. How bloodily the sun begins to peer

The southern wind Doth play the trumpet to his purposes, And by his hollow whistling in the leaves 5 Foretells a tempest and a blust'ring day.

King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,

For nothing can seem foul to those that win. [The trumpet sounds.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

How now, my Lord of Worcester! 'Tis not well

That you and I should meet upon such terms

As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,

And made us doff our easy robes of peace To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel; This is not well, my lord, this is not well. What say you to it? Will you again unknit This churlish knot of all-abhorred war, 16 And move in that obedient orb again Where you did give a fair and natural light,

And be no more an exhal'd meteor, A prodigy of fear, and a portent 20 Of broached mischief to the unborn times? Wor. Hear me, my liege :

For mine own part, I could be well content To entertain the lag-end of my life With quiet hours; for I protest

I have not sought the day of this dislike. King. You have not sought it!

comes it then? Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he Prince. Peace, chewet, peace!

Wor. It pleas'd your Majesty to turn your looks Of favour from myself and all our house; And yet I must remember you, my lord, We were the first and dearest of your friends. For you my staff of office did I break In Richard's time, and posted day and night

To meet you on the way and kiss your hand, When yet you were in place and in account Nothing so strong and fortunate as I. It was myself, my brother, and his son, That brought you home, and boldly did outdare

The dangers of the time. You swore to us-And you did swear that oath at Doncaster-That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state, Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right.

The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster; To this we swore our aid. But in short space

It rain'd down fortune show'ring on your head:

And such a flood of greatness fell on you, What with our help, what with the absent

King, What with the injuries of a wanton time, 50 The seeming sufferances that you had borne, And the contrarious winds that held the King So long in his unlucky Irish wars That all in England did repute him dead; And from this swarm of fair advantages 55 You took occasion to be quickly woo'd To gripe the general sway into your hand; Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster; And being fed by us you us'd us so As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird, 60 Useth the sparrow-did oppress our nest, Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk That even our love durst not come near your sight For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing

We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly 65 Out of your sight, and raise this present

Whereby we stand opposed by such means For, on their answer, will we set on them; 508

As you yourself have torg'd against yourself.

By unkind usage, dangerous countenance. And violation of all faith and troth Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

King. These things, indeed, you have articulate,

Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,

To face the garment of rebellion With some fine colour that may please the

Of fickle changelings and poor discontents, Which gape and rub the elbow at the news

Of hurlyburly innovation; And never yet did insurrection want Such water-colours to impaint his cause, 80 Nor moody beggars, starving for a time Of pellmell havoc and confusion.

Prince. In both your armies there is many a soul

Shall pay full dearly for this encounter. If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew The Prince of Wales doth join with all the world

In praise of Henry Percy. By my hopes, This present enterprise set off his head. I do not think a braver gentleman. More active-valiant or more valiant-young. More daring or more bold, is now alive 91 To grace this latter age with noble deeds. For my part, I may speak it to my shame. I have a truant been to chivalry; And so I hear he doth account me too. 05 Yet this before my father's majesty-I am content that he shall take the odds

Of his great name and estimation, And will, to save the blood on either side.

Try fortune with him in a single fight. 100 King. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee.

Albeit considerations infinite Do make against it. No, good Worcester, no. We love our people well; even those we love

That are misled upon your cousin's part: And will they take the offer of our grace, Both he and they and you, yea, every man Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his. So tell your cousin, and bring me word 100 What he will do. But if he will not yield, Rebuke and dread correction wait on us. And they shall do their office. So, be gone; We will not now be troubled with reply. We offer fair; take it advisedly.

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon. Prince. It will not be accepted, on my

The Douglas and the Hotspur both together Are confident against the world in arms.

King. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge;

And God befriend us, as our cause is just! [Exeunt all but the Prince and Falstaff.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

Prince. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would 'twere bed-time. Hal, and all well.

Prince. Why, thou owest God a death.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet; I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no maiter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how it honour prick me off when I come on? How then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? No. What is henour? A word. What is in that word? Honour. What is that honour? Air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. 'Tis insensible, then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will Therefore I'll none of it. not suffer it. Honour is a mere scutcheon. And so ends my catechism. Exit. 140

Scene II. The rebel camp.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard,

The liberal and kind offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone. It is not possible, it cannot be, 4 The King should keep his word in loving us; He will suspect us still, and find a time To punish this offence in other faults; Supposition all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes.

For treason is but trusted like the fox, Who, never so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,

Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.
Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks,
And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd still the nearer death.
My nephew's trespass may be well forgot;
It hath the excuse of youth and heat of blood,

And an adopted name of privilege— He made a blushing cital of himself, 62 A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a And chid his truant youth with such a spleen. grace

All his offences live upon my head 20 And on his father's: we did train him on; And, his corruption being ta'en from us, We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.

Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know, In any case, the offer of the King. 25 Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say 'tis so. Here comes your cousin.

Enter Hotspur and Douglas.

Hot. My uncle is return'd:
Deliver up my Lord of Westmoreland.

Uncle, what news?

Wor. The King will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the Lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the King.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid! Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus.

By now forswearing that he is forsworn. 39 He calls us rebels, traitors, and will scourge With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter Douglas.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen, to arms! for I have thrown

A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth— And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear it—

Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the King, And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O, would the quarrel lay upon our heads;
And that no man might draw short breath

to-day

But I and Harry Monmouth! Tell me. tell me, 50 How show'd his tasking? Seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my soul, I never in my life Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly, Un'ess a brother should a brother dare To gentle exercise and proof of arms. 55 He gave you all the duties of a man; Trimm'd up your praises with a princely tongue;

Spoke your deservings like a chronicle;
Making you ever better than his praise,
By still dispraising praise valued with you;
And, which became him like a prince indeed,
He made a blushing cital of himself,
And chid his truant youth with such a

As if he mast'red there a double spirit, Of teaching and of learning instantly. There did he pause; but let me tell the worldIf he outlive the envy of this day, England did never owe so sweet a hope, So much misconstrued in his wantonness. Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamoured

On his follies. Never did I hear Of any prince so wild a liberty.

But be he as he will, yet once ere night I will embrace him with a soldier's arm, That he shall shrink under my courtesy. 75 Arm, arm with speed! and, fellows, soldiers, friends,

Better consider what you have to do Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,

Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you. 80 Hot. I cannot read them now. O gentlemen, the time of life is short! To spend that shortness basely were too long,

If life did ride upon a dial's point, Still ending at the arrival of an hour. An if we live, we live to tread on kings; If die, brave death, when princes die with us I

Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair. When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the King comes on apace.

Hot. I thank him that he cuts me from my tale,

For I profess not talking; only this— Let each man do his best. And here draw I A sword, whose temper I intend to stain With the best blood that I can meet withal In the adventure of this perilous day. Now, Esperance! Percy! and set on. Sound all the lofty instruments of war, And by that music let us all embrace; For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall A second time do such a courtesy. [They embrace. The trumpets sound.

Scene III. A plain between the camps.

Exeunt.

The King passes across with his power. Alarum to the battle. Then enter Douglas and SIR WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in battle

Thou crossest me? What honour dost thou seek

Upon my head?

Doug. Know, then, my name is Douglas; And I do haunt thee in the battle thus Because some tell me that thou art a king. Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The Lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought

Thy likeness: for instead of thee, King Harry,

This sword hath ended him. So shall it thee,

Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner, Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;

And thou shalt find a king that will revenge Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight. Douglas kills Blunt.

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. O Louglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,

I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. Doug. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the King.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here. Hot. This, Douglas? No: I know this face full well:

A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt; Semblably furnish'd like the King himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul whither it goes! A borrowed title hast thou bought too dear:

Why didst thou tell me that thou west a Hot. The King hath many marching in his coats. Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;

I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece, Until I meet the King. Up, and away!

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day.

Alarum. Enter FALSTAFF, solus.

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here: here's no scoring but upon the pate. Soft! who are you? Sir Walter Blunt. There's honour for you! Here's no vanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too. God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. I have led my ragamuffins where they are pepper'd; there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive, and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter the PRINCE OF WALES.

Prince. What, stand'st thou idle here? Lend me thy sword. Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies. Whose deaths are yet unreveng'd. prithee lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal, I prithee give me leave to breathe awhile. Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

Prince. He is, indeed, and living to kill thee. I prittee lend me thy sword.

Fel. Nav, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, then get'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

Prince. Give it me. What, is it in the Fol. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot; there's that will sack a city. [The Prince draws it out, and finds it to be a bottle of sack.

Prince. What, is it a time to jest and dally now? [He throus the bottle at him. Exit. Fal. Well, if Percy be alive. I'll pierce him If he do come in my way, so; if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a carbonado of me. I like not such grunning honour as Sir Walter hath. Give me life, which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. [Exit.

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the King, the Prince of Wales, Prince John of Lancaster, and Westmorlland.

King. I prithee,

Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleedest too much;

Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him. P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

Prince. I beseech your Majesty, make up,

Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

King, I will do 60.

My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.

West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

Prince. Lead me, my lord? I do not ned your help;

And God forbid a shallow scratch should drive

The Prince of Wales from such a field as this.

Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on, And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

P. John. We breathe too long. Come, cousin Westmereland, 15 Our duty this way lies; for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt Prince John and Westmoreland.
Prince. By God, thou hast deceiv'd me,

Lancaster!
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit;
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John,

But now I do respect thee as my soul. 20 King. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point

With lustier maintenance than I did look for Of such an ungrown warrior.

Prince. O, this boy Lends mettle to us all! [Exit.

Enter Douglas.

Poug. Another king! They grow like Hydra's heads. 25
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those

That wear those colours on them. What art

That counterfeit'st the person of a king?
King. The King himself, who, Douglas, grieves at heart

So many of his shadows thou hast met, 30 And not the very King. I have two boys Seek Percy and thyself about the field; But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily, I will assay thee; so, defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit; 35

And yet, in faith, thou bearest thee like a king;
But mine I am sure thou art, who'er thou be, And thus I win thee.

[They fight, the King being in danger.

Re-enter the PRINCE.

Prince. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like Never to hold it up again. The spirits 40 Of valuant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms;

It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee, Who never promiseth but he means to ray. [They fight; Douglas flies.

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your Grace? Sir Nicholas Gawsey I ath for succour sent, And so hath Clifton. I'll to Clifton straight. King. Stay, and breathe awhile.

Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion; And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my

In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prince. O God, they did me too much injury

That ever said I heark'ned for your death! If it were so, I might have let alone

The insulting hand of Douglas over you,
Which would have been as speedy in your end

As all the poisonous potions in the world, And sav'd the treacherous labour of your King. Make up to Clifton, I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit.

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prince. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.
Prince. Why, then I see
A very valiant rebel of the name.

I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy, To share with me in glory any more. Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere.

Nor can one England brook a double reign Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales. Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is

To end the one of us; and would to God Thy name in arms were now as great as mine:

Prince. I'll make it greater ere I part from thee.

And all the budding honours on thy crest I'll crop to make a garland for my head. Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. They fight

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal! Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Re-enter Douglas; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead; Douglas withdraws. Hotspur is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my youth!

I better brook the loss of brittle life Than those proud titles thou hast won of me:

They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh:

But thoughts, the slaves of life, and life, time's fool,

And time, that takes survey of all the world, Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy, But that the earthy and cold hand of death Lies on inv tongue. No, Percy, thou art dust

And food for-[Dies. Prince. For worms, brave Percy. Faie thee well, great heart!

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou Or is it fantasy that plays upon our eyeshrunk! When that this body did contain a spirit,

A kingdom for it was too small a bound; 90 But now two paces of the vilest earth Is room enough. This earth that bears thee dead

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman. If thou wert sensible of courtesy, I should not make so dear a show of zeal; But let my favours hide thy mangled face, And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself For doing these fair rites of tenderness. Adleu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven! Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave, But not rememb'red in thy epitaph! IOI

[He speth Falstaff on the ground. What, old acquaintance! Could not all this

Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell! I could have better spar'd a better man.

If I were much in love with vanity! Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day. Though many dearer, in this bloody fray, Embowell'd will I see thee by and by; Till then in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.

Fal. [Rising up] Embowell'd! embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me and eat me too to-morrow. 'Sblood, 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and Counterfeit? I he, I am no lot too. counterfeit: to die is to be a counterfeit: for he is but the counterfeit of a man who hath not the life of a man; but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect The better part of image of life indeed. valour is discretion; in the which better part I have saved my life. Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead; how it he should counterfeit too, and rise? By my faith, I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I kill'd him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing contutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me. Therefore, sirrah [stabbing himl, with a new wound in your thigh. come you along with me.

[He takes up Hotspur on his back.

Re-enter the PRINCE OF WALES and PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER.

Prince. Come, brother John, full bravely hast thou flesh'd

Thy maiden sword. P. Jolin. But, soft! whom have we here? Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

Prince. I did; I saw him dead,

Breathless and bleeding on the ground. Art thou alive?

sight?

I prithee speak; we will not trust our eyes Without our ears: thou art not what thou

Fal. No, that's certain: I am not a double man; but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy [throwing the body down]; if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke. I can assure you.

Prince. Why, Percy I kill'd myself, and aw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou? Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying! I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he: but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believ'd, so; if not, let them that should eward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave O, I should have a heavy miss of thee, 103 him this wound in the thigh; if the man were alive, and would deny it, zounds, I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. John. This is the strangest tale that ever I heard.

Prince. This is the strangest fellow. brother John.

Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back.

For my part, if a lie may do thee grace, I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have. A retreat is sounded.

The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.

Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field.

To see what friends are living, who are dead. [Exeunt the Prince and Prince John of Lancaster.

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do. [Exit.

Scene V. Another part of the field.

The Trumbets sound. Enter the KING, the PRINCE OF WALES, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, with Wor-CESTER and VERNON prisoners.

King. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke. Ill-spirited Worcester! did not we send grace.

Pardon and terms of love to all of you? And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary? Misuse the tenour of thy kinsman's trust? Three knights upon our party slain to-day, A noble earl, and many a creature else, Had been alive this hour.

If like a Christian thou hadst truly borne Betwixt our armies true intelligence

Wor. What I have done my safety urg'd me to:

And I embrace this fortune patiently, Since not to be avoided it falls on me. King. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:

Other offenders we will pause upon. [Exeunt Worcester and Vernon guarded. How goes the field?

Prince. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw

The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,

The noble Percy slain, and all his men Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest: 20 And falling from a hill, he was so bruis'd That the pursuers took him. At my tent The Douglas is; and I beseech your Grace I may dispose of him.

King. With all my heart. Prince. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you This honourable bounty shall belong: Go to the Douglas, and deliver him Up to his pleasure, ransomiess and free; His valours shown upon our crests to-day Have taught us how to cherish such high deeds

Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

P. John. I thank your Grace for this high courtesy.

Which I shall give away immediately. King. Then this remains—that we divide our power.

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland. Towards York shall bend you with your dearest speed To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop,

Who, as we hear, are busily in arms. Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales

To fight with Glendower and the Earl of March.

Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway, Meeting the check of such another day; And since this business so fair is done, Let us not leave tall all our own be won. [Exeunt.

I, from the orient to the drooping west, Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold The acts commenced on this ball of earth. 5 Upon my tongues continual slanders ride, The which in every language I pronounce, Stuffing the ears of men with false reports. Even with the rebels' blood. But what I speak of peace while covert enmity, Under the smile of safety, wounds the To speak so true at first? My office is world:

And who but Rumour, who but only I, Make fearful musters and prepar'd defence, Whiles the big year, swoln with some other grief.

Is thought with child by the stern tyrant

And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe 15 And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,

Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures, And of so easy and so plain a stop That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,

The still-discordant wav'ring multitude, Can play upon it. But what need I thus 20 My well-known body to anatomize The vent of hearing when loud Rumour Among my household? Why is Rumour here?

I run before King Harry's victory. Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury, Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops. Quenching the flame of bold rebellion mea. I

To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell Under the wrath of coble Hotspur's sword. And that the King before the Douglas' rage Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death This have I rumour'd through the peasant

ACT ONE

Scene I. Warkworth. Before Northumberland's castle.

Enter LORD BARDOLPH.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho?

The Porter opens the gate.

Where is the Earl? Port. What shall I say you are?

L. Bard. Tell thou the Earl That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him

Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard.

Please it 'our honour knock but at the gate.

And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

I., Bard. Here comes the Earl. [Exit Porter.

North. What news, Lord Bardolph? Every minute now

Should be the father of some stratagem. The times are wild; contention, like a horse

Full of high feeding, madly hath broke Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion loose

And bears down all before him.

Noble Earl. L. Bard. I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury. North. Good, an God will!

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish. The King is almost wounded to the death; And, in the fortune of my lord your son, 15 Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince John,

And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the

And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir John.

Is prisoner to your son. O, such a day. 20 So fought, so followed, and so fairly won.

Came not till now to dignify the times, Since Cæsar's fortunes!

How is this deriv'd? North. Saw you the field? Shrewsbury?

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence:

That freely rend'red me these news for true.

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Here comes my servant Travers. whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way;

And he is furnish'd with no certainties More than he haply may retail from me.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings comes with you?

Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfreyile turn'd me back

With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd.

Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard

A gentleman, almost forspent with speed, That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.

He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. He told me that rebellion had bad luck, 41 And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.

With that he gave his able horse the head And, bending forward, struck his armed heels

Against the panting sides of his poor jade Up to the rowel-head; and starting so, 46 He seem'd in running to devour the way, Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! Again: Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold? Had met ill luck?

My lord, I'll tell you what: L. Bard. If my young lord your son have not the day, Upon mine honour, for a silken point I'll give my barony. Never talk of it.

North. Why should that gentleman that rode by Travers

Give then such instances of loss? L. Bard. Who-he? He was some hilding fellow that had stol'n The horse he rode on and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf,

Foretells the nature of a tragic volume. So looks the strand whereon the imperious flood

Came you from Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord:

mask

To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in the cheek

Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, 70 So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night And would have told him half his Troy was burnt:

But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue, And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st

This thou wouldst say: 'Your son did thus and thus;

Your brother thus; so fought the noble Douglas '-

Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds;

But in the end, to stop my ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, Ending with 'Brother, son, and all, are dead '.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, vet:

But for my lord your son-

Tell thou an earl his divination lies, And I will take it as a sweet disgrace And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid;

Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead.

I see a strange confession in thine eye: Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin

To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so: The tongue offends not that reports his death:

And he doth sin that doth belie the dead. Not he which says the dead is not alive. Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100 Hath but a losing office, and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Rememb'red tolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe 105 That which I would to God I had not seen:

Where hateful death put on his ugliest But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state.

Rend'ring faint quittance, wearied and outbreath'd.

To Harry Monmouth, whose swift wrath beat down

The never-daunted Percy to the earth, 110 From whence with life he never more sprung up.

In few, his death-whose spirit lent a fire Even to the dullest peasant in his camp-Being bruited once, took fire and heat away

From the best-temper'd courage in his troops:

For from his metal was his party steeled: Which once in him abated, all the test Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy their fear That arrows fled not swifter toward their Worcester Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot.

The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword

Yet Had three times slain th' appearance of the King.

Gan vail his stomach and did grace the shame

Of those that turn'd their backs, and in his flight,

Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all Is that the King hath won, and hath sent out

A speedy power to encounter you, my lord, Under the conduct of young Lancaster And Westmoreland. This is the news at full. North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn.

In poison there is physic; and these news. Having been well, that would have made me sick,

Being sick, have in some measure made me well:

And as the wretch whose fever-weak'ned joints,

Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life. Impatient of his fit breaks like a fire

Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weak'ned with grief, being now enrag'd with grief.

Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch! A scaly gauntlet now with joints of steel

Must glove this hand; and hence, thou sickly co.t!

Thou art a guaid too wanton for the head Which plinces, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.

Now bind my brows with iron; approach The tagged'st hour that time and spite date bring To frown upon th' enrag'd Northumberland!

Let heaven kiss earth! Nature's hand

Keep the wild flood confin'd! Let order die!

And let this world no longer be a stage 155 To feed contention in a ling'ring act; But let one spirit of the first-born Cain Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being

On bloody courses, the rude scene may end And darkness be the burier of the dead! 110 L. Bard. This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord. mind;

Mor. Sweet Earl, divorce not wisdom And doth enlarge his ising with the blood from your honour.

The lives of all your loving complices Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er

To stormy passion, must perforce decay. 165 You cast th' event of war, my noble lord, And summ'd the account of chance before vou said Let us make head'. It was your presurmise

That in the dole of blows your son might drop.

You knew he walk'd o'er perils on an edge,

More likely to fall in than to get o'er; You were advis'd his flesh was capable Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit

Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd;

Yet did you say 'Go forth': and none of this. Though strongly apprehended, could restrain The stiff-borne action. What hath then befall'n.

Or what hath this bold enterprise brought

More than that being which was like to be? L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this

Knew that we ventured on such dangerous

That if we wrought out life 'twas ten to one;

And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd; And since we are o'erset, venture again. 185 put thee into my service for any other

Mor. 'Tis more than time. And, my most noble loid,

I hear for certain, and dare speak the truth: The gentle Archbishop of York is up

With well-appointed pow'rs. He is a man Who with a double surety binds his followers.

My lord your son had only but the corpse. But shadows and the shows of men, to fight: For that same word 'rebellion' did divide The action of their bodies from their souls: Now let not And they did fight with queasiness, constram'd.

Scene II. London. A street.

Fal. Sirrah, you grant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but for the party that owed it, he might have moe diseases than he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird The brain of this foolish-comat me. pounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that intends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me. I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath everwhelm'd all her litter but one. If the Prince Come, we will all put forth, body and goods. reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never mann'd with an agate till now: but I will inset you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel—the juvenal, the Prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledge. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one off his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say his face is a face-royal. God may finish it when he will, 'tis not a hair amiss yet. He may keep it still at a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he'll be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he's almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dommelton about the satin for my short cloak and my slops?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph. He would not take his band and yours; he liked not the security.

Fal. Let him be damn'd, like the Glutton; pray God his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel! A rascal-yea-forsooth knave, to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security! The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is through with them in honest taking-up, then they must stand upon security. I had as hef they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I look'd 'a should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it; and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lanthorn to light him. Where's Bardolph?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield. An I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were mann'd, hers'd, and wiv'd.

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and Servant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the Prince for striking him about Bardelph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Ch. Justice. What's he that goes there? Serv. Falstaff, an't please your lordship. Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robb'ry?

Serv. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster, Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Serv. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder; my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow: I must speak with him.

Serv. Sir John !

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging! Is there not wais? Is there not employment? Doth not the King lack subjects? Do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Serv. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? Setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Serv. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside; and give me leave to tell you you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou et'st any leave of me, hang me; if thou tak'st leave, thou wert better be hang'd. You hunt counter. Hence! Avaunt! *5

Serv. Sir, my lord would speak with you. Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad. I heard say your lordship was sick; I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his Majesty is return'd with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his Majesty. You would not come when I sent for you. 100 Fal. And I hear, moreover, his Highness 1s fall'n into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, God mend him! I pray you let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy, as I take it, is a kind of lethargy, an't please your fordship, a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? Be it as it is.

Fal. It hath it original from much grief, disease, for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well. Rather an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your phys-

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient. Your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advis'd by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles himself in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender and your waste is great. Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. 135

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful

Prince.

Fal. The young Prince hath misled me. I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-al'd wound. Your day's service at heal'd wound. Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill. You may thank th' unquiet time for your quiet o'erposting that action.

Fal. My lord-

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What I you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord-all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair in your face but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy. Ch. Just. You follow the young Prince up and down, like his ill angel. X55 light; but I hope he that looks upon me it is. I were better to be eaten to death some respects, I grant, I cannot go-I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in Ch. Just. I think you are fall'n into the these costermongers' times that true valour is turn'd berod; pregnancy is made a tapster, and his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings; all the other gifts appertment to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you do measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken. your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity? And will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John! 175

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly. For my voice-I have lost it with hallooing and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not. The truth is, I am only To approve my youth old in judgement and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box of the ear that the Prince gave you-he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have check'd him for it; and the young lion repents-marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, God send the Prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him. 190 Ch. Just. Well, the King hath sever'd you. I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the Archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my Lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily. If it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but a bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever; but it was alway yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If ye will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my Fal. Not so, my lord. Your ill angel is name were not so terrible to the enemy as with a rust than to be scoured to nothin: with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest and God bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me : thousand pound to furnish me forth? 21 Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well. Commend me to my cousin Westmore-[Exeunt Chief Justice and Servant. land.

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness than 'a can part young limbs and lechery; but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my curses Boy!

Fal. What money is in my purse? Page. Seven groats and two pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse; borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster; this to the Prince; this to the Earl of Westmoreland: and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceiv'd the first white hair of my chin. About it; you know where to find me. [Exit Page] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything. I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.

Scene III. York. The Archbishop's palace.

Enter the Archbishop, Thomas Mowbray the Earl Marshal, LORD HASTINGS and LORD BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes-And first, Lord Marshal, what say you to it? Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our

L. Bard. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus: 15 Whether our present five and twenty thousand

May hold up head without Northumberland?

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bard. Yea, marry, there's the point: But if without him we be thought too feeble,

My judgment is we should not step too

Till we had his assistance by the hand: For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this, Conjecture, expectation, and surmise

Of aids incertain, should not be admitted. Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for ındeed

It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury. L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope.

And so, with great imagination Proper to madmen, led his powers to death, And, winking, leapt into destruction.

L. Bard. What, is the King but five and Past and to come seems best; things present, worst.

Moub. Shall we go draw our numbers. and set on?

Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone.

ACT TWO

Scene I. London. A street.

Enter Hostess with two officers, FANG and SNARE.

Host. Master Fang, have you ent'red the action?

Fang. It is ent'red.

Hast. If he should do so, Host. Where's your yeoman? He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and lusty yeoman? Will 'a stand to't?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare? Host. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare. Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John

Host. Yea, good Master Snare; I have

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our Host. Alas the day! take heed of him; 85 he stabb'd me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In good faith, 'a cares not what mischief he does, if his weapon be out; he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. 17

Fang. It I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither; I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him once; an 'a Host. I am undone by his going: I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score. Good Master Fang, hold him Good Master Snare, let him not 'A comes continuantly to Piescape. corner-saving your manhoods-to buy a saddle; and he is indited to dinner to the Lubber's Head in Lumbert Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman. I pray you, since my exion is ent'red, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; They that, when Richard liv'd, would have and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubb'd off, and fubb'd off, and fubb'd off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Page, and Bardolph.

Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmseynose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead?

What's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, variets! Draw, Bardolph Cut me off the villain's head. Throw the quean in the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardly rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honeysuckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the King's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed; a man-queller and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two. Thou wot, wot thou! thou wot, wot ta? Do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Page. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe. 58

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and his Men.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? Keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me. beseech you, stand to me.

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what, are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time, and business?

You should have been well on your wav to

York.

Stand from him, fellow; wherefore hang'st thou upon him?

Host. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your Grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit. Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all—all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his. But I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee a nights like the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up. Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! What man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Ane you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man. thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the Prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor-thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? Coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar, telling us she had a good dish of prawns, whereby thou didst desire to eat some. whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people, saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath. Deny it, if thou caust.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul, and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and, the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration. You have, as it appears to me, practis'd upon the easy yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person. 112

Host. Yea, in truth, my lord. Ch. Just. Pray thee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her; the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness; if a man will make curtsy and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty rememb'red, I will not be your suitor. I say to you I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the King's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong; but answer in th' effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither hostess.

Enter Gower.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, what news?

Gow. The King, my lord, and Harry long, being you are to take soldiers up in Prince of Wales Are near at hand. The rest the paper tells.

[Gives a letter.

Fal. As I am a gentleman!

Host. Faith, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman! Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking, and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting, in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangers and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou Come, an 'twere not for thy humours, there's not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw the action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to Host. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles; i' faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me, la!

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift.

You'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?

Fal. Will I live ? [To Bardolph] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on. Host. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her. [Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, and Officers. Ch. Just. I have heard better news. Fal. What's the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the King to-night? Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well. What is the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back? Gow. No: fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse, Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster. Against Northumberland and the Archbishop.

Fal. Comes the King back from Wales. my noble lord?

presently.

Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here, I thank you, good Sir John. Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too 130 counties as you go. Fal. Will you sup with me. Master

Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord: tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Just. Now, the Lord lighten thee! Thou art a great fool. [Exeunt.

Scene II. London. Another street.

Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is't come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attach'd one of so high blood.

Prince. Faith, it does me; though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But indeed these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know thy face to-morrow, or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast -viz., these, and those that were thy peach-colour'd ones-or to bear the inventory of thy shirts-as, one for superfluity, and another for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of hnen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland. And God knows whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say the children are not in the fault: whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened 26

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is? Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith; and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell. Prince. Marry, I tell thee it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee—as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend- I could be sad and sad indeed too.

Poms. Very hardly upon such a subject. Princ2. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstail for obduracy and persistency: let the end try the man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou ait hath in reason taken from me all estentation of sorrow. Poins. The reason?

Prince. What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks. Never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than Every man would think me an thine. hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lead and so much engraffed to Falstaff.

Prince. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on; I can hear it with mine own ears. worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper tellow of my hands; and those two things, I consess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

Frince And the boy that I gave Falstaff. 'A had him from me Christian; and look if the fat villain have not transform'd him ape.

Bard. God save your Grace!

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph! Poins. Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? Wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-atarms are you become! Is't such a matter to get a pot-le-pot's maidenhead?

Page. A calls me e'en now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his tace from the window. At last I spied his eyes: and methought he had made two holes in the alewife's new petticoat, and so peep'd through.

Prince. Has not the boy profited? Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away! Page. Away, you rascally Althæa's dream, away! Prince. Instruct us, boy; what dream,

Page. Marry, my lord, Althæa dreamt she was delivered of a fire-brand; and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince. A crown's worth of good interpretation. There 'tis, boy. [Giving a crown. Poins. O that this blossem could be kept from cankers! Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hang'd among you, the gallows shall have wrong. Prince. And how doth thy master.

Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town. There's a letter for you.

Poins, Deliver'd with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him. Though that be sick, it dies not.

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes. 104

Poins. [Reads] ' John Falstaff, knight '— Every man must know that as oft as he has occasion to name himself, even like those that are kin to the King; for they never prick their finger but they say 'There's some of the King's blood spilt'. 'How comes that?' says he that takes upon him not to The answer is as ready as a conceive. borrower's cap: 'I am the King's poor cousin, sir'.

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But the letter: [Reads] 'Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the King nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting'.

Poins. Why, this is a certificate. Prince. Peace! [Reads] 'I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity.'-

Poins. He sure means brevity in breath. short-winded.

Prince. [Reads] 'I commend me to thee. I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayst, and so farewell.

Thine, by yea and no-which is as much as to say as thou usest Falstaff him-JACK my familiars, John with my brothers and sisters, and Sir John with all Europe.'

Poins. My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty o. his words. But do you use me thus,

Ned? Must I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune: But I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master 87 here in London?

Bard. Yea, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? Doth the old boar feed in the old trank? I 10

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

Prince. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord, of the old

Prince. Sup any women with him? Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet. Prince. What pagan may that be?

kinswoman of my master's.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your master that I am yet come to town. There's for your silence.

Bird. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it. Prince. Fare you well; go. [Exeunt Bar lolph and Page] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Albans and London.

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colouis, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jerking and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

Prince. From a god to a bull? A heavy descension! It was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? A low transformation! That shall be mine; for in everything the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. (Exeunt Scene III. Warkworth. Before the castle. Enter Northumberland, Lady North-UMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs; Put not you on the visage of the times And be, like them, to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more.

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn:

Scene IV. London. The Boar's Head Tavern in Eastcheat.

Enter Francis and another Drawer.

Francis. What the devil hast thou brought there-apple-johns? Thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john.

2 Draw. Mass, thou say'st true. Prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights'. It ang'red him to the heart; but he hath forgot that.

Francis. Why, then, cover and set them down; and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music.

Enter third Drawer.

3 Draw. Dispatch! The room where they supp'd is too hot; they'll come in straight.

Francis. Sirrah, here will be the Prince and Master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it. Bardolph hath brought word.

3 Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis; it will be an excellent stratagem. 20 2 Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak. Exeunt second and third Drawers.

Enter Hostess and Doll Tearsheet.

Host. I'faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality. Your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour. I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, la! But, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say 'What's this?' Haw do you now?

Doll. Better than I was—hem. Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo, here comes Sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. [Singing] 'When Arthur first in court '-Empty the jordan. [Ext Francis]
-[Singing] 'And was a worthy king'-How now, Mistress Doll!

Host. Sick of a calm; yea, good faith. Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Doll. A pox damn you, you muddy rascal! Is that all the comfort you give me? Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll.

Doll. I make them! Gluttony and diseases make them: I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases. Doll. We catch of you, Doll, we catch of you: grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Doll. Yea, joy, our chai s and our iewels.

Fal. 'Your brooches, pearls, and ouches.' For to serve bravely is to come halting off: you know, to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely: to venture upon the charg'd chambers bravely-

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion: you two never meet but you tall to some discord. You are both, i' good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you. You are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear such There's a whole a huge full hogshead? merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuff'd in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack. Thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter FRANCIS.

Francis. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below and would speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal! Let him not come hither; it is the foulmouth'dst rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here. No, by my faith! I must live among my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers. I am n good name and fame with the very best. hut the door. There comes no swaggerers ere; I have not liv'd all this while to have swaggering now. Shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess? Host. Pray ye, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? It is mine ancient.

Host, Tilly-fally, Sir John, ne'er tell me: and your ancient swagg'rer comes not in you go off here. Discharge yourself of our my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the debuty, t' other day; and, as he said to me-'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last, 'i good faith !-- ' Neighbour Quickly,' says he-Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then—' Neighbour Quickly,' says he 'receive those that are civil, for' said he 'you are in an ill name.' Now 'a said so. I can tell whereupon. 'For' says he 'vou are an honest woman and well thought on, therefore take heed what guests you receive. Receive' says he 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here. You would bless you to hear what he said. No. I'll no swagg'rers.

Fal. He's no swagg'rer, hostess; a tame cheater, i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound. He'll not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call [Exit Francis.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth. I am the worse when one says 'swagger'. Peel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Doll. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do 1? Yea, in very truth, do I, an I cannot abide 'twere an aspen leaf. swagg'rers.

Enter PISTOL. BARDOLPH. and PAGE.

Pist. God save you, Sir John! Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack; do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall not hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets. I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to vou, Mistress Dorothy; I will charge you.

Doll. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy. 119 Doll. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir? God's light, with two points on your shoulder? Much! 125 murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol; I would not have company, Pistol.

Host. No. good Captain Pistol; not here.

sweet captain.

Doll. Captain! Thou abominable damn'd cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earn'd them. You a captain! you slave, for what? For tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? He a captain! hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stew'd prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word as odious as the word occupy'; which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted. Therefore captains had need look to't.

Bard. Pray thee go down, good ancient. Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I! I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph, I could tear her ; I'll be reveng'd of her.

Pist. I'll see her damn'd first; to Pluto's damn'd lake, by this hand, to th' infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down, faitors! Have we not Hiren Host. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; 'tis very late, i' faith; I beseek you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall packhorses,

And hollo" pamper'd jades of Asia. Which cannot go but thirty mile a day, Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals.

And Troiant Greeks? Nay, retier damn them with King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar.

Shall we fall foul for toys? Host. By my troth, Captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient; this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! Give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here? 165 Host. O' my word, Captain, there's none such here. What the good-year i do you think I would deny her? For God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then feed and be fat, my fair Calipolis.

Come, give's some sack. 170 Si fortune me tormente sperato me contento.

Fear we broadsides? No, let the fiend give fire.

Pist. God let me not live but I will Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Laying down his sword.

Come we to full points here, and are my knee, Doll. A rascal biagging slave! etceteras nothings?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

375 Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neaf. What! we have seen the seven stars.

Doll. For God's sake thrust him down stairs; I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! Know we not Galloway nags?

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling. Nay, an 'a do nothing but speak nothing, 'a shall be nothing here. Bard. Come, get you down stairs. 185

What! shall we have incision? Shall we imbrue?

Snatching up his sword. Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why, then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping

1"ounds Untwine the Sisters Three! Come,

Atropos, I say! Host. Here's goodly stuff toward! IQO

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy. Doll. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs.

[Drawing and driving Pistol out. Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll torswear keeping house afore I'll be in these tirrits and frights. So: murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons. 197 [Exeunt Pistol a, A Bardolph.

Doll. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the Ah, you who eson little rascal's gone. valiant villain, vou!

Host. Are you not huit i' th' groin? Methought 'a made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turn'd him out a doors Bard. Yea, sir. The rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' th' shoulder, Fal. A rascal! to brave me! Doll. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come let me wipe thy face. Come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith. I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector o Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ter times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Doll. Do, an thou dar'st for thy heart An thou dost, I'll canvass thee between pair of sheets.

Enter Musicians.

The rogue fled from me like quicksilver. 219

Doll, I'faith, and thou follow'dst him like Thou whoreson little tidy sartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting a days and forning a nights. and begin to patch up thine old body for leaven?

Enter, behind, PRINCE HENRY and POINS disguised as drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! Do not speak like death's-head; do not bid me remember une end.

Doll. Sirrah, what humour 's the Prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow. 'A vould have made a good pantler; 'a would ia' chipp'd bread well.

Doll. They say Poins has a good wit. 229 Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon! His wit's as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there's no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Doll. Why does the Prince love him so, hen?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a signess, and 'a plays at quoits well, and eats conger and tennel, and drinks off andles' ends for flap-dragons, and rides he wild mare with the boys, and jumps uron join'd-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth. like unto the sign of the Leg, and biceds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties 'a has, hat show a weak mind and an able body. for the which the Prince admits him. For the Prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois.

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poms. Let's beat him before his whore. Prince. Look whe'er the wither'd elder hath not his poli claw'd like a parrot. 249

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance? Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! What says th' almanac to that? 254

Poins. And look whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses. Doll. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Doll. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of?

I shall receive money a Thursday. Shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song come. 'A grows late; we'll to bed. Thou't 267 forget me when I am gone.

Doll. By my troth, thou't set me a-weeping, an thou say'st so. Prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken a' th' end.

Ful. Some sack. Francis.

Prince. Anon, anon, sir. [Advancin.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the King's? And art thou not Poins his brothei?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead!

Fal. A better than thou. I am a gentleman: thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir, and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy Grace! By my troth, welcome to London. Now the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light fleth and corrupt blood, thou art welcome.

[Leaning his hand upon Doll. Doll. How, you fat fool! I scorn you. Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Host. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill. You knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no abuse.

Prince. Not—to dispraise me, and call me pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what!

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, i' th' world; honest Ned, none. I disprais'd him before the wicked-that the wicked might not fall in love with thee; in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject; and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none; no, faith, boys, none.

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us?

Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poins. Answei, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath prick'd down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy-there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too.

Prince. For the women?

Fal. For one of them-she's in hell already, and burns poor souls. For th' other -I owe her money; and whether she be damn'd for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Host. All vict'lers do so. What's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, gentlewoman -

Poll. What says your Grace?

Fal. His Grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking within. Host. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to th' door there, Francis.

Enter PETO.

Prince. Peto, how now! What news? Pet. The King your father is at Westminster:

And there are twenty weak and wearied posts

Come from the north; and as I came along

I met and overtook a dozen captains, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns.

asking every one for Sir John Talstaff. Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame

So idly to profane the precious time,

When tempest of commotion, like the south,

Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt

And drop upon our bare unarmed heads. Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night.

[Exeunt Prince, Poins, Peto, and Bardouph. Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpick'd. [Knocking within] More knocking at the door! 350

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! What's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently;

A dozen captains stay at door for you. 359 Fal. [To the Page] Pay the musicians, sirrah.-Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after; the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is call'd on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere Doll. I cannot speak. If my heart be not ready to burst! Well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Excunt Falstaff and Bardolph. Host. Well, fare thee well. I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascodtime; but an honester and truer-hearted man-well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within] Mistress Tearsheet!

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Host. O. run Doll, run, run, good Doll. Come. [To Bardolph] She comes blubber'd. Yea, will you come. Doll? [Exeunt.

Ineasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

Many good morrows to your Majesty!

King. Is it good morrow, lords? War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

King. Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords.

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege.

King. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom

How foul it is; what rank diseases grow. And with what danger, near the heart of it. War. It is but as a body yet distempered: Which to his former strength may be restored

With good advice and little medicine. My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

King. O God! that one might read the book of fate,

And see the revolution of the times Make mountains level, and the continent, Weary of solid firmness, melt itself Into the sea; and other times to see The beachy girdle of the ocean Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,

And changes fill the cup of alteration With divers liquors! O, if this were seen, The happiest youth, viewing his progress through.

> Scene II. Glou estershire. Before Justice Shallow's house.

> Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting; MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE. Bullcalf, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on; give me your hand, sir; give me your hand, sir An early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow. 4 Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black ousel, cousin Shallow! Shal. By yea and no, sir. I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar; he is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost. Shal. 'A must, then, to the Inns o' Court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow

Sil. You were call'd 'lusty Shallow' then,

Shal. By the mass, I was call'd anything: Such things become the hatch and broad of and I would have done anything indeed time; and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotsole man-you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the Inns o' Court again. And I may say to you we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I see him break Scoggin's head at the court gate, when 'a was a crack not thus high; and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu, Jesu, the mad days that have spent! and to see how many of my Id acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin. Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure. Death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. By my troth, I was not there. Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir. Shal. Jesu, Jesu, dead! 'A drew a good ow; and dead! 'A shot a fine shoot.

53I

John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted men, have you provided me here half a much money on his head. Dead! 'A would have clapp'd i' th' clout at twelve score, and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be-a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Enter Bardolph and One with him.

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Shal. Good morrow, honest gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Justice

Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir, a poor esquire of this county, and one of the King's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff—a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir; I knew him a good backsword man. How doth the good knight? May I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal, It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. 'Better accommodated '! It is good; yea, indeed, is it. Good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. 'Accommodated'! It comes of accommodo. Very good; a good phrase.

Baid. Pardon, sir; I have heard the word. 'Phrase' call you it? By this day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated: that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is being-whereby 'a may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my vioth, you like well and bear your years very well. Welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surecard, as I think?

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot reather. Gentle-dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit? Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you. 95 Shal. Where's the roll? Where's the roll? Where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so—so, so—yea, mariy, sir. Rafe Mouldy! Let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an't please you. Shal. What think you, Sir John? A good limb'd fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, an't please you. Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert us'd. Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! Things that are mouldy lack use. singular good! In faith, well said, Sir John: very well said.

Fal. Prick him. Moul. I was prick'd well enough before, an you could have let me alone. My old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery. You need not to have prick'd me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy; you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside; know you where you are? For th' other, Sir John-let me see. Simon Shadow! 121

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under. He's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow? Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir. Fal. Thy mother's son! Like enough: and thy father's shadow. So the son of the female is the shadow of the male. often so indeed; but much of the father's substance! Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer. Prick him; for we have a number of shadows fill up the muster-book.

335

Shal. Thomas Wart! Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir. Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart. Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins. Prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! You can do it, sir; I commend you well. you can do it. Francis Feeble! 146

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou. Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir. Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

150 Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor, he'd ha' prick'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat? 154

Fee. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well aid, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor-well, Master Shallow, deep, Master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir. Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor. that thou mightst mend him and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands. Let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' th' green! Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.

Bull. Here, sir.

170 Fal. Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain-Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art prick'd?

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir, a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the King's affairs upon his coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown. We will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more call'd than your number. You must have but four here, sir; and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O. Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's Field?

Fal. No more of that, Master Shallow, no more of that.

Shal. Ha, 'twas a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive? Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me. Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to th' heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork, by old Nightwork. before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago.

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen ! Ha, Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was 'Hem, boys!' Come, let's to dinner'; come, let's to dinner. Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come. [Exeunt Falstaff and the Justices.

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend; and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as hef be hang'd, sir, as go. And yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather because I am unwilling and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends; else, sir, I did not care for mine own part so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And. good Master Corporal Captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend. She has nobody to do anything about her when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind. An't be my destiny, so: an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's Prince; and, let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; th'art a good fellow. Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter FALSTAFF and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have? Shal. Four of which you please. Bard. Sir, a word with you. I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have? Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shall. Marry, then-Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service; and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it. I will none of you. 246

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong. They are your likeliest men, and I would have you serv'd with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, 201 the thews, the stature, bulk, and big Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit,

Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see forlorn that his dimensions to any thick what a ragged appearance it is. 'A shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-fac'd fellow. Shadow-give me this man. He presents no mark to the enemy: the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreathow swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Eardolph. 263

Bard. Hold, Wart. Traverse—thus, thus thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So -very well. Go to; very good; exceeding good. O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopt, bald shot. Well said, i' faith, Wart; th'art a good scab. Hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mileend Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn-I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show there was a little quiver fellow, and 'a would manage you his piece thus; and 'a would about and about, and come you in and come you in. 'Rah, tah, tan!' would 'a say; 'Bounce!' would 'a say; and away again would 'a go, and again would 'a come. I shall ne'er see such a fellow. 278

Shallow, God keep you! Master Silence, I will not use many words with you: Fare you well! Gentlemen both, I thank you. I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you; God prosper your affairs; God send us peace! At your return, visit our house: let our old acquaintance be renewed. Peradventure I will with ye to the court.

Fal. Fore God, would you would. Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word.

God keep you. Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. [Exeunt Justices] On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt all but Falstaff] As I return, I will fetch off these justices. I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord. Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same stary'd justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring. When 'a was naked, he was for all the world like a fork'd radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife. 'A was so And dash themselves to pieces.

sight were invisible. 'A was the very yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores call'd him man-drake. 'A came ever in the rearward of the fashion, and sung those tunes to the overscutch'd huswifes that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn 'a ne'er saw him but once in the Tiltyard; and then he burst his head for crowding among the maishal's men. I saw it, and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name: for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a tieble hautboy was a mansion for him. a court-and now has he land and beeves. Well, I'll be acquainted with him if I return; and't shall go hard but I'll make him a philosopher's two stones to me. the young dace be a bast for the old pike. I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. Yorkshire. Within the Forest of Gaultree.

Fal. These fellows will do well. Master Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, HASTINGS, and Others.

> Arch. What is this forest call'd? Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an't shall please your Grace. Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth

To know the numbers of our enemies. Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done. My friends and brethren in these great affairs,

I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd New-dated letters from Northumberland: Their cold intent, tenour, and substance, thus:

Here doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality, The which he could not levy; whereupon

He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes, To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers

That your attempts may overlive the hazard

Enter WestmoreLand.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think it is my Lord of West moreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,

The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland in peace.

What doth concern your coming.

West. Then, my lord, Unto your Grace do I in chief address 37 The substance of my speech. If that rebellion

Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,
And countenanc'd by boys and beggaryI say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords,
Had not been here to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection

40
With your fair honours. You, Lord Archbishop,

Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd,
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd,

Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd,

Whose white investments figure innocence, The dove, and very blessed spirit of peace— Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace,

Into the harsh and boist'rous tongue of war;

Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood, 50
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine

To a loud trumpet and a point of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this? So the question stands.

Briefly to this end: we are all diseas'd And with our surfeiting and wanton hours Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, 50 And we must bleed for it; of which disease Our late King, Richard, being infected, But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland, I take not on me here as a physician; to Nor do I as an enemy to peace

Troop in the throngs of military men;
But rather show awhile like fearful war
To diet rank minds sick of happiness,
And purge th' obstructions which begin to stop

Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.

I have in equal balance justly weigh'd What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,

And find our griefs heavier than our offences.

We see which way the stream of time doth run 70

And are enforc'd from our most quiet there By the rough torrent of occasion; And have the summary of all our griefs, When time shall serve, to show in articles; Which long ere this we offer'd to the King, And might by no suit gain our audience: When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our griefs,

We are denied access unto his person, Even by those men that most have done us wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly gone, so Whose memory is written on the earth With yet appearing blood, and the examples

Of every minute's instance, present now, Hath put us in these ill-beseeming arms; Not to break peace, or any branch of it, 85 But to establish here a peace indeed, Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied:

Wherein have you been galled by the King; What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you

That you should seal this lawless bloody book

Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,
And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?
Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,

To brother born an household cruelty, 99. I make my quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redress;

Or if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us

That feel the bruises of the days before, 100 And suffer the condition of these times To lay a heavy and unequal hand Upon our honours?

West. O my good Lord Mowbray, Construe the times to their necessities, And you shall say, indeed, it is the time, 105 And not the King, that doth you injuries. Yet, for your part, it not appears to me, E-thei from the King or in the present time, That you should have an inch of any ground To build a grief on. Were you not restor'd To all the Duke of Norfolk's signiories. Your noble and right well-rememb'red father's?

Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father lost

That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me? The King that lov'd him, as the state stood then.

Was force perforce compell'd to banish him, And then that Henry Bolingbroke and he, Being mounted and both roused in their seats.

Their neighing coursers daring of the spur, Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down,

Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,

And the loud trumpet blowing them together-

Then, then, when there was nothing could have stav'd

My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, O, when the King did throw his warder down-

His own life hung upon the staff he threw-Then threw he down himself, and all their

But if your father had been victor there, He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry; 135 For all the country, in a general voice, Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers and love

Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on, And bless'd and grac'd indeed more than the King.

But this is mere digression from my purpose.

Here come I from our princely general To know your griefs; to tell you from his Grace

That he will give you audience; and wherein

It shall appear that your demands are just, You shall enjoy them, everything set off 145 That might so much as think you enemies. Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer;

And it proceeds from policy, not love. West. Mowbray, you overween to take

This offer comes from mercy, not from fear; For, lo! within a ken our army lies-Upon mine honour, all too confident

To give admittance to a thought of fear. Our battle is more full of names than yours. Our men more perfect in the use of arms, 155 Our aimour all as strong, our cause the best;

Then reason will our hearts should be as good.

Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd. Moub. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your oftence:

A rotten case abides no handling. Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission.

In very ample virtue of his father, To hear and absolutely to determine Of what conditions we shall stand upon ?-

West. That is intended in the general's name.

I muse you make so slight a question. Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,

For this contains our general grievances. Each several article herein redress'd. 170 All members of our cause, both here and hence,

That are insinewed to this action. Acquitted by a true substantial form, And present execution of our wills To us and to our purposes confin'd-We come within our awful banks again. And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet: Who knows on whom fortune would then And either end in peace —which God so frame !-

> Or to the place of diff'rence call the swords Which must decide it. Arch.

My lord, we will do so. Exit Westmoreland. Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand. Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace Upon such large terms and so absolute

As our conditions shall consist upon, Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall be

That every light and false-derived cause, Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason, hall to the King taste of this action; That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love, We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff.

And good from bad find no partition. Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this: the King is weary

Of dainty and such picking grievances;

For he hath found to end one doubt by That man that sits within a monarch's

Revives two greater in the heirs of life; 200 And therefore will be wipe his tables lean. And keep no tell-tale to his memory That may repeat and history his loss knows He cannot so precisely weed this land 205 As his misdoubts present occasion: His foes are so enrooted with his friends That, plucking to unfix an enemy, He doth unfasten so and shake a friend. So that this land, like an offensive wife 210 That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes, As he is striking, holds his infant up, And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm

That was uprear'd to execution. Hast. Besides, the King hath wasted all his rods

On late offenders, that he now doth lack The very instruments of chastisement; So that his power, like to a fangless lion, May offer, but not hold.

'Tis very true; Àrch. And therefore be assur'd, my good Lord Marshal.

If we do now make our atonement well, Our peace will, like a broken limb united, Grow stronger for the breaking. Be it so.

Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

How far forth you do like their articles. P. John. I like them all and do allow them well;

And swear here, by the honour of my blood. My father's purposes have been mistook; And some about him have too lavishly Wrested his meaning and authority. My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd:

Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you. Discharge your powers unto their several counties.

As we will ours: and here, between the armies.

Let's drink together friendly and embrace, That all their eyes may bear those tokens

Of our restored love and amity. Arch. I take your princely word for these rediessés.

Arch. I do not doubt you. West. I am glad of it. Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray. Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season.

But heaviness foreruns the good event.

victory. Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest:

For then both parties nobly are subdu'd, 90 And neither party loser.

P. John. Go, my lord. And let our army be discharged too.

Exit Westmoreland. And, good my lord, so please you let our trains

P. John. I trust, lords, we shall he tonight together.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand. Will not go off until they hear you speak. P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Go, Captain, and deliver to the Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses

Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith? P. John. I pawn'd thee none: I promis'd you redress of these same grievances

Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,

I will perform with a most Christian care. But for you, rebels-look to taste the due Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours. Most shallowly did you these arms com-

Colville shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place—a place deep enough; so shall you be still Colville of the Dale.

Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaff? Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine; and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe. My womb, my womb, my womb undoes me. Here comes our general.

When everything is ended, then you come. These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,

One time or other break some gallows' back. Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? Have I, in my poor and old motion. the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have found'red nine score and odd posts; and here, travel tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colville of the Dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? He saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nos'd fellow of Rome-I came, saw, and overcame.

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not. Here he is, and here I vield him; and I beseech your Grace, let it be book'd with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Colville kissing my foot; to the which course if I be enforc'd, if you do not all show like gilt twopences to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of

P. John. Now, have you left pursuit? 20 West. Retreat is made, and execution stay'd.

P. John. Send Colville, with his confederates,

To York, to present execution.

lords. I hear the King my father is sore sick. Our news shall go before us to his Majesty. Which, cousin, you shall bear to comfort him:

And we with sober speed will follow you. 79 Fal. My lord. I beseech you, give me leave to go through Gloucestershire; and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff. I, in my condition, Shall better speak of you than you deserve. Exeunt all but Falstaff.

Fal. I would you had but the wit; 'twere better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh-but that's no marvel; he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards-which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a twofold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which delivered o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is the warming of the blood; which before, cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice; but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extremes. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puff'd up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage-and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and till'd, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first humane principle I would teach them should be to forswear thin potations, and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph!

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire, and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, Esquire. I have him already temp'ring between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away.

[Exeunt.

Scene IV. Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter the King, Prince Thomas of Clarence, Prince Humphrey of Gloucester, Warwick, and Others.

King. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors, We will our youth lead on to higher fields, And draw no swords but what are sanctified. Our navy is address'd, our power collected, Our substitutes in absence well invested, 6 And everything lies level to our wish. Only we want a little personal strength;

Only we want a little personal strength; And pause us till these rebels, now afoot, Come underneath the yoke of government. War. Both which we doubt not but your Majesty Shall soon enjoy. King. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester, Where is the Prince your brother?

P. Humph. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

P. Humph. I do not know, my lord. King. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

P. Humph. No, my good lord, he is in presence here.

Cla. What would my lord and father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the Prince thy brother? 20

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas.

Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers; cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect
Of mediation, after I am dead,
Between his greatness and thy other biethien.

Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love, Nor lose the good advantage of his grace By seeming cold or careless of his will; For he is gracious if he be observ'd.

He hath a tear for pity and a hand Open as day for melting charity;

Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he is flint;

As humorous as winter, and as sudden As flaws congealed in the spring of day. 35 His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd.

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently, When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth:

But, being moody, give him line and scope Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,

A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion—
45
As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As a conitum or rash gunpowder.

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas? 50

Cla. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied? Canst thou tell that?

Cla. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence? Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness Prince. How now! Rain within doors and none abroad!

How doth the King?

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

Prince. Heard he the good news yet? Tell it him.

Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE.

Cla. Doth the King call?

War. What would your Majesty? How fares your Grace? 50 King. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Cla. We left the Prince my brother here, my liege,

Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales! Where is he?

Let me see him.

He is not here.

War. This door is open; he is gone this

P. Humph. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

King. Where is the crown? Who took it from my pillow?

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

King. The Prince hath ta'en it hence.
Go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose My sleep my death?

Find him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him hither. [Exit Warwick. This part of his conjoins with my disease

And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are!

How quickly nature falls into revolt When gold becomes her object! For this the foolish over-careful fathers Have broke their sleep with thoughts,

Their brains with care, their bones with industry; 70 For this they have engrossed and pil'd up.

The cank'red heaps of strange-achieved gold;

For this they have been thoughtful to invest Their sons with arts and martial exercises; When, like the bee, tolling from every flower

The virtuous sweets,

Our thighs with wax, our mouths with honey pack'd,

We bring it to the hive, and, like the bees, Are murd'red for our pains. This bitter taste Yields his engrossments to the ending Pluck down my officers, break my decrees; father.

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now where is he that will not stay so long Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me? War. My lord, I found the Prince in the next room,

Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks, With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,

That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife

With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY.

Lo where he comes. Come hither to me, Harry. 90

Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.
[Exeunt all but the King and the Prince. I never thought to hear you speak again.

King. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought.

I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.

Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair That thou wilt needs invest the with my honours

Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth! Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee.

Stay but a little, for my cloud of dignity Is held from falling with so weak a wind That it will quickly drop; my day is dm. Thou hast stol'n that which, after some few hours,

Were thine without offence; and at my death

Thou hast seal'd up my expectation.
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not.

And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.

Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,

Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart.

To stab at half an hour of my life.

What, canst thou not forbear me half an hour?

Then get thee gone, and dig my grave thyself;

And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear That thou art crowned, not that 1 am dead. Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse

Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head; xx5 Only compound me with forgotten dust; Give that which gave thee life unto the worms. Pluck down my officers, break my decrees; For now a time is come to mock at form—Harry the Fifth is crown'd. Up, vanity: 126
Down, royal state. All you sage counsellors, hence.

And to the English court assemble now, From every region, apes of idleness.

Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum.

Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance, 12:

Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit The oldest sins the newest kind of ways? Be happy, he will trouble you no more. England shall double gild his treble guilt; England shall give him office, honour,

England shall give him office, honour,
might;

For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks

The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog

Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent.

O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!

When that my care could not withhold thy riots.

What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?

O, thou wilt be a wilderness again.

Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

Prince. O, pardon me, my liege! But for my tears,

The moist impediments unto my speech, 140 I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard

The course of it so far. There is your crown,

And He that wears the crown immortally Long guard it yours! [Kneeling] If I affect it more

Than as your honour and as your renown, Let me no more from this obedience rise Which my most inward true and duteous spirit

Teacheth this prostrate and exterior bending!

God witness with me, when I here came in And found no course of breath within your Majesty.

How cold it struck my heart! If I do feign, O, let me in my present wildness die,

And never live to show th' incredulous world

The noble change that I have purposed! 155 Coming to look on you, thinking you dead—

And dead almost, mv liege, to think you were—

I spake unto this crown as having sense, And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending Hath fed upon the body of my father; 160 Therefore thou best of gold art worst of gold.

Other, less fine in carat, is more precious, Preserving life in med'cine potable;

renown'd.

roval hege.

Accusing it, I put it on my head, To try with it-as with an enemy

That had before my face murd'red my father-

The guarrel of a true inheritor.

But if it did infect my blood with joy, 170 Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;

If any rebel or vain spirit of mine Did with the least affection of a welcome Give entertainment to the might of it, Let God for ever keep it from my head, 175 And make me as the poorest vassal is, That doth with awe and terror kneel to it! King. O my son,

God put it in thy mind to take it hence, That thou mightst win the more thy father's love,

Pleading so wisely in excuse of it! Come hither, Harry; sit thou by my bed, And hear, I think, the very latest counsel That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my

By what by-paths and indirect crook'd wavs I met this crown: and I myself know well How troublesome it sat upon my head: To thee it shall descend with better quiet, Better opinion, better confirmation; For all the soil of the achievement goes With me into the earth. It seem'd in me But as an honour snatch'd with boist'rous hand:

And I had many living to upbraid My gain of it by their assistances; Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,

Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears

Thou seest with peril I have answered; For all my reign hath been but as a scene Acting that argument. And now my death Changes the mood; for what in me was purchas'd Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort; So thou the garland wear'st successively. Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,

Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green:

And all my friends, which thou must make thy friends,

Have but their stings and teetli newly ta'en out:

By whose fell working I was first advanc'd, And by whose power I well might lodge a

To be again displac'd; which to avoid, I cut them off; and had a purpose now 210 To lead out many to the Holy Land,

But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most Lest rest and lying still might make them look

Hast eat thy bearer up'. Thus, my most Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,

Be it thy course to busy giddy minds With foreign quarrels, that action, hence borne out. May waste the memory of the former days. More would I, but my lungs are wasted so That strength of speech is utterly denied me.

How I came by the crown, O God, forgive: And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

Prince. My gracious liege.

You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me: Then plain and right must my possession

Which I with more than with a common pain

'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintaın.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, War-WICK, Lords, and Others.

King. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my royal father!

King. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown

From this bare wither'd trunk. Upon thy sight My worldly business makes a period.

Where is my Lord of Warwick?

My Lord of Warwick! King. Doth any name particular belong Unto the lodging where I first did swoon? War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

King. Laud be to God! Even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years, I should not die but in Jerusalem;

Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land. But bear me to that chamber; there I'll

In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Gloucestershire. Shallow's house. Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excus'd; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excus'd. Why, Davy! 6

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy; let me see, Davy; let me see, Davy; let me seeyea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus: those precepts cannot be served; and, again, sir-shall we sow the headland with wheat?

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook—are there no young pigeons? Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had; and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. 'A shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legg'd hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yea, Davy; I will use him well. A friend i' th' court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are backbitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy-about thy business, Davv.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Woncot against Clement Perkes o' th' hill.

Shal. There is many complaints, Davy, against that Visor. That Visor is an arrant kn ive, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have serv'd your worship truly, sir, this eight years; an I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech you, let him be countenanc'd.

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots. Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship. 54 Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph. [To the Page] And welcome, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John.

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit Shallow] Bardolph, look to O that the hving Harry had the temper 15 our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits' staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his. They, by observing of him, do bear themselves like foolish justices: he. by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man. Their spir ts are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master; if to his men. I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another; therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, which is four terms, or two actions; and 'a shall laugh without intervallums. O, it is much that a lie with a slight eath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up ! Shal. [Within] Sir John!

Fal. I come, Master Shallow; I come, Master Shallow. Exit.

Scene II. Westminster. The palace. Enter, severally, WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice; whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the King?

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

He's walk'd the way of nature: And to our purposes he lives no more. Ch. Just. I would his Majesty had call'd me with him.

The service that I truly did his life Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed I think the young King loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself

To welcome the condition of the time, 11 Which cannot look more hideously upon me Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter Lancaster, Clarence, Gioucester, WESTMORELAND, and Others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead

Of he, the worst of these three gentlemen ! Yet weep that Hairy's dead, and so will I. How many nobles then should hold their But Harry lives had shell convert those DUCES

That must strike sail to spirit of vile sort! By number into hours of happiness. Ch. Just. O God, I fear all will be overturn'd.

P. John. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow.

Glou. Good morrow. cousin.

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument

Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier I

P. Humph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed; And I dare swear you borrow not that face

Of seeming sorrow-it is sure your own. P. John. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation.

I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise. Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstafi fair;

Which swims against your stream of q sality.

Ch. Just. Sweet Princes, what I did, I did ia honour.

Led by th' impartial conduct of my soul; And never shall you see that I will beg A ragged and forestall'd remission. If truth and upright innocency fail me, I'll to the King my master that is dead, 40

And tell him who hath sent me after him. War. Here comes the Prince.

Enter King Henry the Fifth, attended.

your Majesty!

King. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty.

Sits not so easy on me as you think. Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear.

This is the English, not the Turkish court: Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds. But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers. For, by my faith, it very well becomes you. Sorrow so royally in you appears

That I will deeply put the fashion on, And wear it in my heart. Why, then, be sad;

But entertain no more of it, good brothers, Than a joint burden laid upon us all. For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd, I'll be your father and your brother too; Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.

teast

Brothers. We hope no otherwise from your Majesty. King. You all look strangely on me: and you most.

You are, I think, assur'd I 'ove you not. Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,

Your Majesty hath no just cause to hate me. King. No?

How might a prince of my great hopes forget

So great indignities you laid upon me? What, rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison,

Th' immediate heir of England! Was this easy ?

May this be wash'd in Lethe and forgotten? Ch. Just. I th n did use the person of your father;

The image of his power lav then in me: And in th' administration of his law. Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth. Your Highness pleased to forget my place. The majesty and power of law and justice. The image of the King whom I presented. And struck me in my very seat of judgment:

Whereon, as an offender to your father. I gave bold way to my authority

And did commit you. If the deed were ill. Be you contented, wearing now the garland, To have a son set your decrees at nought, 85 To pluck down justice from your awful bench,

To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword

That guards the peace and safety of your person;

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God save Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image,

And mock your workings in a second body. Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours;

Be now the father, and propose a son; Hear your own dignity so much profan'd, See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,

Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd; 95 And then imagine me taking your part And, in your power, soft silencing your son. After this cold considerance, sentence me; And, as you are a king, speak in your state What I have done that misbecame my place.

My person, or my liege's sovereignty. King. You are right, Justice, and you weigh this well;

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword; And I do wish your honours may increase Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live to speak my father's words:
'Happy am I that have a man so bold
That dares do justice on my proper son;
And not less happy, having such a son 110
That would deliver up his greatness so Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me:

For which I do commit into your hand Th' unstained sword that you have us'd to bear;

With this remembrance—that you use the same

With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit

As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand.

You shall be as a father to my youth;
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear;

And I will stoop and humble my intents 120
To your well-practis'd wise directions.
And, Princes all, believe me, I beseech you,
My father is gone wild into his grave,
Foi in his tomb lie my affections;
And with his spirits sadly I survive, 123
To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now. 130
Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods.

And flow henceforth in formal majesty. Now call we our high court of parliament; And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,

That the great body of our state may go In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;

That war, or peace, or both at once, may be As things acquainted and familiar to us; In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.

Our coronation done, we will accite, As I before rememb'red, all our state; And —God consigning to my good intents— No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,

God shorten Harry's happy life one day. [Exeunt.

Scene III. Gloucestershire. Shallow's orchard.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Barbolph, the Page, and Davy.

Shal. Nay, you shall see my orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of mine own graffing, with a dish of caraways, and so forth. Come, cousin Silence. And then to bed.

Fal. Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sır John—marry, good aır. Spread, Davy, spread, Davy; well sand, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband. Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John. By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper. A good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down; come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth-a—we shall ISinging.
Do nothing but eat and make good cheer,
And piase God for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there.

So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon; most sweet sir, sit. Master Page, good Master Page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink. But you must bear; the heart's all.

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and, my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. [Singing]
Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shrews, both short and tall;

'Tis merry in hall when beaids wag all; And welcome merry Shrove-tide. Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. [To Bardolph] There's a dish of leather-coats for you.

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your workship! I'll be with you straight. [To Bardolph] A cup of wine, sir? Sil. [Singing]

A cup of wine that's brisk and fine, And drink unto the leman mile;

And a merry heart lives long-a. Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' th' night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master Silence!

Sil. [Singing]

Fill the cup, and let it come,

I'll pledge you a mile to th' bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardoiph, welcome; if thou want'st anything and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. Welcome, my little I'll tiny thief and welcome indeed too. drink to Master Lardolph, and to all the cabileros about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die. Bard. An I might see you there, Davy! Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together-ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot. Shal. By God's liggens, I thank thee. The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that. 'A will not out, 'a; 'tis true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing; be merry. [One knocks at door] Look who's at door there, ho! knocks? TExit Davy.

Fal. [To Silence, who has drunk a bumber]

Why, now you have done me right. Sil. [Singing] Do me right,

And dub me knight.

Samingo.

Is't not so?
Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why then, say an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. An't plaise your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news. Fal. From the court? Let him come in.

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol?

Pist. Sir John, God save you! Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol? Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm. Sil. By'r lady, I think 'a be, but goodman Puff of Barson.

Pist. Puff!

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!

Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode to thee; And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, 94 And golden times, and happy news of price.

Fal. I pray thee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A fourtra for the world and worldlings base!

I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. [Singing] And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?

And shall good news be baffled? Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap. 105

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why, then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir. If, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways-either to utter them or conceal them. I am, sir, under the King, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian?

Speak, or die.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth-or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

A foutra for thine office! Pist. Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is King: Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the

When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like

The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What, is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door. The things I speak are just.

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse. Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day! T 25 I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What, I do bring good news?

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt-I am Fortune's steward. Get on thy boots; we'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph! [Exit Bardolph] Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and withal devise something to do thyself good. Boot. boot, Master Shallow! I know the young King is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses: the laws of England are at my commandment. Blessed are they that have been my friends; and woe to my Lord Chief Justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!

'Where is the life that late I led?' say they.

Why, here it is; welcome these pleasant days! Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. A street.

Enter Beadles, dragging in Hostess QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. No. thou arrant knave: I would to God that I might die, that I might have thee hang'd. Thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1 Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her. There hath been a man or two lately kill'd

Doll. Nut-hook, mut-hook, you lie. Come on: I'll tell thee what, thou damn'd tripevisag'd rascal an the child I now go with do miscarry, hou wert better thou hadst struck thy mother. thou paper-fac'd villain.

Host. O the Lord, that Sir John were come! He would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you.

Doll. I'll tell you what, you thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swing'd for this—you blue-bottle rogue, you filthy famish'd correctioner, if you be not swing'd, I'll forswear half-kirtles.

1 Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes Doll. Come, you rogue, come; bring me to a justice.

Host. Ay, come, you starv'd bloodhound. Doll. Goodman dearh, goodman bones ! Host. Thou atomy, thou!

Doll. Come, you thin thing! come, you rascal!

1 Bead. Very well.

[Exeunt.

Scene V. Westminster. Near the Abbev. Enter Grooms, strewing rushes.

1 Groom. More rushes, more rushes! 2 Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

3 Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch. [Exeunt. dispatch.

Trumpets sound, and the KING and his Train pass over the stage. After them enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow: I will make the King do you grace. I will leer upon him, as 'a comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight! Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me. [To Shallow] O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better; this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affec-

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion-

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night: and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me-

Shal. It is best, certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him: thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs 1 Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen clse in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis 'semper idem' for 'obsque hoc nihil est'. 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed. 30

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver

And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance and contagious prison; Hal'd thither By most mechanical and dirty hand.

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell

Alecto's snake, For Doll is in. Pistol speaks nought but truth. Ful I will deliver her.

[Shouts within, and the trumpets sound. Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpetclangor sounds.

Enter the KING and his Train, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE among them.

Fal. God save thy Grace, King Hal; my royal Hal!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal map of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy! King. My Lord Chief Justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? Know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

King. I know thee not, old man. Fall to thy prayers.

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester! I have long dreamt of such a kind of man, So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane; But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream. Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;

Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth gape

For thee thrice wider than for other men-Reply not to me with a fool-born jest; Presume not that I am the thing I was,

For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self; So will I those that kept me company. (o When thou dost hear I am as I have been, Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou

The tutor and the feeder of my riots.

Exeunt.

Till then I banish thee, on pain of death, 64 As I have done the rest of my misleaders Not to come near our person by ten mile For competence of life I will allow you, That lack of means enforce you not to evils:

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves, We will, according to your strengths and qualities, Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my lord,

To see perform'd the tenour of our word. Set on. [Exeunt the King and his train. Master Shallow, I owe you a Fal. thousand pound.

Shal. Yea, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me. Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements: I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word. This that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in,

Fal. Fear no colours; go with me to dinner. Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph. I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter Prince John, the Lord Chief JUSTICE, with Officers.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet:

Take all his company along with him. Fal. My lord, my lord-

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak. I will hear you soon.

Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero me contenta.

[Exeunt all but Prince John and the Lord Chief Justice.

P. John. I like this fair proceeding of the King's.

He hath intent his wonted followers Shall all be very well provided for; But all are banish'd till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world. Ch. Just. And so they are.

P. John. The King hath call'd his parliament, my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

P. John. I will lay odds that, ere this year expire,

We bear our civil swords and native fire As far as France. I heard a bird so sing, Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the King.

Come, will you hence?

EPILOGUE

First my fear, then my curtsy, last my speech. My fear, is your displeasure; my curtsy, my duty; and my speech, to bea your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me; for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what, indeed. I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you, as it is very well, I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I meant, indeed, to pay you with this; which if like an ill venture it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here I promis'd you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies. Bate me some, and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely, and so I kneel down before you—but, indeed, to pray for the Queen.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? And yet that were but light payment -to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so would I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me. If the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloy'd with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France; where, tor anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already 'a be kill'd with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr and this is not the man. tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night.

ACT ONE

King's palace.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you: that self bill is urg'd Lexit.

Which in th' eleventh year of the last king's faintfar as his garter; that, when he reign

Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd The air, a charter'd libertine, is still. Did push it out of farther question.

Eiv. But how, my lord, shall we resist

Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us.

We lose the better half of our possession; For all the temporal lands which men devout

By testament have given to the church Would they strip from us; being valu'd thus-As much as would maintain, to the King's honour.

Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights,

Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;

And, to relief of lazars and weak age. Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil, A hundred alms-houses right well supplied; And to the coffers of the King, beside, A thousand pounds by th' year: thus runs the bill.

Elv. This would drink deep.

'Twould drink the cup and all. Cant. Ely. But what prevention?

Cant. The King is full of grace and fair regard.

Elv. And a true lover of the holy Church. Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd

The breath no sooner left his father's body But that his wildness, mortified in him, 26 Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment.

Consideration like an angel came And whipp'd th' offending Adam out of him. Leaving his body as a paradise

T' envelop and contain celestial spirits. Never was such a sudden scholar made; Never came reformation in a flood.

With such a heady currance, scouring faults:

Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness So soon did lose his seat, and all at once, As in this king.

We are blessed in the change. Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity, And, all-admiring, with an inward wish You would desire the King were made a prelate: Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs, You would say it hath been all in all his study; List his discourse of war, and you shall hear

A fearful battle rend'red you in music. Turn him to any cause of policy, 45 The Gordian knot of it he will unloose, speaks,

But that the scambling and unquiet time And the mute wonder lurketh in men's

To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences: So that the art and practic part of life Must be the mistress to this theoric;

Which is a wonder how his Grace should glean it.

Since his addiction was to courses vain. His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow. His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets. sports;

And never noted in him any study, Any retirement, any sequestration

From open haunts and popularity. Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle.

And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best

Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality; And so the Prince obscur'd his contemplation

Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt.

Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,

Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are

ceas'd:

And therefore we must needs admit the means

How things are perfected.

But, my good lord, How now for mitigation of this bill Urg'd by the Commons? Doth his Majesty Incline to it, or no?

He seems indifferent; Cant. Or rather swaying more upon our part Than cherishing th' exhibiters against us; For I have made an offer to his Majesty-Upon our spiritual convecation And in regard of causes now in hand,

Which I have open'd to his Grace at large, As touching France—to give a greater sum Than ever at one time the clergy yet Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his Majesty;

Save that there was not time enough to

As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have

The severals and unhidden passages Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms, And generally to the crown and seat of France, Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.

Ely. What was th' impediment that broke this off?

Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant

Crav'd audience; and the hour, I think, is come

To give him hearing: is it four o'clock? Ely. It is.

Then go we in, to know his Cant. embassy;

Which I could with a ready guess declare, Before the Frenchman speak a word of it. Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it. [Exeunt.

Scene II. London. The Presence Chamber in the King's palace.

Enter the KING, GLGUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER. WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and Attendants.

King. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

Send for him, good uncle. King. West. Shall we call in th' ambassador, my liege?

King. Not yet, my cousin; we would be resolv'd.

Before we hear him, of some things of weight

That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne,

And make you long become it!

King. Sure, we thank you. My learned lord, we pray you to proceed, And justly and religiously unfold 10 Why the law Salique, that they have in France.

Or should or should not bar us in our claim; And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord, That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul 15 With opening titles miscreate whose right Suits not in native colours with the truth; For God doth know how many, now in health,

Shall drop their blood in approbation Of what your reverance shall incite us to. 20 Therefore take her how you impawn our person,

How you awake our sleeping sword of warheed:

For never two such kingdoms did contend Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops

Are every one a woe, a sore complaint, 'Gainst him whose wrongs gives edge unto the swords

That makes such waste in brief mortality. Under this conjuration speak, my loid; For we will hear, note, and believe in heart. That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd

As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,

That owe yourselves, your lives, and services.

To this imperial throne. There is no bar 35 To make against your Highness' claim to France

But this, which they produce from Pharamond:

In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant'-

' No woman shall succeed in Salique land '; Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze

To be the realm of France, and Pharamond The founder of this law and female bar. Yet their own authors faithfully affirm That the land Salique is in Germany.

Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe: 45 Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons.

There left behind and settled certain French:

Who. holding in disdain the German women

For some dishonest manners of their life. Establish'd then this law: to wit. female

Should be inheritrix in Salique land: Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,

Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen. Then doth it well appear the Salique law Was not devised for the realm of France; 55 Nor did the French possess the Salique land Until four hundled one and twenty years After defunction of King Phalamond, Idly suppos'd the founder of this law;

Who died within the year of our redemption Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great

Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French

Beyond the river Sala, in the year Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers

King Pepin, which deposed Childeric, Did, as heir general, being descended Of Blithild, which was daughter to King Clothair.

We charge you, in the name of God, take Make claim and title to the crown of France.

Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male

Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great.

To find his title with some shows of truth-

Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught-

Convey'd himself as th' heir to th' Lady Lingare.

Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son To Lewis the Empeior, and Lewis the son Of Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the Tenth.

Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet, Could not keep quiet in his conscience. 79 Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother, Was lineal of the Lady Ermengage.

Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorraine;

By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great

Was re-united to the Crown of France. 85 So that, as clear as is the summer's sun. King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim, King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear To hold in right and title of the female: So do the kings of France unto this day, 90 Howbert they would hold up this Salique

To bar your Highness claiming from the female :

And rather choose to hide them in a net Than amply to imbar their crooked titles Usurp'd from you and your progenitors. 95

King. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!

For in the book of Numbers is it writ. When the man dies, let the inheritance Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord, Stand for your own, unwind your bloody flag,

Look back into your mighty ancestors. Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandsire's tomb,

From whom you claim; invoke his warlike spirit.

And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince,

Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,

Making defeat on the full power of France Whiles his most mighty father on a hill Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp Forage in blood of French nobility. O noble English, that could entertain With half their forces the full pride o

France. And let another half stand laughing by,

All out of work and cold for action Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,

And with your puissant arm renew thei feats.

You are their heir; you sit upon thei throne:

The blood and courage that renowned them ins in your veins; and my thricepuissant hege an the very May-mora of his youth, 120 ape for exploits and mighty enterpises. Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth Do all expect that you should rouse vourself.

is did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your Grace hath cause and means and might-o hath your Highness; never King of England

Tad nobles richer and more loyal subjects. Vhose hearts have left their bodies here in England

And he pavilion'd in the fields of France. Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear hege.

With blood and sword and fire to win your right !

in aid whereof we of the spiritualty Will raise your Highness such a mighty sum as never did the clergy at one time Bring in to any of your ancestors. King. We must not only arm t' invade the French. But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon 115 With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign.

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

King. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,

But fear the main intendment of the Scot. Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us:

For you shall read that my great-grandfather

Never went with his forces into France But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom

Came pouring, like the tide into a breach, With ample and brim fulness of his force.

Galling the gleaned land with hot assays, Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;

That England, being empty of defence. Hath shook and trembled at th' ill neighbourhood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege; For hear her but exampled by herself: When all her chivalry hath been in France, And she a mourning widow of her nobles, She hath herself not only well defended

But taken and impounded as a stray The King of Scots; whom she did send to

France,

To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,

And make her chronicle as rich with praise As is the ooze and bottom of the sea \(\textit{td}\). With sunken wreck and sumless treasuries. \(\textit{West}\). But there's a saying, very old and true:

'If that you will France win, Then with Scotland first begin'.

For once the eagle England being in prey, To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot 170 Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs, Playing the mouse in absence of the cat, To tear and havoc more than she can eat. Exe. It follows, then, the cat must stay at home;

Yet that is but a crush'd necessity,
Since we have locks to safeguard necessaries
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad.

Th' advised head defends itself at home; For government, though high, and low, and lower.

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent, Congreeing in a full and natural close, Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion; 185
To which is fixed as an aim or butt
Obedience; for so work the honey bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts, 190
Where some like magistrates correct at home;

Others like merchants venture trade abroad:

Others like soldiers, armed in their stings, Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds, Which pillage they with merry march

bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor;
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey.
The poor mechanic porters crowding in 200
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,
That many things, having full reference 205
To one consent, may work contrariously;
As many arrows loosed several ways Come to one mark, as many ways meet in one town.

As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea, As many lines close in the dial's centre; 220 So many a thousand actions, once afoot, End in one purpose, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege.

Divide your happy England into four; 214 Whereof take you one quarter into Glance, And you withal shall make all Gallia shake. If we, with thrice such powers left at home.

Cannot defend our own doors from the dog, Let us be worned, and our nation lose The name of hardiness and policy.

King. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin.

[Exeunt some Attendants. Now are we well resolv'd; and, by God's help

And yours, the noble sinews of our power, France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe, Or break it all to pieces; or there we'll sit, Ruling in large and ample empery 226 O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms,

Or lay these bones in an unworthy un, Tombless, with no remembrance over them. Either our history shall with full mouth Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave, Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,

Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure

Of our fan cousin Dauphin; for we hear 235 Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

1 Amb. May't please vour Majesty to give us leave Freely to render what we have in charge; Or shall we sparingly show you far off 239 The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy? King. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king,

Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As are our wretches fett'red in our prisons;
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed
plainness

Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

1 Amb. Thus then, in few. 245 Your Highness, lately sending into France, Did claim some certain dukedoms in the right

Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third.

In answer of which claim, the Prince our master

Says that you savour too much of your youth, 250

And bids you be advis'd there's nought in France

That can be with a nimble galliard won; You cannot revel into dukedoms there. He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit, 254

This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim

Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

King. What treasure, uncle?

Tennis-balls, my liege. Exe. King. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us;

His present and your pains we thank you for.

When we have match'd our rackets to these balls. We will in France, by God's grace, play a set Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard. Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler That all the courts of France will be disturb'd With chaces. And we understand him well, How he comes o'er us with our wilder days, Not measuring what use we made of them. We never valu'd this poor seat of England; And therefore, living hence, did give ourself To barbarous licence; as 'tis ever common That men are merriest when they are from heme.

But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state, Be like a king, and show my sail of great-

When I do rouse me in my throne of France;

For that I have laid by my majesty And plodded like a man for working-days: But I will rise there with so full a glory That I will dazzle all the eyes of France, Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us. And tell the pleasant Prince this mock of his

Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones, and his soul

Shall stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance

That shall fly with them; for many a thousand widows

Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands:

Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down:

And some are yet ungotten and unborn That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's

But this lies all within the will of God. 280 To whom I do appeal; and in whose name, Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on, To venge me as I may and to put forth

My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause. So get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin

His jest will savour but of shallow wit, 295 When thousands weep more than did laugh

Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France; Exe. This was a merry message.

King. We hope to make the sender blush

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour 300 That may give furth'rance to our expedition:

For we have now no thought in us but France,

Save those to God, that run before our business.

Therefore let our proportions for these wars Be soon collected, and all things thought upon

That may with reasonable swiftness add More feathers to our wings; for, God before. We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.

Therefore let every man now task his thought

That this fair action may on foot be brought. [Exeunt.

ACT TWO PROLOGUE

Flourish. Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire.

And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies: Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought

Reigns solely in the breast of every man; They sell the pasture now to buy the horse. Following the mirror of all Christian kings With winged heels, as English Mercuries. 7 For now sits Expectation in the air,

And hides a sword from hilts unto the point With crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets. Promis'd to Harry and his followers. The French, advis'd by good intelligence

Of this most dreadful preparation, Shake in their fear and with pale policy Seek to divert the English purposes. O England! model to thy inward greatness, Like little body with a mighty heart, What mightst thou do that honour would thee do, Were all thy children kind and natural! But see thy fault! France hath in thee found out

A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills With treacherous crowns; and three corrupted men-

One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,

Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third.

Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumber-

· land, Have, for the gilt of France-O guilt indeed !-

[Exeunt Ambassadors. And by their hands this grace of kings must die--

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

If hell and treason hold their promises, Ere he take ship for France-and in Southampton.

Linger vour patience on, and we'll digest Th' abuse of distance, force a play.

The sum is paid, the traitors are agreed, The King is set from London, and the scene

Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton;

There is the play-house now, there must you sit,

And thence to France shall we convey you

And bring you back, charming the narrow

To give you gentle pass; for, if we may, We'll not offend one stomach with our play. But, till the King come forth, and not till Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. [Exit.

Scene I. London. Before the Boar's Head

Tavern, Eastcheap. Enter Corporal NYM and Lieutenant

BARDOLPH. Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends vet?

Nym. For my part, I care not; I say little, but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one; but what though? It will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will; and there's an end.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France. Let't be so, good Corperal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may. is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, Corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and certainly she did you wrong, for you were trothplight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they may. Men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may; though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell. 25

Enter PISTOL and Hostess.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife. Good Corporal, be patient here.

Nym. How now, mine host Pistol! Pist. Base tike, call'st thou me host? Now, by this hand, I swear I scorn the term;

Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers. Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [Nym drows] O well-a-day, Lady, if he be Now we shall see wilful not drawn! adultery and murder committed.

Bard. Good Lieutenant, good Corporal. offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland! Host. Good Corporal Nym. show thy valour, and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus.

Pist. 'Solus' egregious dog? O viper vile! The 'solus' in thy most mervailous face: The 'solus' in thy teeth, and in thy throat. And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy;

And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!

I do retort the 'solus' in thy bowels; For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up. 50 And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason: you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms; if you would walk off I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may, and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggart vile and damned furious wight!

The grave doth gape and doting death is near :

Therefore exhale. [Pistol draws. Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.

Pist. An oath of mickle might: and fury shall abate.

[Pistol and Nym sheathe their swords. Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give; Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. 'Couple a gorge!'
That is the word. I thee defy again. O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?

No: to the spital go,

And from the powd'ring tub of infamy Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind, Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her tertian that it is most lamentable to behold. espouse.

I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly

For the only she; and-pauca, there's enough.

Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master; and your hostess-he is very sick, and would to bed. Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Baid. Away, you rogue.

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days: the King has kill'd his heart. Good husband, come bome presently. [Executt Hostess and Boy. Bard. Come, shall I make you two We must to France together; friends?

why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on! Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting? Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have; that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push [Pistol and Nym draw.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

[Sheathes his sword. Bard, Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends; an thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too. Prithee put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay:

And liquor likewise will I give to thee, And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood.

I'll live by Nym and Nym shall live by me.

Is not this just? For I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue. Give me thy hand.

Nym. [Sheathing his sword] I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. [Shaking hands] Well, then, that's the humour of't. II3

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shak'd of a burning quotidian Under the sweet shade of your government.

Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The King hath run bad humours on the knight; that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right; 120 His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The King is a good king, but it must be as it may; he passes some humours and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight: for. lambkins, we will live. Exeunt.

Scene II. Southampton. A councilchamber.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmore-LAND.

Bed. Fore God, his Grace is bold, to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and bv.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves.

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,

Crowned with faith and constant lovalty! Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend.

By interception which they dream not of. Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,

Whom he hath dull'd and clov'd with gracious favours-

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpels sound. Enter the King, Scroop. CAMBRIDGE, GREY, and Attendants.

King. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham.

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts.

Think you not that the pow'rs we bear with Will cut their passage through the force of France, Doing the execution and the act

For which we have in head assembled them? Scroop. No doubt, my hege, if each man do his best. King. I doubt not that, since we are well persuaded

We carry not a heart with us from hence That grows not in a fair consent with ours: Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish

Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd

Than is your Majesty. There's not. I think, a subject

And shall forget the office of our hand Sooner than quittance of desert and merit According to the weight and worthings. 35 Scroop. So service shall with swelled sinews toil.

And labour shall refresh itself with hope. To do your Grace incessant services.

King. We judge no less. Uncle of E ceter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday 40 That rail'd against our person. We consider For your own reasons turn into your It was excess of wine that set him on; And on his more advice we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but 100 much security.

King. O, let us yet be merciful!

Cam. So may your Highliess, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir, You show great mercy if you give him life, After the taste of much correction.

King. Alas, your too much love and care of me

Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wietch! If little faults proceeding on distemper Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eve

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested,

Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that man,

Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care

And tender preservation of our person, Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes:

Who are the late commissioners? Cam. I one, my lord.

Your Highness bade me ask for it to-day. Scroop. So did you me, my liege. Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.

King. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge, there is yours;

There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham; and, Sir Knight,

Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours.

Read them, and know I know your worthiness.

My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter,

We will aboard to-night. Why, how now, gentlemen What see you in those papers, that you lose Do botch and bungle up damnation True: those that were your So much complexion? Look ye how thew change!

Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read vou there

Cam. I do confess my fault. And do submit me to your Highness' mercy. Grev, Scroop. To which we all appeal.

King. The mercy that was quick in us but late

By your own counsel is suppress'd and kıll'd. You must not dare, for shame, to talk of

You know how apt our love was to accord To furnish him with all appeitinents Belonging to his honour; and this man Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspar'd,

And sworn unto the practices of France 90 To kill us here in Hampton; to the which This knight, no less for bounty bound to us Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But, O,

What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop, thou

Ingiateful, savage, and inhuman creature? Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels.

Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland. Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd.

And I repent my fault more than my death; Which I beseech your Highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce.

Although I did admit it as a motive The sooner to effect what I intended; But God be thanked for prevention, Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice, Beseeching God and you to pardon me. 160 Grey. Never did faithful subject more

With patches, colours, and with forms, At the discovery of most dangerous treason Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself. Prevented from a damned enterprise.

My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign. 164 Kmg. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence. You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers

Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death: Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter.

His princes and his peers to servitude, His subjects to oppression and contempt. And his whole kingdom into desolation. Touching our person seek we no revenge:

But we our kingdom's safety must so tender.

We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence.

Poor miserable wretches, to your death; The taste whereof God of his mercy give You patience to endure, and true repent-

Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof

Shall be to you as us like glorious. We doubt not of a fair and lucky war. Since God so graciously hath brought to

This dangerous treason, lurking in our way To hinder our beginnings: we doubt not now

But every rub is smoothed on our way. Then, forth, dear countrymen; let us deliver

Our puissance into the hand of God, 100 Putting it straight in expedition.

Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance; No king of England, if not king of France ! [Flourish. Exeunt.

Eastcheap. Before we Boar's SCENE III. Head lavern.

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Host. Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth earn. Bardolph, be blithe; Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins;

Boy, bristle thy courage up. For Falstaff he is dead,

And we must earn therefore. Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Pist. Let housewifery appear: kern close, I thee command. Host. Farewell: adieu. Exern.

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

Host. Nav, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away an it had been any christom child; 'a parted ev'n just between twelve and one, ev'n at the turning o' th' tide; for after I saw him fumble with the sheets. and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' end. I knew there was but one way: for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and babbl'd of green fields. 'How now, Sin John!' quoth I 'What, man, be o' good cheer.' So 'a cried out 'God, God, God!' three or four times. Now I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God: I hop'd there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet; I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to as knees, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone. Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that 'a did. Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did, and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. 'A could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never lik'd.

him about women.

Host. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women: but then he was rheumatic, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? The King will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips. Look to my chattels and my moveables; Let senses rule. The word is 'Pitch and Pay'. Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes.

And Holdtast is the only dog, my duck. Therefore, Caveto be thy counsellor. Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arms. Let us to France, like horse-leeches, my boys.

To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck. Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth and march. Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her. Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu. 61

Scene IV. France. The King's balace.

ourish. Enter the French King, the Dauphin, the Dukes of Berri and Flourish. BRITAINE, the CONSTABLE, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus comes the English with full power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Britaine,

Of Brabant and of Oileans, shall make forth.

And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch,

To line and new repair our towns of war With men of courage and with means defendant:

For England his approaches makes as fierce As waters to the sucking of a gulf. It fits us, then, to be as provident As fear may teach us, out of late examples

Boy. 'A said once the devil would have For peace itself should not so Leit a kingdom, Though war nor no known quarrel were to question, But that defences, musters, preparations,

Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected, As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say, 'tis meet we all go forth To view the sick and feeble parts of France: And let us do it with no show of fear-No, with no more than if we heard that England Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance; For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd, Her sceptre so fantastically borne

By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, That fear attends her not.

O peace, Prince Dauphin! Con. You are too much mistaken in this king. 30 Question your Grace the late ambassadors With what great state he heard their embassy, How well supplied with noble counsellors, How modest in exception, and withal How terrible in constant resolution, And you shall find his vanities forespent Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,

Covering discretion with a coat of folly; As gardeners do with ordure hide those

That shall first spring and be most delicate. Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my Lord High Constable:

In cases of desence 'tis best to weigh The enemy more mighty than he seems: So the proportions of defence are fill'd: 45 Which of a weak and niggardly projection Doth like a miser spoil his coat with scant-

The kindred of him liath been flesh'd upon

And he is bred out of that bloody strain That haunted us in our familiar paths. Witness our too much memorable shame When Cressy battle fatally was struck, And all our princes captiv'd by the hand 55 Of that black name, Edward, Black Prince of Wales:

Whiles that his mountain sire-on mountain standing,

Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun-

Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him, Mangle the work of nature, and deface 60 The patterns that by God and by French fathers

Had twenty years been made. This is a stem

Of that victorious stock; and let us fear The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England

Do crave admittance to your Majesty. Fr. King. We'll give them present audience. Go and bring them.

[Exeunt Messenger and certain Lords. You see this chase is hotly followed, friends.

Dau. Turn head and stop pursuit; for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten Runs far before them. Good my sovereign, Take up the English short, and let them know

Of what a monarchy you are the head. Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother of England? Exe. From him, and thus he greets your Majesty:

He wills you, in the name of God Almighty, That you divest yourself, and lay apart The borrowed glories that by gift of heaven.

By law of nature and of nations, 'longs 80 In second accent of his ordinance. To him and to his heirs-namely, the crown,

Fr. King. Or else what follows? Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown

Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it.

Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming. In thunder and in earthquake, like a Jove. That if requiring fail, he will compel: And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord, Deliver up the crown; and to take mercy On the poor souls for whom this hungry war Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries.

For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers.

That shall be swallowed in this controversy. This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message;

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here, To whom expressly I bring greeting too. Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further: To-morrow shall you bear our full intent Back to our brother of England.

Dau. For the Dauphin: 115 I stand here for him. What to him from England? Exe. Scorn and defiance, slight regard. contempt.

And anything that may not misbecome The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.

Thus says my king: an if your father's Highness Do not, in grant of all demands at large.

Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his Majesty,

He'll call you to so hot an answer of it That caves and womby vaultages of France Shall chide your trespass and return your mock 124

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return.

It is against my will; for I desire Nothing but odds with England. To that

Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe;

And be assur'd you'll find a difference, 131 As we his subjects have in wonder found, Between the promise of his greener days And these he masters now. Now he weighs

Even to the utmost grain; that you shall read

ACT THREE PROLOGUE

Flourish. Enter CHORUS.

scene flies.

In motion of no less celerity

Suppose that you Than that of thought. have seen

The well-appointed King at Hampton pier Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet 5 With silken stieamers the young Phœbus fanning.

Play with your fancies: and in them behold Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys climbing;

Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give

To sounds confus'd; behold the threaden sails.

Borne with th' invisible and creeping wind, the huge bottoms through the furrowed sea,

Breasting the lofty surge. O, do but think You stand upon the rivage and behold A city on th' inconstant billows dancing; 15

For so appears this fleet majestical, Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow!

Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy And leave your England as dead midnight women.

Either past or not arriv'd to pith and puissai ce ;

For who is he wnose chin is but enrich'd With one appearing hair that will not follow These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France?

Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege:

Behold the ordnance on their carriages, With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.

Suppose th' ambassador from the French comes back;

Tells Harry that the King doth offer him Katharine his daughter, and with her to dowry

Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms. The offer likes not; and the numble gunner With linstock now the devilish cannon touches, [Alarum, and chambers go off. kind.

Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd And eke out our performance with your mind. IExit.

Scene I. France. Before Harfleur.

Enter the KING, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers with scaling-ladders.

King. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more:

Or close the wall up with our English dead. Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift In peace there's nothing so becomes a man As modest stillness and humility; But when the blast of war blows in our ears.

Then imitate the action of the tiger: Stiften the sinews, summon up the blood, Disguise fair nature with haid-favour'd rage;

Then lend the eye a terrible aspect; Let it pry through the portage of the head Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it As fearfully as doth a galled rock O'erhang and jutty his confounded base, Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean. Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide;

Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit On, on, you noblest

To his full height. English, Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof-Fathers that like so many Alexanders

Have in these parts from morn till even fought,

And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.

Dishonour not your mothers; now attest Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you.

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

Be copy now to men of grosser blood, And teach them how to wai. And you, good yeomen,

Whose limbs were made in England, show us here

The mettle of your pasture; let us swear That you are worth your breeding—which I doubt not:

For there is none of you so mean and base That hath not noble lustre in your eyes. 30 I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips, Straining upon the start. The game's afoot: Fellow your spirit; and upon this charge try 'God for Harry, England, and Saint George! ' [Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off.

SCENE II. Before Harfleur.

Later NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Pard. On, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Num. Pray thee, Corporal, stay; the I have not a case of lives. The humour of is s too hot; that is the very plain-song 1 17.

1'ist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound.

Knocks go and come; God's vassals drop and die:

And sword and shield In bloody field

Deth win immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an alchouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

Pist. And I:

If wishes would prevail with me, My purpose should not fail with me, 15 But thither would I hie.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Up to the breach, you dogs! Avaunt, you cullions!

Driving them forward.

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould. Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage;

Abate thy rage, great duke. Good bawcock, bate thy rage. Use lenity, sweet chuck.

Nym. These be good humours. Your honour wins bad humours.

[Exeunt all but Boy. Boy. As young as I am, I have observ'd these three swashers. I am boy to them all three; but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for indeed three such antics do not amount For Bardolph, he is whiteliver'd and red-fac'd; by the means any mintary man in the world, in the whereof 'a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword; by the means whereof 'a breaks words and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men, and therefore he scorns to say his prayers lest 'a should be thought a coward; but his few bad words are match'd with as few good deeds; for 'a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case. bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel; I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers; which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them and seek some better service: their villainv goes against my weak stemach, and therefore I must cast it up.

Re-enter Flublien, Gowla following.

Gow. Captain Fhiellen, you must come presently to the mines; the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! Tell you the Duke it is not so good to come to the mines; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the concavities of it is not sufficient. For, look you, th' athversary-you may discuss unto the Duke, look you-is digt himself four yard under the countermines; by Cheshu, I think 'a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman-a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not? Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world: I will verity as much in his beard; he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter Macmorris and Captain Jamy.

Gow. Here 'a comes; and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchiant wars, upon my particular directions. By Cheshu, knowledge of his directions. he will maintain his argument as well as disciplines of the pristine wais of the Romai :.

Jan . I say gud day, Captain Fluellen. Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captaii James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! Have you quit the mines? Have the pioneers given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish, la. tish ill done! The work ish give over, the trompet sound the ietreat. By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over; I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la, in an hour. O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris. I beseech von now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline, that is the point.

Jamy. It sall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath; and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me. The day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the King, and the Dukes; it is no time to discourse. The town is beseech'd, and the trumpet call us to the breach; and we talk and, be Chrish, do nothing. 'Tis shame for us all, so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand; and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done; and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la.

Jamy. By the mess, ere thesse eyes of mine take themselves to slomber, ay'll de gud service, or I'll lig i' th' grund for it; valorously as I may, that sall I suerly do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you twav.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not 115

What ish my Mac. Of my nation? nation? Ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal. What ish my nation?

Who talks of my nation?

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war and in the derivation

Mac. I do not know you so good a man 77 as myself; so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Ah! that's a foul fault.

[A parley sounded. Gow. The town sounds a parley. Flu. Captain Macmoilis, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Before the gates of Harfleur.

Enter the Governor and some Citizens on the walls. Enter the KING and all his Train before the gates.

King. How yet resolves the Governor of the town?

This is the latest parle we will admit: Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves

Or, like to men proud of destruction. Defy us to our worst; for, as I am a soldier, A name that in my thoughts becomes me

If I begin the batt'ry once again,

I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up, 10 And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart.

In liberty of bloody hand shall range With conscience wide as hell, mowing like

Your fresh fair virgins and your flow'ring infants.

What is it then to me if impious war, 15 Array'd in flames, like to the prince of fiends.

Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats

Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me when you yourselves are cause.

If your pure maidens fall into the hand 20 Of hot and forcing violation?

What rein can hold licentious wickedness When down the hill he holds his fierce career?

We may as bootless spend our vain command

Upon th' enraged soldiers in their spoil, 25 As send precepts to the Leviathan

To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur.

Take pity of your town and of your people Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command; Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of of my birth, and in other particularities. 124 O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds

KING HÉNRY THE FIFTH

Of heady murder, spoil, and villainy. If not—why, in a moment look to see

The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Defile the locks of your shrill-shricking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards,
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;

Al

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes, Whiles the mad mothers with their howls

confus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry 40

At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen. What say you? Will you rield, and this avoid?

Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end:

The Dauphin, whom of succours we entreated, 45

Returns us that his powers are yet not ready

To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great King,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft menton, de sin.

mercy.

Alice. Oui.

Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours; For we no longer are defensible. 50

King. Open your gates. [Exit Governor. Come, uncle Exetet,

Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain, And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French; Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle, The winter coming on, and sickness growing Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais. To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest 'To-morrow for the march are we addrest.

[Flourish. The King and his train enter the town.

Scene IV. Rouen. The French King's palace.

Enter KATHERINE and ALICE.

Kaih. Alice, tu as été en Angleteire, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseignez; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelezvous la main en Anglais?

Alice. La main? Elle est appe ée de hand. Kaili. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? Ma foi, j'oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts? Je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres; oui, de fingres.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon écoher; j'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglas vîtement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? Nous les appelons de nails.

Kath. De nails. Ecoutez; dites-moi si je parle bien: de hand, de fingres, et de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est for bon Anglais.

Kath. Dites-moi l'Anglais pour le

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude?

Alice. D'elbow.

Kath. D'elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez-moi, Alice; écoutez; d'hand, de fingre, de nails, d'arma, de bilbow.

Alice, D'elbow, madame. Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, je m'en oublie!

D'elbow. Comment appelez-vous le col?

Alice. De nick, madame.

Kath. De nick. Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick; le menton, de sin.

Alice. Oui. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité, vous pronoucez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d'Angleteire.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendie, par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps. 37 Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà oubl. é ce que je vous ai enseigné?

Kath. Non, je reciterai à vous promptement: d'hand, de fingie, de mails—Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arm, de ilbow. Alice. Sauf votre honneur, d'elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-je; d'elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez-vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. Le foot, madame; et le count. Kaih. Le foot et le count. O Seigneur Dieu! ils sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user: je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde. Foh! le foot et le count! Néanmoins, je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: d'hand, de fingre, de nails, d'arm, d'elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, le count.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allonsnous à dîner.

[Exeunt.

Scene V. The French King's palace.

Enter the King of France, the Dauphin, Duke of Britaine, the Constable of France, and Others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. I rid if he be not fought withal, my! High dukes, great princes, barous, lords, "ard.

Let us put live in France: let us quit all, And giv our vineyards to a baibarous prople.

Dau. C Dieu vivant! Shall a few sprays of us.

The emptying of our fathers' luxury, Our scions, put in wild and savage stock, Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds, And overlook their grafters?

Brit. Normans, but bastaid Normans, Norman bastards!

Mort Dea, ma vie! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom

To buy a slobb'ry and a dirty farm In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle? Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull; On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, Killing their fruit with flowns? Can sodden

A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barleybroth.

Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?

And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine.

Seem frosty? O. for honour of our land, Let us not hang like roping icicles Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people

Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields-

Poor we call them in their native lords!

Dau. By faith and honour, Our madams mock at us and plainly say Our mettle is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth 30 To new-store France with bastard warriors. Brit. They bid us to the English dancing-schools And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos, Saying our grace is only in our heels

And that we are most lofty runaways. Fr. King. Where is Montjoy the herald? Speed him hence:

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.

Up, Princes, and, with spirit of honour edged

More sharper than your swords, hie to the field:

Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France;

You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of but I did see him do as gallant service. 15

Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy; Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont, Beaumont, Grandpié, Roussi, and Fauconbridge, Foix, Lestrake, Bouciqualt, and Charolois; and knights. For your great seats now quit you of great shames. nar Harry England, that sweeps through our land

With pennons painted in the blood of Harflem.

Rush on his host as doth the melted snow 50 Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat The Alps doth spit and void his theum upon:

Go down upon him, you have power enough, And in a captive chariot into Rouen

Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great, 55 Sorry am I his numbers are so tew. His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march:

For I am sure, when he shall see our army, He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,

And for achievement offer us his ransom. 60 Fr. King. Therefore, Lord Constable, haste on Montiov.

And let him say to England that we send To know what willing ransom he will give. Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your Majesty. Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.

Now forth, Lord Copstable and Princes all. And quickly bring us word of England's tall. IExeunt.

Scene VI. The English camp in Picardy Enter Captains, English and Welsh, Gower and Fluellen.

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen! Come you from the bridge ?

Flu. I assure you there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe? Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my live, and my living, and my uttermost power. He is not -God be praised and blessed!-any hurt in the world, but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient Lieutenant there at the bridge—I think in my very conscience he is as valuant a man as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world;

Gow. What do you call him? Flu. He is call'd Aunchient Pistol. Gow. I know him not.

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Here is the man.

favours.

The Duke of Exeter doth love thee

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of heart.

And of buxom valour, hath by cruel fate And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel, That godde ... blind,

'That stands upon the rolling restless stone-

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol. Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation; and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which folls, and rolls, and rolls. In good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him;

For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must 'a be-

A damned death!

Let gallows gape for dog; let man go free, And let not hemp his windpipe suffocat : But Exeter hath given the doom of death For pax of little price.

Therefore, go speak—the Duke will hear thy voice;

And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut With edge of penny cord and vile reproach. Speak, Captain, for his life, and I will thee requite. Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, Aurchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the Duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd! and figo for thy friendship! 56

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit. Flu. Very good.

1ascal; I remember him now—a bawd, a cutpurse.

summer's day. But it is very well; what gamester is the soonest winner. he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars to grace himself, at his return into London, under Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names; and they will learn you by rote where services were done-at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy: who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what terms the enemy stood on: and this they con perfectly in the phiase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths; and what a beard of the General's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-wash'd wits is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower. I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is: if I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind. [Drum within] Hark you, the King is coming; and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Drum and colours. Enter the KING and his boor Soldiers, and GLOUCESTER.

God pless your Majesty! King. How now, Fluellen! Cam'st thou from the bridge? Flu. Ay, so please your Majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintain'd the pridge; the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages. Marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge; but he is enforced to setire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge; I can tell your Majesty the Duke is a prave man.

King, What men have you lost, Fluellen? Flu. The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great; marry, for my part, I think the Duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church-one Bardolph, if your Majesty know the man; his face is all bubukles, and whelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire; and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red; but his nose is executed and his fire's out.

King. We would have all such offenders so cut off. And we give express charge that in our marches through the country Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit there be nothing compell'd from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none 61 of the French upbraided or abused in Flu. I'll assure you, 'a utt'red as prave disdainful language; for when lenity and words at the pridge as you shall see in a cruelty play for a kingdom the gentler Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Moni. You know me by my habit. King. Well then, I know thee; what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

King. Unfold it.

Mo it. Thus says my king. Say thou to Harry of England: Though we seem'd dead we did but sleep; advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuk'd him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe. Now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransom, which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which, in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses his exchequer is too poor; for th' effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person kneeling at our feet but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance; and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc'd. So far my king and master; so much my office. ISI

King. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

thee back,

And tell thy king I do not seek him now, But could be willing to maich on to Calais Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth-

Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage— My people are with sickness much enfeebled;

My numbers lessen'd; and those few I have Almost no better than so many French; Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald.

I thought upon one pair of English legs Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me, God,

That I do brag thus; this your air of France

Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent.

Go, therefore, tell thy master here I am; My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk: My army but a weak and sickly guard; 750 Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himself and such another neighbour

Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Montjoy.

Go, bid thy master well advise himself. If we may pass, we will; if we be hind'red, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood

Discolour; and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of all our answer is but this:

We would not seek a battle as we are: Nor as we are, we say, we will not shun it.

113

So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your Highness. [Ėλιt.

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now.

King. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge, it now draws toward night;

Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves, And on to-morrow bid them march away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. The French camp near Agincourt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord RAMBURES, the DUKE OF ORLEANS, the DAUPHIN, with Others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best house of Europe. Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans and my Lord King. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn High Constable, you talk of hoise and armour?

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca. ha! he bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les narmes de feu! When I bestride him I soar, I am a hawk. He trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg. 10 Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him: he is indeed a horse, and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey. It is a theme as fluent as the sea: turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all; 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on: and for the world-familiar to us and unknown-to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise and began thus ' Wonder of nature '--

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O, then belike she was old and gentle: and you rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off and in your strait strossers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warn'd by me; then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a iade.

Dau. I tell thee, Constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress. Dau. 'Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au bourbier.' Thou mak'st use of anything.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress, or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My Lord Constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night—are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away

Con. Ev'n as your horse bears your praises, who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces. Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be fac'd out of my way; but I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Can. You must first go yourself to hazard ere you have them.

Day, 'Tis midnight: I'll go arm myself

Oil. The Dauphin longs for morning. Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills. Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France. Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm that I heard of. Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant. Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he car'd not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never anybody saw it but his lackey. hooded valour, and when it appears it will

Oil. Ill-will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship'.

Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due '

Con. Well plac'd! There stands your fuend for the devil; have at the very eye of that proverb with 'A pox of the devil!'

Orl. You are the better at proverbs by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot'.

Con. You have shot over. Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord High Constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.

Con. Who hath measur'd the ground? Mess. The Lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentle-Would it were day! Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces. x36 Ram. That island of England breeds very valuant creatures; their mastiffs are of Presenteth them unto the gazing moon unmatchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crush'd like rotten apples! You n.ay as well say that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just! and the men do sympathise with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives; and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel; they will eat like wolves and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm. Come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two o'clock; but let me see-by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. [Exeunt.

ACT FOUR PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time When creeping muimur and the poring dark Fills the wide vessel of the universe. From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night.

The hum of either army stilly sounds. That the fix'd sentinels almost receive The secret whispers of each other's watch. Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames

Each battle sees the other's umber'd face: Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armourers accomplishing the knights, With busy hammers closing rivets up,

Give dreadful note of preparation. The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll. And the third hour of drowsy morning name. Proud of their numbers and secure in soul, The confident and over-lusty French Do the low-rated English play at dice;

And chide the cupple tardy-gaited night 20 Who like a foul and ugly witch doth limp So tediously away. The poor condemned

English, Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires Sit patiently and inly ruminate The morning's danger; and their gesture

Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats

So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will behold

The royal captain of this ruin'd band Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent.

Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his head!'

For forth he goes and visits all his host: Bids them good morrow with a modest smile.

And calls them brothers, friends, and countrymen.

Upon his royal face there is no note How dread an army hath enrounded him ; Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour Unto the weary and all-watched night: But freshly looks, and over-bears attaint With cheerful semblance and majesty: That every wretch, pining and pale before, Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks:

A largess universal, like the sun, His liberal eye doth give to every one, Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all Behold, as may unworthiness define, A little touch of Harry in the night. And so our scene must to the battle fly;

Where-O for pity!-we shall much disgrace With four or five most vile and ragged foils,

Right ill-dispos'd in brawl ridiculous, The name of Agincouit. Yet sit and see. Minding true things by what their mock'ites SCENE I. France. The English camb at Agincourt.

> Enter the KING, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER.

King. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger:

The greater therefore should our courage be. Good morrow, brother Bedford. Almighty!

There is some soul of goodness in things evil.

Would men observingly distil it out: For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers.

Which is both healthful and good husbandry.

Besides, they are our outward consciences And preachers to us all, admonishing That we should dress us fairly for our end. Thus may we gather honey from the weed, And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham: A good soft pillow for that good white head Were better than a churlish turf of France. Erp. Not so, my liege; this lodging likes me better,

Since I may say 'Now lie I like a king'. King. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains

Upon example; so the spirit is eased; And when the mind is quick'ned, out of doubt

The organs, though defunct and dead before.

Break up their drowsy grave and newly

With casted slough and fresh legerity. Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brother both, Commend me to the princes in our camp Do my good morrow to them, and anon Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

Erp. Shall I attend your Grace? King. No, my good knight: Go with my brothers to my lords of England;

I and my bosom must debate awhile, And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry! [Exeunt all but the King. King. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou will. speak'st cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va là? King. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me: art thou officer. Or art thou base, common, and popular? King. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike? 40 King. Even so. What are you?

Emperor. King.

Pist. The King's a bawcock and a heart of gold.

A lad of life, an imp of fame;

Of parents good, of fist most valiant. I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heart-string I love the lovely bully. What is thy name? King. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name; art thou of Cornish crew?

King, No. I am a Welshman. Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?

King. Yes.

Pist. Tell him I'll knock his leek about his pate

Upon Saint Davy's day.

King. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about vours.

Pist. Art thou his friend? King. And his kinsman too. Pist. The figo for thee, then! Pist. My name is Pistol call'd. IExit. King. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So! in the name of Jesu Christ, speak fewer. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and aunchient prerogatifes and laws of the wars is not kept; if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle-taddle nor pibble-pabble in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wais, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobilety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you hear him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb? In your own conscience, now? Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you and beseech you that you [Exeunt Gower and Fluellen.

King. Though it appear a little out of fashion.

There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter three soldiers: JOHN BATES, ALEX-ANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder? Bates. I think it be; but we have no Pist. As good a gentleman as the great cause to desire the approach of day. Will. We see yonder the beginning of the King. Then you are a better than the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

King. A friend. Will. Under what captain serve you?

King. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham. Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman. I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

King. Even as men wreck'd upon a sand, that look to be wash'd off the next tide. Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King?

King. No; nor it is not meet he should. For though I speak it to you, I think the King is but a man as I am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions; his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the 60 like wing. Therefore, when he sees reason King. I thank you; God be with you! of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are; yet, in have on them the guilt of premeditated and reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it. should dishearten his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will; but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the King: I think he would not wish himself anywhere but where he is.

Bates Then I would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

King. I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this, to feel other men's minds; methinks I could not die anywhere so contented as in the King's company, his cause being just and his quariel honourable. 127 Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Av. or more than we should seek after; for we know enough if we know we are the King's subjects. It his cause be wrong, our obelience to the King wipes the clime of it out of us.

Will. But if the cause be not good, the King himself hath a heavy reckoning to make when all those legs and arms and heads, chopp'd off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day and ciy all 'We died at such a place '-- some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afeard there are few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of anything when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the King that led them to it; who to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

King. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him; or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcil'd iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so: the King is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers: some peradventure contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men they have no wings to fly from God: war is His beadle, war is His vengeance: so that here men are punish'd for beforebreach of the King's laws in now the King's quarrel. Where they feared the death they have borne life away; and where they would be safe they perish. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the King guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impleties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the King's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wais do as every sick man in his bed—wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained: and in him that escapes it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, He let him outlive that day to see His greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head-the King is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

King. I myself heard the King say he would not be ransom'd.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully; but when our throats are cut he may be ransom'd, and we ne'er the wiser.

King. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then! That's a pendous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch! You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! Come, 'tis a foolish saying.

King. Your reproof is something too round; I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us if vou live.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again? 205 King. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet; then if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove; give me another The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, of thine.

The intercissued robe of gold and pearl.

King. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap; if ever thou come to me and say, after tomorrow, 'This is my glove', by this hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

King. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd. 215 King. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the King's company.

thee in the King's company.

Will. Keep thy word. Fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends; we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

King. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders; but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the King himself will be a clipper. Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattl'd, you French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant Princes! straight to horse!

Do but behold you poor and starved band, And your fair show shall suck away their souls.

Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.

There is not work enough for all our hands; Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins To give each naked curtle-axe a stain That our French gallants shall to-day draw

And sheathe for lack of sport. Let us but blow on them,

The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them. 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, 25 That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants-

Who in unnecessary action swarm About our squares of battle-were enow To purge this field of such a hilding foe; Though we upon this mountain's basis by 30 Took stand for idle speculation-

But that our honours must not. What's to say?

A very little little let us do,

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound

The tucket sonance and the note to mount: For our approach shall so much dare the field

Con. They have said their prayers and they stay for death.

Dau. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits,

And give their fasting horses provender. And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guidon. To the field!

I will the banner from a trumpet take. And use it for my haste. Come, come, awav!

The sun is high, and we outwear the day. Exeunt.

SCENE III. The English camp.

Enter GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, ERPINGHAM, with all his Host; SALISBURY and WESTMORELAND.

Glo. Where is the King?

Bed. The King himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.

Exe. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds. God bye you, Princes all; I'll to my charge. It we no more meet till we meet in heaven Then joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter,

And my kind kinsman-warriors all, adieu Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Exe. Farewell, kind lord. Fight valiantly to-day :

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness Princely in both.

Enter the KING.

West. O that we now had here But one ten thousand of those men in England

That do no work to-day!

What's he that wishes so? King. My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin; If we are mark'd to die, we are enow To do our country loss; and if to live, The fewer men, the greater share of honour God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold, Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost; 25 It yearns me not if men my garments wear; Such outward things dwell not in my desires.

But if it be a sin to covet honour, I am the most offending soul alive.

For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more!

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he which hath no stomach to this fight,

Let him depart; his passport shall be made, And crowns for convoy put into his purse; We would not die in that man's company That fears his fellowship to die with us. This day is call'd the feast of Crispian. 40 He that outlives this day, and comes safe home.

Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd, And rouse him at the name of Crispian. He that shall live this day, and see old age, Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours, And say 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian'. 46 Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,

And say 'These wounds I had on Crispian's day'.

We few, we happy few, we band brothers:

For he to-day that sheds his blood with me Shall be my brother: be he re'er so vile. This day shall gentle his condition:

And gentlemen in England now a-bed Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,

Let me speak proudly: tell the Constable We are but warriors for the working-day: Our gavness and our gilt are all besmirch'd With rainy marching in the painful field; There's not a piece of feather in our host-Good argument, I hope, we will not fly-And time hath worn us into slovenry.

But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;

And my poor soldiers tell me yet ere night They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads

And turn them out of service. If they do this-

As, if God please, they shall-my ransom then

Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour:

Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald:

They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints;

Which if they have, as I will leave 'em them, Shall yield them little, tell the Constable. Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so fare thee well:

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.

King, I fear thou wilt once more come again for a ransom.

O Signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox. Except, O Signieur, thou do give to me 10 Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prennez miséricorde; ayez pitié de moi!

Pist. Moy shall not serve; I will have forty moys;

Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est-il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur!

Thou damned and luxurious mountaingoat,

Offer'st me brass? Fr. Sol. O, pardonnez-moi!

Pist. Say'st thou me so? Is that a ton of moys?

Come hither, boy; ask me this slave in French What is his name.

Boy. Ecoutez: comment êtes-vous appelé?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer. Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him-discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French tor fer, and ferret, and firk.

Pist. Bid him prepare; for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prêt; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Owy, cuppele gorge, permafoy! Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns:

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il? Boy. Encore qu'il est contie son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier, néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content à vous donner la liberté, le franchisement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remercîmens; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et tiès distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fall'n into the hands of thinks—the most brave. one—as he valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy shew.

Exit. Follow me. Boy. Suivez-vous le grand capitaine. [Exit French Soldier] I did never know so tull a voice issue from so empty a heart; but the saying is true—the empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil i' th' old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hang'd; and so would this be, if he durst steal anything adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp. The French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it but boys. IExit.

Scene V. Another part of the field of battle. Enter Constable, Orleans, Bourbon, DAUPHIN, and RAMBURES.

Con. O diable!

Orl. O Seigneur! le jour est perdu, tout est perdu!

Dau. Mort Dieu, ma v.e! all is confounded, all!

Reproach and everlasting shame

Sits mocking in our plumes.

[A short alarum. O méchante fortune! Do not run away. Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame! Let's stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play'd at Commend my service to my sovereign'. dice for ?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

Let us die in honour: once more back again;

And he that will not follow Bourbon now. Let him go hence and, with his cap in hand Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog, His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now !

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enow yet living in the field To smother up the English in our throngs, If any order might be thought upon. Bour. The devil take order now! I'll to the throng.

Let life be short, else shame will be too long. [Fxeunt.

Scene VI. Another part of the field.

Enter the KING and his Train. with Prisoners; EXETER, and Others.

King. Well have we done, thrice-valiant countrymen;

But all's not done-yet keep the French the field.

Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your Majesty.

King. Lives he, good uncle? within this hour

I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting;

From helmet to the spur all blood he was. Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie Larding the plain; and by his bloody side. Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds, The noble Earl of Suffolk also hes. Suffolk first died; and York, all haggled over,

That bloodily did yawn upon his face, He cries aloud 'Tarry, my cousin Suffolk. My soul shall thine keep company to heaven; Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast; As in this glorious and well-foughten field

We kept together in our chivalry'. Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up;

He smil'd me in the face, raught me his hand,

And, with a feeble grip, says 'Dear my lord.

So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck

But I had not so much of man in me. And all my mother came into mine eyes And gave me up to tears.

I blame you not: King. For, hearing this, I must perforce compound With mistful eyes, or they will issue too.

Alarum. But, hark! what new alarum is this same? The French have reinforc'd their scatter'd men.

Then every soldier kill his prisoners: Give the word through. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Another part of the field. Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! 'Tis expressly against the law of arms; 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offert; in your conscience, now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive: and the cowardly tascals that ran from the battle ha' done this slaughter; besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the King's tent; wherefore the King most worthily hath caus'd every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant King!

Flu. Ay, he was porn at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great. Flu. Why, I pray you, is not 'pig' great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon; his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is porn. I tell you, Captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you sall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth; it is call'd Wye at Monmouth, but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well;

He threw his wounded aim and kiss'd his -God knows, and you know-in his reges, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best

Gow. Our king is not like him in that . he never kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth eie it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and companisons of it; as Alexander kill'd his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups, so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turn'd away the fat knight with the great belly doublet; he was full of jests. and gipes, and knavenes, and mocks; I have lorgot his name.

Gow. Šir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he. I'll tell you there is good men porn at Monmouth. Gow. Here comes his Majesty.

Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald, Ride thou unto the hoisemen on you! hill:

If they will fight with us, bid them come down Or void the field; they do offend our sight If they'll do neither, we will come to then And make them skiri away as swift as stenes Enforced from the old Assyrian slings: Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have.

And not a man of them that we shall take Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTIOY.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French. my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

King. How now! What means this, herald? know'st thou not That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?

Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great King; I come to thee for charitable licence, That we may wander o'er this bloody field To book our dead, and then to bury them: To soit our noble, from our common men; For many of our princes-we the while !-Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood:

for there is figures in all things. Alexander So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs

In blood of plinces; and their wounded gage of one that I should fight withal, if he steeds 75

but fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage Yerk out their aimed heels at their dead masters.

Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great King, To view the field in safety, and dispose

O: then dead bodies!

I tell thee truly, herald, 80 King. I know not if the day be ours or no; For yet a many of your horsemen peer

And gallop o'er the field. The day is yours. Mont.

King. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!

What is this castle call'd that stands hard

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your Majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

King. They did, Fluellen. 93
Flu. Your Majesty says very true; if your Majesties is remembried of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which your Maiesty know to this hour is an honourable badge of the service; and I do believe your Majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

King. I wear it for a memorable honour; For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash vour Majesty's Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that. Got pless it and preserve it as long as it pleases his Grace and his Majesty too!

King. Thanks, good my countryman. Flu. By Jeshu, I am your Majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the 'orld: I need not he asham'd of your Majesty, praised be Got, so long as your Majesty is an honest man.

Enter WILLIAMS.

King. God keep me so! Our heralds go with him:

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the King.

King Soldier, why wear'st thou that Wear it myself, giove in thy cap?

Warwick:

Will. An't please your Majesty, 'tis the If that the soldier strike him, as I judge be alive.

King. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your Majesty, a rascal that swagger'd with me last night; who, if 'a live and ever dare to challenge this glove. I have sworn to take him a box o' th' ear: or if I can see my glove in his cap-which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive-I will strike it out soundly.

King. What think you, Captain Fluellen. is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else. an't please your Majesty, in my conscience. King. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the Devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your Grace, that he keep his vow and his oath: if he be perjur'd, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jacksauce as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la.

King. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live. King. Who serv'st thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege. Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literatured in the wars. King. Call him hither to me, soldier. 746

Will. I will, my hege. IExit. King, Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap, when Alençon and myself were down together, I pluck'd this glove from his helm. If any man challenge this, he is a triend to Alencon and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.

Your Grace does me as great honours as can be desir'd in the hearts of his subjects. I would tain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himself aggrief'd at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once, an please God of his grace that I might see.

King. Know'st thou Gower? Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you. King. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will letch him. Exit.

King. My Lord of Warwick and my brother Gloucester, Follow Fluellen closely at the heels; The glove which I have given him for a favour [Exeunt Heralds with Montjoy. May haply purchase him a box o' th' ear. It is the soldier's: I, by bargain, should Follow, good cousin Warwick:

580

By his blunt bearing he will keep his word Some sudden mischief may arise of it; For I do know Fluellen valiant,

And touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder And quickly will return an injury; 27 Follow, and see there be no harm between them.

Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt

Scene VIII. Before King Henry's pavilion Enter Gower and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you Captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. God's will and his pleasure, Captain I beseech you now, come apace to the King: there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove? I know the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it. [Strikes him

Flu. 'Sblood, an airant traitor as any's in the universal world, or in France, or in England!

Gow. How now, sir! you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn? Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his Majesty's name, apprehend him: he's a friend of the Duke Alençon's.

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is—praised be God for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his Majesty.

Enter the KING and EXETER.

King. How now! what's the matter? Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a trattor, that, look your Grace, has struck the glove which your Majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove: here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promis'd to wear it in his cap; I promis'd to strike him if he did; I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your Majesty hear now, saving your Majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is; I hope your Majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and will avouchment, that this is the glove of Alençon that your Majesty is give me; in your conscience, now.

King. Give me thy glove, soldier; look, here is the fellow of it.

'Twas I, indeed, thou promised'st to strike, And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An please your Majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.

King How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my loid, come from the heart: never came any from mine that might offend your Majesty.

King. It was ourself thou didst abuse. 48 Will. Your Majesty came not like yourself: you appear'd to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your Highness suffer'd under that shape I beseech you take it for your own fault, and not mine; for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your Highness pardon me.

King. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns.

And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow;

And wear it for an honour in thy cap
Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns;
And, Captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly: hold, there is twelve pence for you; and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I wairant you, it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a good will; I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shoes. Come, wherefore should you be so pashful? your shoes is not so good, 'tis a good silling, I warrant you, or I will change it. 70

Enter an English Herald.

King. Now, herald, are the dead numb'red?

Her. Here is the number of the slaught'red French. [Gives a paper. King. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to

the King;
John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciqualt;
75

Of other lords and barons, knights and squires,

Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

King. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French

KING HENRY THE FIFTH

That in the field lie slain; of princes, in this number,

And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead One hundred twenty-six; added to these, Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen.

Eight thousand and four hundred: of the which

Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights. So that, in these ten thousand they have lost. There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries;

The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,

And gentlemen of blood and quality. The names of those their nobles that lie dead: Charles Delabreth, High Constable France;

Jaques of Chatillon, Admiral of France; The master of the cross-bows, Lord Rambures;

Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dolphin;

John Duke of Alencon; Antony Duke of Heave him away Brabant,

The brother to the Duke of Burgundy; 95 And Edward Duke of Bar. Of lusty earls, Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconbridge and Foix, Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrake.

Here was a royal fellowship of death! Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another paper. Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk.

Sir Richard Kikely, Davy Gam, Esquire; None else of name; and of all other men But five and twenty. O God, thy arm was here!

And not to us, but to thy arm alone, 105 Ascribe we all. When, without stratagem, But in plain shock and even play of battle, Was ever known so great and little loss On one part and on th' other? Take it, God.

For it is none but thine.

'Tis wonderful! 110 Exe. King. Come, go we in procession to the village;

And be it death proclaimed through our Scene I. France. The English camp. Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things. I will tell you, ass my friend, Captain Gower: the rascally, scald, beggarly, lousy, plagging knave, Pistol—which you and yourself and all the world know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits-he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt vesterday, look you, and bid me cat my leek; it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter PISTOL.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Flu. Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God pless you, Aunchient Pistol I you scurvy, lousy knave, God pless vou!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? Dost thou thirst, base Troyan,

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web? 19 Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his live in the meantime, and eat your victuals; come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again] You call'd me yesterday mountainsquite; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you fall to; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek. 75

Gow. Enough, Captain, you have astonish'd him.

Flu. I say I will make lam eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his rate four days. Bite, I play you, it is good for your green wound and your ploody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt. and out of question too, and amiguities. Pist. By this leek, I will most hornbly revenge—I eat and eat, I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you; will you have some more sauce to your leek? There is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel: thou dost see I

Flu. Much good do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you throw none away : the skin is good for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is good. Hold you, there is a great to heal your pate. Pist. Me a great!

Flu. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of 13 levenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything I will pay you in cudgels; you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God bye you, and keep you, and heal your IÉxit. pate.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this. you are a counterfeit Gow. Go, go; cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought. because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel; you find it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. here with us; She is our capital demand, compris'd Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but the King, Katherine, and Alice.

Fair Katherine, and most fair, Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms Such as will enter at a lady's ear, And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your Majesty shall mock at me;

I cannot speak your England.

King. O fair Katherine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell vat is like me.

King. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges?

Alice. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grace, ainsi dit-11.

King. I said so, dear Katherine, and I must not blush to affirm it.

hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

be full of deceits—dat is de Princess. 120 King. The Princess is the better Englishwoman. I'faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for love the enemy of France, Kate, but in thy understanding: I am glad thou canst loving me you should love the friend of speak no better English; for if thou France; for I love France so well that I couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plane king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say 'I love you'. Then, if you uige me farther than to say 'Do you in faith?' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; i'taith, do; and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you, lady?

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, me understand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to verses or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me; for the one I have neither words nor measure, and for the other I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting mio my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my hoise for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off. But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my elsquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till 96 urg'd, nor never break for urging. If thou canst for a a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eve be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier. If thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die is true-but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou hy'st, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy; for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater: a rhyme is but a ballad. A good lee will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white; a curl'd pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow. But a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or, rather, the sun, and not the moon-tor it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what say'st thou, then, to my King. What says she, fair one? that the love? Speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould love de enemy of France?

King. No, it is not possible you should will not part with a village of it: I will visage. Now bestrew my father's ambition & have it all mine. And, Kate, when France He was thinking of civil wars when he got is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine. 175

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

King. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Je quand sur le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de moi-let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!-donc votre est France et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le Français que vous parlez, il est meilleur que l'Anglais lequel je paile.

King. No, faith, is't not, Kate; but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English-Canst thou love

Kath. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me; and at night, when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart. But, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle Princess, because I love thee cruelly. ever thou beest mine, Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? Shall we not? What say'st thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

King. No: 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise; do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katherine du monde, mon tres chèr et divin décase ?

Kath. Your Majestee ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage damoiselle dat is en France.

King. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate; by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my find-faults—as I will do yours for upholding me; therefore was I created with a stubboin outside, with an aspect of iron. that when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax. the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty. can do no more spoil upon my face; thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst : and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katherine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress : take me by the hand and say 'Harry of England, I am thine'. Which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal but I will tell thee aloud 'England is thine. Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine '; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music—for thy voice is music and thy English broken; therefore, Queen of all, Katherine, break thy mind to me in broken English, wilt thou have me? Kath. Dat is as it shall please de roi mon

King, Nay, it will please him well, Kate —it shall please him, Kate.

Kath, Den it sall also content me.

King. Upon that I kiss your hand, and

I call you my queen. Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez! Ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissiez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une, notre seigneur, indigne serviteur; excusez-moi, je vous supplie, mon très [Kissing her] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Henry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the FRENCH POWER and the ENGLISH LORDS.

Bur. God save your Majesty! My 10yal cousin.

Teach you our princess English?

King. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

King. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her, then, being a maid yet ros'd over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign

King. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excus'd, my lord when they see not what they do.

King. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning; for maids well summer'd and warm kept are like flies at Bartholomewtide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

King. It is so; and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspectively, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never ent'red.

King. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

King. I am content, so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her; so the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will. Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

King. Is't so, my lords of England? West. The king hath granted every

ACT ONE

Scene I. Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. Enter the funeral of King Henry the Fifth, attended on by the DUKE OF BEDFORD, Regent of France, the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, Protector, the DUKE OF EXETER, the EARL OF WARWICK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,

Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky And with them scourge the bad revolting

That have consented unto Henry's death! King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long I England ne'er lost a king of so much worth. Glo. England ne'er had a king until his time.

Virtue he had, deserving to command;

His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;

His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings: His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful

More dazzled and drove back his enemies Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.

What should I say? His deeds exceed all speech:

He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered. Exe. We mourn in black; why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead and never shall revive. Upon a wooden coffin we attend: And death's dishonourable victory We with our stately presence glorify, Like captives bound to a triumphant car. What! shall we curse the planets of mishap That plotted thus our glory's overthrow? Or shall we think the subtle-witted French Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him, By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

So dreadful will not be as was his sight. 30 The battles of the Lord of Hosts he fought; The Church's prayers made him so proschurchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd. None do you like but an effeminate prince, Whom like a school-boy you may overawe. Win. Gloucester, whate'er we like, thou art Protector And lookest to command the Prince and realm.

More than God or religious churchmen may. Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh: And ne'er throughout the year to church Give me my steeled coat; I'll fight for thou go'st.

Except it be to pray against thy foes. Bed. Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace;

Let's to the altar. Heralds, wait on us. 45 Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms, Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.

Posterity, await for wretched years, babes shall suck.

Our isle be made a nourish of salt tears, so And none but women left to wail the dead. Henry the Fifth, thy ghost I invocate: Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils, Combat with adverse planets in the heavens.

A far more glorious star thy soul will make Than Julius Cæsar or bright-

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all !

Sad tidings bring I to you out of France, Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture: Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans, 60 Paris, Guysors, Poictiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's corse?

Speak softly, or the loss of those great towns

Will make him burst his lead and rise from death.

Glo. Is Paris lost? Is Rouen yielded up? I must inform you of a dismal fight If Henry were recall'd to life again, These news would cause him once more: yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? What treachery was us'd?

Mess. No treachery, but want of men and

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King That here you maintain several factions: And whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,

You are disputing of your generals:

One would have ling'ting wars, with little

Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings: A third thinks, without expense at all, 76 Glo. The Church! Where is it? Had not By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.

Awake, awake, English nobility! Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot. Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;

Of England's coat one half is cut away. Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funcial. Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe These tidings would call forth their flowing udes. Bed. Me they concern: Regent I am of France.

France.

Away with these disgraceful wailing robes! Wounds will I lend the French instead of eves.

To weep their intermissive miseries.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters full of bad mischance.

When at their mothers' moist'ned eyes France is revolted from the English quite, Except some petty towns of no import. 91 The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims;

The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd: Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his

The Duke of Aknçon flieth to his side. Exe. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to him

O, whither shall we fly from this reproach? Glo. We will not fly but to our enemies' throats.

Bedford, if thou be slack I'll fight it out. Bed. Gloucester, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness? An army have I muster'd in my thoughts, Enter a third Messenger.

Wherewith already France is overrun.

3 Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments.

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's hearse,

66 Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.

Wm. What! Wherein Talbot overcame? Is't so?

3 Mess. O, no; wherein Lord Talbot was o'erthrown.

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large. Amongst the soldiers this is muttered-70 The tenth of August last this dreadful lord, Retiring from the siege of Orleans, In Having full scarce six thousand in his troop, By three and twenty thousand of the French

Was round encompassed and set upon.
No leisure had he to enrank his men; 115
He wanted pikes to set before his archers;
Instead whereof sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedges

They pitched in the ground confusedly
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued;
Where valuant Talbot, above human thought,

Enacted wonders with his sword and lance: Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him;

Here, there, and everywhere, enrag'd he slew-

The French exclaim'd the devil was in arms:

All the whole army stood agaz'd on him. His soldiers, spying his undaunted spiit, 'A Talbot! a Talbot!' cried out amain, And rush'd into the bowels of the battle. Here had the conquest fully been scal'd up If Sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward.

He, being in the vaward—plac'd behind With purpose to relieve and follow them—Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke:

Hence grew the general wreck and massacre. Eaclosed were they with their enemies. 136 A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace,

Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;
Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength,

Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? Then I will slay myself,

For living idly here in pomp and ease,
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd.

3 Mess. O no, he lives, but is took prisoner, 145 And Lord Scales with him, and Lord

Hungerford;
Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay.

I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne;

His crown shall be the ransom of my friend; Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.

Farewell, my masters; to my task will I; Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make To keep our great Saint George's feast withal.

Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,

Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe op, quake.

3 Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is besieg'd;

The English army is grown weak and faint; The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply

And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, 160 Since they, so few, watch such a multitude. Exe. Remember, lords, your oaths to

Henry sworn,
Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,

Either to quell the Dauphin utterly, Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it, and here take my leave 163
To go about my preparation. [Exit.

Glo. I'll to the Tower with all the haste

To view th' artillery and munition;
And then I will proclaim young Henry king.

[Exit. Exe. To Eltham will I, where the young

King is,
Being ordain'd his special governor;

And for his safety there I'll best devise.

[Exit.

Win. [Aside] Each hath his place and function to attend:

I am left out; for me nothing remains.

But long I will not be Jack out of office, 175. The King from Eltham I intend to steal, And sit at chiefest stern of public weal.

[Execunt.]

Scene II. France. Before Orleans.

Sound a flourish. Enter Charles the Dauphin, Alençon, and Reignier, marching with drum and Soldiers.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens

So in the earth, to this day is not known. Late did he shine upon the English side; Now we are victors, upon us he smiles.

What towns of any moment but we have? 5 At pleasure here we lie near Orleans; Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts.

Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Alen. They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves.

Either they must be dieted like mules 10

And have their provender tied to their mouths,

Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice.

Reig. Let's raise the siege. Why live we idly here?

Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear; Remaineth none but mad-brain*d Salisbury, 15

And he may well in fretting spend his gall— Nor men nor money hath he to make war. Char. Sound, sound alarum; we will rush on them. Now for the honour of the forlorn French Him I forgive my death that killeth me, ... When he sees me go back one foot or flee. (Exeunt.

Here alarum. They are beaten back by the English, with great toss. Re-enter CHARLES. ALENCON, and REIGNIER.

Char. Who ever saw the like? What men have I!

Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled

But that they left me midst my enemies. Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide; He fighteth as one weary of his life. The other lords, like hons wanting food. Do rush upon us as their hungry prev. Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours records England all Olivers and Rowlands bred 30 During the time Edward the Third did ieign.

More truly now may this be verified; For none but Samsons and Gohases It sendeth forth to skirmish.

Lean raw-bon'd rascals! Who would e'er suppose

They had such courage and audacity? Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hare-brain'd slaves,

And hunger will enforce them to be more eager.

Of old I know them; rather with their

The walls they'll tear down than forsake the siege.

Reig. I think by some odd gimmers or device

Their arms are set, like clocks, still to strike on:

Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do. By my consent, we'll even let them alone. Alen. Be it so.

Enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS.

Bast. Where's the Prince Dauphin? have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome

Bast. Methinks your looks are sail, your cheer appall'd.

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?

Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand. 50 A holy maid hither with me I bring. Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven, Ordained is to raise this tedious siege And drive the English forth the bounds of France.

The spirit of deep prophecy she hath, Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome: What's past and what's to come she can Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each descry.

Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words.

For they are certain and unfallible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard] But first, to try her skill. Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place;

Question her proudly; let thy looks be stein;

By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

Re-enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, with JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Reig. Fair maid, is 't thou wilt do these wondrous feats?

Puc. Reignier, is 't thou that thinkest to beguile me?

Where is the Dauphin? Come, come from behind;

I know thee well, though never seen before. Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me. In private will I talk with thee apart. Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,

My wit untrain'd in any kind of art. Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd

To shine on my contemptible estate. Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs And to sun's parching heat display'd my checks,

God's Mother deigned to appear to me. And in a vision full of majesty Will'd me to leave my base vocation And free my country from calamity-Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success. In complete glory she reveal'd herselt; And whereas I was black and swart before. With those clear rays which she infus'd on

That beauty am I bless'd with which you may see.

Ask me what question thou canst possible. And I will answer unpremeditated. My courage try by combat if thou dar'st, And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex. 40 Resolve on this: thou shalt be fortunate If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms.

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make-In single combat thou shalt buckle with me; And if thou vanquishest, thy words are Otherwise I renounce all confidence. Puc. I am prepar'd; here is my keen-edg'd sword, side.

The which at Touraine, in Saint Katherine's churchvard.

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth. Char. Then come, o' God's name; I fear no woman.

Puc. And while I live I'll ne'er fly from [Here they fight and Joan la Pucelle overcomes.

Char. Stay, stay thy hands; thou art an Amazon.

And fightest with the sword of Deborah. Puc. Christ's Mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me.

Impatiently I burn with thy desire; My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so, Let me thy servant and not sovereign be. 'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love, For my profession's sacred from above. When I have chased all thy foes from hence, Then will I think upon a recompense. Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall. Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk. Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock:

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech. Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean?

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know: These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

devise you on?

Shall we give o'er Orleans, or no? 125 Puc. Why, no, I say; distrustful recreants!

guard. Char. What she says I'll confirm; we'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise. 130 Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days, Since I have entered into these wars. Glory is like a circle in the water, Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought. With Henry's death the English circle ends Dispersed are the glories it included. Now am I like that proud insulting ship Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours:

Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd.

Char. Presently we'll try. Come, let's away about it.

No prophet will I trust if she prove false. 150 [Exeunt.

SCENE III. London. Before the Tower gates. Enter the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, with his Serving-men in blue coats. Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day; Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance. Where be these warders that they wait not here?

Open the gates; 'tis Gloucester that calls. Ward. [Within] Who's there that knocks so imperiously? 1 Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester. 2 Ward. [Within] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

1 Serv. Villains, answer you so the Lord Protector?

1 Ward. [Within] The Lord protect him! so we answer him.

Reig. My lord, where are you? What We do no otherwise than we are will'd. Glo. Who willed you, or whose will stands but mine?

There's none Protector of the realm but I. Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize. Fight till the last gasp; I will be your Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

[Gloucester's men rush at the Tower gates, and Woodville the Lieutenant speaks within.

Wood. [Within] What noise is this? What traitors have we here? Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear? Open the gates; here's Gloucester that would enter. Wood. [Within] Have patience, noble

Duke, I may not open; The Cardinal of Winchester foibids.

From him I have express commandment 20 That thou nor none of thine shall be let in. Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him fore me? Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate

Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook!

Thou art no friend to God or to the King. 25 Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly. Lord Protector.

Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower gates WINCHESTER and his Men in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphry! What means this?

Glo. Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?

Win. I do, thou most usurping produtor, And not Protector of the King or realm.

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator,

Thou that contrived'st to murder our dead lord; Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin.

I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat, If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot.

This be Dainascus; be thou cursed Cain, To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt. 40 Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back.

I'll use to carry thee out or this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I beard thee to thy face. Glo. What! am I dar'd and bearded to m r face?

Draw, men, for all this privileged place-Blue-coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware vour beard:

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly; Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat; In spite of Pope or dignities of church, 50 Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloucester, thou wilt answer this For I intend to have it ere long. before the Pope.

Glo. Winchester goose! I cry 'A rope, a rope!

Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay?

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array. Out, tawny-coats! Out, scarlet hypocrite!

Here Gloucester's men beat out the Cardinal's men: and enter in the hurly-burly the MAYOR of London, and his Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,

Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

Glo. Peace, Mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs:

Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim. Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens: One that still motions war and never peace. Serving-men. Open the gates unto the O'ercharging your free purses with large fines;

That seeks to overthrow religion. Because he is Protector of the realm.

And would have armour here out of the Tower.

To crown himself King and suppress the Prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words. but blows.

[Here they skirmish again. May. Nought tests for me in this tumultuous strife

But to make open proclamation. Come, officer, as loud as e'er thou canst.

Cry. Off. [Cries] All manner of men assembled here in aims this day against God's peace and the King's, we charge and command you, in his Highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death. Glo. Cardinal. I'll be no breaker of the law:

Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth. But we shall meet and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloucester, we'll meet to thy cost. be sure:

Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.

May. I'll call for clubs if you will not away.

This Cardinal's more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, farewell; thou dost but what thou mayst.

Win. Abominable Glovcester, guard thy head,

[Excunt, severally, Gloucester and Winchester with their Servants.

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.

God, these nobles should such Good stomachs bear!

I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.

Before Orleans. SCENE IV. France.

Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner of Orleans and his Boy.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,

And how the English have the suburbs won. Boy. Father, I know; and off have shot at them.

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. thou rul'd by me.

Chief master-gunner am I of this town; Something I must do to procure me grace. The Prince's espials have informed me How the English, in the suburbs close infrench'd.

Wont, through a secret grate of iron bars 10 ln yonder tower, to overpeer the city, And thence discover how with most advantage

They may vex us with shot or with assault. To intercept this inconvenience,

A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;

And even these three days have I watch'd It I could see them. Now do thou watch, For I can stay no longer.

If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word; And thou shalt find me at the Governor's. 20

Boy. Father, I warrant you; take you no care;

I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them. IExit.

Enter Salisbury and Talbot on the turrets, with Sir William Glandsdale, Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd!

How wert thou handled being prisoner?
Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd?

Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top. Tal. The Earl of Bedford had a prisoner Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santrailles; For him was I exchang'd and ransomed. But with a baser man of arms by far 30 Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd me;

Which I disdaining scorn'd, and craved death

Rather than I would be so vile esteem'd. In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.

But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart;

Whom with my bare fists I would execute, If I now had him brought into my power. Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelious taunts.

In open market-place produc'd they me 40
To be a public spectacle to all;
Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
The scarecrow that affrights our children so.
Then broke I from the officers that led me,
And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground
45

To hurl at the beholders of my shame; My grisly countenance made others fly; None durst come near for fear of sudden

In iron walls they deem'd me not secure; So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread 50 That they supposed I could rend bars of steel

And spurn in pieces posts of adamant; Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had That walk'd about me every munule-while; And if I did but stir out of my bed, 55 Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a linstock.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd;

But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now it is supper-time in Oileans:

Here, through this grate, I count each one
And view the Frenchmen how they fortify.

Let us look in; the sight will much delight

Sir Thomas Gargrave and Sir William Glansdale.

Let me have your express opinions Where is best place to make our batt'ry next.

Gar. I think at the North Gate; for there stand lords.

Glan. And I here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd.

Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Here they shoot and Salisbury and Gargrave fall down.

Sat. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sumers!

Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us?

Speak, Salisbury, at least, if thou canst speak.

How far st thou, mirror of all martial men?
One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck of! 75

Accursed tower! accursed fatel hand
That hath contriv'd this wortul tragedy!
In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame;
Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars;
Whilst any trump did sound or drum struck up,

80

His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field.

Yet lix'st thou, Salisbury? Though thy speech doth fail,

One eye thou hast to look to heaven for grace;

The sun with one eye vieweth all the world. Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive by It Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands! Bear hence his body. I will help to bury it. Sir Thoinas Gargrave, hast thou any life? Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him. Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort.

Thou shalt not die whiles— He beckons with his hand and smiles on me, As who should say 'When I am dead and gone.

Remember to avenge me on the French'. Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, Nero, os Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn. Wretched shall France be only in my name. [Here an alarum, and it thunders what stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?

Whence cometh this alarum and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have

The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd.

A holy prophetess new risen up,

Is come with a great power to raise the siege. [Here Salisbury lifteth himself up and groans.

Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan.

It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd. 205 Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you. Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish.

Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels

And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.

Convey me Salisbury into his tent, 170 And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare. [Alarum. Exeunt.

Scene V. Before Orleans.

Here an alarum again, and TALBOT pursueth the DAUPHIN and driveth him. Then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE driving Englishmen before her. Then enter TALBOT.

Tal Where is my strength, my valour and my force?

Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;

A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Enter LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee.

Devil or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee; Blood will I draw on thee—thou art a witch—

And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee. [Here they fight. Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?

My breast I'll burst with straining of m courage,

And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,

But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet. [They fight again Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come.

must go victual Orleans forthwith.
[A short alarum; then enter the town with soldiers.

'ertake me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.

Go, go, cheer up thy hungry starved men;

rielp Salisbury to make his testament. This day is ours, as many more shall be.

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel:

know not where I am nor what I do. 20 A witch by fear, not force, like Hannibal, Drives back our troops and conquers as she lists.

So bees with smoke and doves with noisome stench

Are from their hives and houses driven away.

They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs;

Now like to whelps we crying run away.

[A short alarum,
Hark, countrymen! Either renew the fight
Or tear the lions out of Forder when the fight

Or tear the lions out of England's coat; Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:

Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,
Or horse or oxen from the leopard,

As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarum. Here another skirmish.

It will not be—retire into your trenches.

You all consented unto Salisbury's death,

For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.

Pucelle is ent'red into Orleans

In spite of us or aught that we could do.

O, would I were to die with Salisbury!

The shame hereof will make me hide my head. [Exit Taibot. Alarum; retreat,

SCENE VI. Orleans.

Flourish. Enter on the walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;

Rescu'd is Orleans from the English.

Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, Astræa's daughter,

How shall I honour thee for this success ? 5 Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens, That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess. Recover'd is the town of Orleans. More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state, Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town? Dauphin, command the citizens bonfires

And feast and banquet in the open streets If underneath the standard of the French To celebrate the joy that God hath given us. Alen All France will be replete with mirth and joy When they shall hear how we have play'd God is our fortress, in whose conquering the men. Char 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won: For which I will divide my crown with her; And all the priests and friars in my realm Shall in procession sing her endless praise. A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear Than Rhodope's of Memphis ever was. In memory of her, when she is dead, Her ashes, in an urn more precious Than the 11ch jewell'd coffer of Darius, Transported shall be at high festivals Before the kings and queens of France. No longer on Saint Denis will we cry. But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint. Come in, and let us banquet royally After this golden day of victory. [Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Before Orleans.

Enter a French Sergeant and two Sentinels.

Sergt. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant.

If any noise or soldier you perceive Near to the walls, by some apparent sign Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

1 Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergt.] Thus are poor servitors,

When others sleep upon their quiet beds, Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces, with scaling-ladders; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy.

By whose approach the regions of Artois, Wallon, and Picardy, are friends to us, 10 This happy night the Frenchmen are secure, Having all day carous'd and banqueted; Embrace we then this opportunity, As fitting best to quittance their deceit, Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery. Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame, Despairing of his own arm's fortitude, To join with witches and the help of hell! Bur. Traitors have never other company. But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and be so martial! Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long.

She carry armour as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits:

name

Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks. Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together; better far, I guess, That we do make our entrance several ways: That if it chance the one of us do fail

The other yet may rise against their force. Bed. Agreed; I'll to youd corner. Bur.

And I to this. Tal. And here will Talbot mount or make his grave.

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right Of English Henry, shall this night appear How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls and cry ' Saint George! a Talbot!' Sent. Arm! arm! The enemy doth make assault.

The French leap o'er the walls in their shirts. Enter, several ways, BASTARD, ALENCON, REIGNIER, half ready and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords? What, all unready so?

Bast. Unready! Ay, and glad we 'scap'd so well.

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds.

Hearing alarums at our chamber doors. Alen. Of all exploits since first I follow'd arms

Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise

More venturous or desperate than this. 45 Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles; I marvel how he sped.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,

Make us partakers of a little gain That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend? At all times will you have my power alike?

Sleeping or waking, must I still prevail, Or will you blame and lay the fault on me? Improvident soldiers! been good fall'n.

default 60

That, being captain of the watch to-night Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept

As that whereof I had the government, 64 We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd. Bast. Mine was secure.

And so was mine, my lord. Reig. Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct I was employ'd in passing to and fro

About relieving of the sentinels.

Then how or which way should they first break in? Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case, How or which way; 'tis sure they found some place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.

And now there rests no other shift but To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd, And lay new platforms to endamage them.

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying A Talbot! A Talbot!' They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword; For I have loaden me with many spoils, 80 Using no other weapon but his name.

SCENE II. Orleans. Within the town. Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, a Captain, and Others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth. Here sound retreat and cease our hot pursuit. [Retreat sounded.

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury And here advance it in the market-place, 5 The middle centre of this cursed town. Now have I paid my vow unto his soul; For every drop of blood was drawn from

There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold What ruin happened in revenge of him, Within their chiefest temple I'll erect A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd;

Had your watch Upon the which, that every one may read. Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans, 15 This sudden mischief never could have The treacherous manner of his mournful death, Char. Duke of Alencon, this was your And what a terror he had been to France. But, lords, in all our bloody massacre.

I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace,

His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc.

Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Rous'd on the sudden from ...eir drowsy beds.

They did amongst the troops of aimed men Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field, 25

Bur. Myself, as far as I could well discern For smoke and dusky vapours of the night. Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull. When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves That could not live asunder day or night. After that things are set in order here, We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train

Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts 35 So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown, By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe

To visit her poor castle where she lies. That she may boast she hath beheld the Whose glory fills the world with loud report. Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then I see our

Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport. When ladies crave to be encount'red with. You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men

Could not prevail with all their oratory. Yet hath a woman's kindness overrul'd: 50 And therefore tell her I return great thanks And in submission will attend on her.

Will not your honours bear me company? Bed. No, truly; 'tis more than manners will;

And I have heard it said unbidden guests Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,

598

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy. Come hither, Captain. [Whispers! You perceive my mind?

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly. [Exeunt.

Scene III. Auvergne. The castle.

Enter the Countess and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge:

And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will.

TExit. Count. The plot is laid; if all things fall out right,

I shall as famous be by this exploit

As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus' death. Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight, And his achievements of no less account. Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine

To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and TALBOT.

Mess. Madam, according as your ladyship desir'd.

By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbor come.

Count. And he is welcome. What! is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France? 15 Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad That with his name the mothers still their babes?

I see report is fabulous and false.

I thought I should have seen some Hercules, A second Hector, for his grim aspect And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.

Alas, this is a child, a silly dwarf! It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you;

But since your ladyship is not at leisure. I'll sort some other time to visit you.

[Going. whither he goes.

lady craves

To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief.

I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! To whom?

Count.

And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.

Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to

For in my gallery thy picture hangs;

But now the substance shall endure the like And I will chain these legs and arms of thine

That hast by tyranny these many years 40 Wasted our country, slain our citizens, And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? Thu muth shall turn to moan. . il. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond To think that you have aught but Talbot's

shadcw

Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man? I am indeed. Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself. You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;

For what you see is but the smallest part And least proportion of humanity.

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,

It is of such a spacious lofty patch Your roof were not sufficient to contain 't. Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce:

He will be here, and yet he is not here. How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently. 60

Winds his horn; drums strike up; a peal of ordnance. Enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? Are you now persuaded

That Talbot is but shadow of himself? These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks. Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns.

And in a moment makes them desolate. Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse.

Count. What means he now? Go ask him I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited.

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot; for my And more than may be gathered by thy shape.

Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath,

For I am sorry that with reverence I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconster

The mind of Talbot as you did mistake The outward composition of his body. What you have done hath not offended me. Nor other satisfaction do I crave

To me, blood-thirsty lord: But only, with your patience, that we may have.

For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured

To feast so great a warrior in my house. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. The Temple garden.

Enter the EARLS OF SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth? Suf. Within the Temple Hall we were too loud:

The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth:

Or else was wrangling Somerset in th' error? Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the

And never yet could frame my will to it; And therefore frame the law unto my will. Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth:

Between two blades, which bears the better temper; Between two horses, which doth bear him best:

Between two girls, which hath the merriest

I have perhaps some shallow spirit of judgment:

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law, Good faith. I am no wiser than a daw.

Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:

The truth appears so naked on my side 20 That any purblind eye may find it out. Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd.

So clear, so shining, and so evident, That it will glimmer through a blind man's Plan. Since you are tongue-tied and so loath to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts.

Let him that is a true-born gentleman And stands upon the honour of his birth, If he suppose that I have pleaded truth, From off this brier pluck a white rose with me. Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth, Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Taste of your wine and see what cates you Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery, I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somerset,

And say withal I think he held the right. Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck no more Till you conclude that he upon whose side The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected:

If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence. Plan. And I.

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here. Giving my verdict on the white rose side. Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off.

Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose

And fall on my side so, against your will. Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed. Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt

And keep me on the side where still I am. Som. Well, well, come on; who else? 55 Law. [To Somerset] Unless my study and my books be false,

The argument you held was wrong in you: In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here in my scabbard, meditating that Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red. Plan. Meantime your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet. 'Tis not for fear but anger that thy cheeks Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,

And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;

Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses,

That shall maintain what I have said is true,

600

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in m hand,

I scorn thee and thy fashion, peevish boy Suf. Turn not thy scorns this way Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Pole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away, good William de la Pole!

We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong's him, Somerset;

His grandfather was Lionel Duke of Clarence,

Third son to the third Edward, King o England.

Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root?

Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,

Or durst not for his craven heart say thus

Som. By Him that made me, I'll maintain my words

On any plot of ground in Christendom.

Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge,

For treason executed in our late king's days?

And by his treason stand'st not thou attainted,

Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?

His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood; And till thou be restor'd thou art a yeoman. Plan. My father was attached, not attainted;

Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;

And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,

Were growing time once ripened to my will. For your partaker Pole, and you yourself, I'll note you in my book of memory 101 To scourge you for this apprehension. Look to it well, and say you are well warn'd.

Som. Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee still;

And know us by these colours for thy foes— For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,

As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate, Will I for ever, and my faction, wear, Until it wither with me to my grave, rro Or flourish to the height of my degree. Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition!

And so farewell until I meet thee next.

[Exit.

Som. Have with thee, Pole. Faiewell ambitious Richard. [Exit. Plan. How I am biav'd, and must perforce endure it! 115 War. This blot that they object against your house Shall be wip'd out in the next Parliament, Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester; And if thou be not then created York, I will not live to be accounted Warwick. 120 Meantime, in signal of my love to thee, Against proud Somerset and William Pole.

Against proud Somerset and William Pole, Will I upon thy party wear this lose; And here I prophesy: this brawl to-day, Grown to this faction in the Temple

Garden, Table Shall send between the Red Rose and the White

A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you

That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.

130

Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.

Come, let us four to dinner. I dare say This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt.

Scene V. The Tower of London.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a chair, and Gaolers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying

Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
Even like a man new haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment;
And these grey locks, the pursuivants
death.

Nestor-like aged in an age of care, Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,
Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;

Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;
Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief,

And pithless arms, like to a withered vine That droops his sapless branches to the ground.

Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb,

Unable to support this lump of clay, Swift-winged with desire to get a grave, 15 As witting I no other comfort have.

But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

1 Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come.

We sent unto the Temple, unto his chamber; satisfied.

60I

Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign.

Before whose glory I was great in arms, This loathsome sequestration have I had; And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd.

Depriv'd of honour and inheritance.

But now the arbitrator of despairs,

Just Death, kind umpire of men's miseries, With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence.

I would his troubles likewise were expir'd, That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

1 Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd, Your nephew, late despised Richard, comes. Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace lus neck

And in his bosom spend my latter gasp. O, tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks, That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. 40 And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,

Why didst thou say of late thou wert despis'd?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;

And, in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease. This day, in argument upon a case, Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me:

Among which terms he us'd his lavish tonzue

And did upbraid me with my father's death; Which obloquy set bais before my tongue, Else with the like I had requited him. Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake, In honour of a true Plantagenet,

And for alliance sake, declare the cause My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head. Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me

And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring youth

Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine, Was cursed instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was,

For I am ignorant and cannot guess. Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit

And death approach not ere my tale be Might but redeem the passage of your age!

Henry the Fourth, grandfather to this king. 602

And answer was return'd that he will come. Depos'd his nephew Richard, Edward's son. Mor. Enough; my soul shall then be The first-begotten and the lawful heir 65 Of Edward king, the third of that descent: Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal During whose reign the Percies of the north.

> Finding his usurpation most unjust. Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne.

The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this Was, for that---young Richard thus remov'd. Leaving no heir begotten of his body-I was the next by birth and parentage: For by my mother I derived am

From Lionel Duke of Clarence, third son 75 To King Edward the Third; whereas he From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigiee,

Being but fourth of that heroic line. But mark: as in this haughty great attempt

They laboured to plant t e rightful heir, 80 I lost my liberty, and they their lives. Long after this, when Henry the Fifth, Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign, Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of Marrying my sister, that thy mother was, Again, in pity of my hard distress, Levied an army, weening to redeem And have install'd me in the diadem ; But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl. 90 And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,

In whom the title rested, were suppress'd. Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest that I no issue have.

And that my fainting words do warrant death. Thou art my heir; the rest I wish thee gather; But yet be wary in thy studious care. Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me. But yet methinks my father's execution Was nothing less than bloody tyranny. 100 Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic; Strong fixed is the house of Lancaster And like a mountain not to be remov'd. But now thy uncle is removing hence,

As princes do their courts when they are cloy'd With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O uncle, would some part of my young years

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me, as that slaughterer doth

Which giveth many wounds when one will And for thy 1.0

Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good: Only give order for my funeral. And so, farewell; and fair be all thy hopes.

And prosperous be thy life in peace and wart Dies Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul!

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage, And like a hermit overpass'd thy days. Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast, And what I do imagine, let that rest. 110 Keepers, convey him hence; and I mivself Will see his burnal better than his life.

> [Exeunt Gaolers, bearing out the body of Mortimer.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer. Chok'd with ambition of the meaner soit: And for those wrongs, those bitter injuries, Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house, I doubt not but with honour to rediess; And therefore haste I to the Parliament, Either to be restored to my blood, Or make my ill th' advantage of my good. IExit.

ACT THREE

Scene I. London. The Parliament House.

Enter the King, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and Others Gloucester offers to put up a bill: Winchester snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premed:tated lines.

With written pamphlets studiously devis'd? Humphrey of Gloucester, if thou canst Touching thy spiritual function, not thy accuse

Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge, Do it without invention, suddenly;

As I with sudden and extemporal speech Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest, this place commands my patience,

Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd

Think not, although in writing I preferr'd The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes, That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen.

No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,

Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks,

As very infants prattle of thy pride. Thou art a most pernicious usurer; Froward by nature, enemy to peace; Lascivious. wanton, more than beseems

A man of thy profession and degree; treachery, what's more manifest-

In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life, As well at London Bridge as at the Tower? Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,

The King, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt

From envious malice of thy swelling heart. Win. Gloucestei, I do defy thee. Lords. vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply. If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse, As he will have me, how am I so poor? 30 Or how haps it I seek not to advance Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?

And for dissension, who preferreth peace More than I do, except I be provok'd? No, my good lords, it is not that offends; 35 It is not that that hath incens'd the Duke: It is because no one should sway but he: No one but he should be about the King; And that engenders thunder in his breast And makes him roar these accusations forth.

But he shall know I am as good--As good!

Thou bastard of my grandfather!

Win. Av. lordly sir; for what are you. I pray,

But one imperious in another's throne? Clo. Am I not Protector, saucy priest ? 45 Win. And am not I a prelate of the church?

Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps, And useth it to patronage his theft. Win. Unreverent Gloucester!

Glo. Thou art reverend life. Win. Rome shall remedy this.

War. Roam thither then. Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear. War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne. Som. Methinks my lord should religious, And know the office that belongs to such. 55 War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler:

It fitteth not a piclate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his hely state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy or unhallow'd, what or that?

Is not his Grace Protector to the King? 60 Plan. [Aside] Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue, Lest it be said 'Speak, sirrah, when you should:

well Must your bold veidet enter talk with lords?'

20 Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

chester. The special watchmen of our English weal, I would prevail, if prayers might prevail.

To join your hearts in love and amity. O. what a scandal is it to our crown That two such noble peers as ye should jar! Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell Civil dissension is a viperous worm That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.

[A noise within: Down with the tawny coats.

What tumult's this?

An uproar, I dare warrant, Begun through malice of the Bishop's men. IA noise again: Stones! Stones!

Enter the MAYOR of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,

Pity the city of London, pity us! The Bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's

Forbidden late to carry any weapon, Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones And, banding themselves in contrary parts, Do pelt so fast at one another's pate That many have their giddy brains knock'd

Our windows are broke down in every street.

And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops. 85

Enter in skirmish, the Retainers of Gloucester and Winchester, with bloody pates.

King. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself.

To hold your slaught'ring hands and keep the peace.

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife. 1 Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute. [Skirmish again. Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil,

And set this unaccustom'd fight aside. 3 Serv. My lord, we know your Grace to be a man

Just and upright, and for your royal birth Inferior to none but to his Majesty; And ere that we will suffer such a prince. So kind a father of the commonweal, To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate. We and our wives and children all will fight And have our bodies slaught'red by thy foes.

1 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our Shall pitch a field when we are dead. [Begin again.

Glo. Stay, stay, I say!

King. Uncles of Gloucester and of Win- And if you love me, as you say you do, Let me persuade you to forbear awhile. 105 King. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!

Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold My sighs and tears and will not once relent? Who should be pitiful, if you be not? Or who should study to prefer a peace, 110 If holy churchmen take delight in broils? War. Yield, my Lord Protector; yield.

Winchester;

Except you mean with obstinate repulse To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief, and what murder too, Hath been enacted through your enmity:

Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood. Win. He shall submit, or I will never

Glo. Compassion on the King commands me stoop. Or I would see his heart out ere the priest Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the Duke

Hath banish'd moody discontented fury, As by his smoothed brows it doth appear: Why look you still so stern and tragical? 125 Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand. King. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach That malice was a great and grievous sin: And will not you maintain the thing you teach.

But prove a chief offender in the same? War. Sweet King! The Bishop hath a kindly gird.

For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent; What, shall a child instruct you what to do? Win. Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;

Love for thy love and hand for hand I give. Glo. [Aside] Ay, but, I fear me, with a hollow heart .-

See here, my friends and loving countrymen:

This token serveth for a flag of truce Betwixt ourselves and all our followers. So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. [Aside] So help me God, as I intend it not!

King. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,

How joyful am I made by this contract! Away, my masters! trouble us no more: But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

1 Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's. 2 Serv. And so will I.

3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Servanis, Mayor, &c.

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious Which in the time of Henry nam'd the sovereign: 140 Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet

We do exhibit to your Majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick : for, sweet prince,

An if your Grace mark every circumstance. Especially for those occasions

At Eltham Place I told your Majesty. King. And those occasions, uncle, were of force: Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is That Richard be restored to his blood. War. Let Richard be restored to his blood: So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd. Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester. King. If Richard will be true, not that alone But all the whole inheritance I give That doth belong unto the house of York. From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience

And humble service till the point of death. King. Stoop then and set your knee against my toot;

And in reguerdon of that duty done I girt thee with the valiant sword of York. Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet. And rise created princely Duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy toes may tall!

And as my duty springs, so perish they 175 That grudge one thought against your Majesty!

All. Welcome, high Prince, the mighty Duke of York!

Som. [Aside] Perish, base Prince, ignoble Duke of York!

Glo. Now will it best avail your Majesty To cross the seas and to be crown'd in France:

The presence of a king engenders love Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends, As it disanimates his enemies.

King. When Gloucester says the word, King Henry goes;

For friendly counsel cuts off many foes. 185 Glo. Your ships already are in readiness. [Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt all but Exeter.

Exe. Ay, we may march in England or in France.

Not seeing what is likely to ensue. This late dissension grown betweet the peers Burns under teigned ashes of forg'd love 1.0 And will at last break out into a flame; As fest'red members rot but by degree Tall bones and flesh and sinews fall away, So will this base and envious discord breed. And now I fear that fatal prophecy

Fifth

Was in the mouth of every sucking babe: That Henry born at Monmouth should win

And Henry born at Windsor should lose all. Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish You have great reason to do Richard right; His days may finish ere that hapless time.

Scene II. France. Before Roven.

Enter LA PUCELLE disguis'd, with four Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen.

Through which our policy must make a breach.

Take heed, be wary how you place your words:

Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men That come to gather money for their corn. 5 If we have entrance, as I hope we shall, And that we find the slothful watch but I'll by a sign give notice to our friends. That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

1 Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,

And we be lords and rulers over Rouen: Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks.

Watch. [Within] Qui est là? Puc. Paysans, pauvres gens de France-Poor market-folks that come to sell their corn. Watch. Enter, go in; the market-bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground. ILa Pucelle, &c., enter the town.

Enter CHARLES, BASTARD, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Forces.

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem!

And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen. Bast. Here ent'red Pucelle and her practisants:

Now she is there, how will she specify Here is the best and safest passage in?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower;

Which once discern'd shows that her meaning is-

No way to that, for weakness, which she ent'red.

Enter LA PUCELLE, on the top, thrusting out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding

That joineth Rouen unto her countrymen,

605

But burning fatal to the Talbotites, [Exit. Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend:

The burning torch in yonder turret stands. Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,

A prophet to the fall of all our foes! dangerous ends:

Enter, and cry 'The Dauphin!' presently, And then do execution on the watch. [Alarum, Exeunt.

An alarum. Enter TALBOT in an excursion.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears,

If Talbot but survive thy treachery.

Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress, Hath wrought this hellish mischief un-

That hardly we escap'd the pride of France.

An alarum; excursions. Bedford brought in sick in a chair. Enter TALBOT and BURGUNDY without; within, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, BASTARD, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, on the walls.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants! Want ye corn for bread?

I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast Before he'll buy again at such a rate.

'Twas full of darnel—do you like the taste? Bur. Scoft on, vile fiend and shameless courtezan.

I trust ere long to choke thee with thine

And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your Grace may starve, perhaps, before that time.

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason!

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard? Break a lance,

And run a tilt at death within a chair? Tal. Foul fiend of France and hag of all despite, Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours, Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age 54 And twit with cowardice a man half dead? Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again, Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are ye so hot, sir? Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow. [The English party whisper together in council.

God speed the parliament! Who shall be the Speaker?

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field?

Puc. Belike your lordship takes us then for fools,

To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate. But unto thee, Alencon, and the rest. Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out? Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signioi, hang! Base muleteers of France!

Defer no time, delays have Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,

And dare not take up arms like gentlemen. Puc. Away, captains! Let's get us from the walls;

For Talbot means no goodness by his looks. God b'uy, my lord; we came but to tell vou

That we are here. [Exeunt from the walls. Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be

Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame! Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house. Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in France,

Either to get the town again or die; And I, as sure as English Henry lives And as his father here was conqueror, As sure as in this late-betrayed town Great Cœur-de-hon's heart was buried-So sure I swear to get the town or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy yows.

Tal. But ere we go, regard this dying prince, The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord. We will bestow you in some better place,

Fitter for sickness and for crazy age. Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour

Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen,

And will be partner of your weal or woe. Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I read

That stout Pendragon in his litter sick 95 Came to the field, and vanquished his foes. Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,

Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast! Then be it so. Heavens keep old Bedford safe!

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy, But gather we our forces out of hand And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt against the town all but Bedford and attendants.

An alarum; excursions. Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?

Fast. Whither away? To save myself by flight:

We are like to have the overthrow again. Cap. What! Will you fly, and leave Lord Talbot?

Fast.

All the Talbots in the world, to save my Cab. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow [Exit into the town. thee! Retreat: excursions. LA PUCELLE, ALENcon, and CHARLES fly.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven please,

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow. What is the trust or strength of foolish scoffs

Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Bedford dies and is carried in by two in his chair.

An alarum. Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY.

and the Rest. Tal. Lost and recovered in a day again! This is a double honour, Burgundy. Yet heavens have glory for this victory! Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy

Enshrines thee in his heart, and there erects Thy noble deeds as valour's monuments. 120 Tal. Thanks, gentle Duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old tamiliar is asleep.

Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What, all amout? Rouen hangs her head for grief

That such a valiant company are fled. 125 Now will we take some order in the town, Placing therein some expert officers; And then depart to Paris to the King,

For there young Herry with his nobles lie. Bur. What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget The noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd, But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen. A braver soldier never couched lance,

A gentler heart did never sway in court; 135 But kings and mightiest potentates must die.

For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.

Scene III. The blains near Rouen. Enter Charles, the Bastard, Alencon, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, Princes, at this accident,

Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered. Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,

For things that are not to be remedied. Let trantic Talbot triumph for a while s And like a peacock sweep along his tail; We'll pull his plumes and take away his train.

If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd. Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,

And of thy cunning had no diffidence: 18 One sudden foil shall never breed distrust Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies.

And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place.

They that of late were daring with their And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint.

Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise:

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sug'red words,

We will entice the Duke of Burgundy

To leave the Talbot and to follow us. Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that,

France were no place for Henry's warriors; Nor should that nation boast it so with

But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'u from France.

And not have title of an earldom here. Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work

To bring this matter to the wished end. [Drum sounds afar off.

Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive

Their powers are marching unto Paris-

Here sound an English march. Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,

And all the troops of English after him.

French march. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and his Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the Duke and his.

Fortune in favour makes him lag behind. Summon a parley; we will talk with him. [Trumpets sound a parley.

Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy! 36 Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!

Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious. Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,

And see the cities and the towns defac'd 45 By wasting ruin of the cruel foe; As looks the mother on her lowly babe When death doth close his tender dying

See, see the pining malady of France: Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds.

Which thou thyself hast given her woeful breast.

O, turn thy edged sword another way; Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help!

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore.

Return thee therefore with a flood of tears, And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,

Or nature makes me suddenly relent. Put. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee, Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny. Who join'st thou with but with a lordly

That will not trust thee but for profit's sake? When Talbot hath set footing once in France.

And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill. 65 Who then but English Henry will be lord, And thou be thrust out like a fugitive? Call we to mind-and mark but this for proof:

Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe? And was he not in England prisoner? But when they heard he was thine enemy They set him free without his ransom paid, In spite of Burgundy and all his friends. See then, thou fight'st against thy countrymen,

And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-

Come, come, return; return, thou wandering lord;

Charles and the rest will take thee in their aims.

Bur. I am vanquished: these haughty words of hers Have batt'red me like roaring cannon-shot We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury:

608

Bur, What say'st thou, Charles? for I am And made me almost yield upon my knees. Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!

And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace. My forces and my power of men are yours: So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust thec.

Puc. Done like a Frenchman-[Aside] turn and turn again.

Char. Welcome, brave Duke! Thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this.

And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers,

And seek how we may prejudice the foe. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Paris. The balace.

Enter the King, Gloucester, Winchester. YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK. EXETER, VERNON, BASSET, and Others. To them, with his Soldiers, TALBOT.

Tal. My gracious Prince, and honourable peers, Hearing of your arrival in this realm. I have awhile given truce unto my wars To do my duty to my sovereign;

In sign whereof, this arm that hath reclaim'd

To your obedience fifty fortresses. Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,

Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem, Lets fall his sword before your Highness'

And with submissive loyalty of heart Ascribes the glory of his conquest got First to my God and next unto your Grace.

King. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,

That hath so long been resident in France? Glo. Yes, if it please your Majesty, my liege.

King. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord!

When I was young, as yet I am not old, I do remember how my father said

A stouter champion never handled sword. Long since we were resolved of your truth, Your faithful service, and your toil in war;

Yet never have you tasted our reward, 22 Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks,

Because till now we never saw your face. Therefore stand up; and for these good deserts

And a our coronation take your place. [Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt all but Vernon and Basset.

Vel. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,

Disgracing of these colours that I wear In honour of my noble Lord of York-Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bas. Yes. sir; as well as you dare patronage

The envious barking of your saucy tongue Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is. 35 Bas. Why, what is he? As good a man as York!

Ver. Hark ye: not so. In witness take ve that. [Strikes him. Villain, thou knowest the law of Bas. arms is such

That whose draws a sword 'tis present death.

Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood.

But I'll unto his Majesty and crave I may have liberty to venge this wrong; When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy

Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as vou:

And, after, meet you sooner than you would. [Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. Paris. The balace.

Enter the KING, GLOUCESTER, WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, TALBOT, EXETER, the GOVERNOR of Paris, and Others.

Glo. Lord Bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save King Henry, of that name the Sixth!

Glo. Now, Governor of Paris, take your [Governor kneels. oath-That you elect no other king but him, Esteem none friends but such as are his friends, And none your foes but such as shall pretend Malicious practices against his state. This shall ye do, so help you rightrous God!

[Exeunt Governor and his Train.

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais, To haste unto your coronation, TO A letter was deliver'd to my hands, Writ to your Grace from th' Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee !

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next

To tear the Garter from thy craven's leg. 15 [Plucking it off.

Which I have done, because unworthily Thou wast installed in that high degree. Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest: This dastard, at the battle of Patay, When but in all I was six thousand strong. And that the French were almost ten to one, Before we met or that a stroke was given, Like to a trusty squire did run away;

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men:

Myself and divers gentlen en beside Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners. Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss, Or whether that such cowards ought to wear This ornament of knighthood- en or no.

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was ınfamous з¢

And ill beseeming any common man, Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.

Tal. When mist this order was ordain'd. my lords,

Knights of the Garter were of noble birth, Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,

Such as were grown to credit by the wars; Not fearing death nor shrinking for distress, But always resolute in most extremes.

He then that is not furnish'd in this sort Doth but usurn the sacred name of knight. Profaning this most honourable order, 12 And should, if I were worthy to be judge, Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain That doth presume to boast of gentle blocd.

King. Stain to thy countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom.

Be packing, therefore, thou that wast a knight:

Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death. [Exit Fastolje.

And now, my Lord Protector, view the letter

Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. [Viewing the superscription] What means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his style?

No more but plain and bluntly 'To the King'!

Hath he torgot he is his sovereign? Or doth this churlish superscription Pretend some alteration in good-will?
What's here? [Reads] 'I have, upon especial cause,

Mov'd with compassion of my country's wreck,

Together with the pitiful complaints Of such as your oppression feeds upon. Forsaken your pernicious faction.

And join'd with Charles, the rightful King In confutation of which jude reproach of France.'

O monstrous treachery! Can this be so— I crave the benefit of law of arms. That in alliance, amity, and oaths, ling guile?

King. What! Doth my uncle Burgundy revolt?

Glo. He doth, my lord, and is become your foe.

contain? Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes. King. Why then Lord Talbot there shall talk with him

And give him chastisement for this abuse. How say you, my lord, are you not content? Tal. Content, my liege! Yes; but that I am prevented,

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd. King. Then gather strength and march unto him straight: Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason. And what offence it is to flout his friends. 75

Tal. I go, my lord, in heart desiring still You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign.

Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the combat too.

York. This is my servant: hear him, noble Princé.

Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, Presumptuous favour him.

King. Be patient, lords, and give them leave to speak.

exclaim.

And wherefore crave you combat, or with whom?

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him: for he hath done me wrong. King. What is that wrong whereof you both complain? First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France,

This fellow here, with envious carping tongue.

Upbraided me about the rose I wear, Saying the sanguine colour of the leaves Did represent my master's blushing cheeks When stubbornly he did repugn the truth About a certain question in the law Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York and him; With other vile and ignominious terms—

60 And in defence of my lord's worthiness.

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord: There should be found such false dissemb- For though he seem with forged quaint concert

To set a gloss upon his bold intent. Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him. And he first took exceptions at this badge. Pronouncing that the paleness of this flower King. Is that the worst this letter doth Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart. York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?

Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out, Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it. King. Good Lord, what madness rules in brainsick men,

When for so slight and frivolous a cause Such factious emulations shall arise! Good cousins both, of York and Somerset, Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace. York. Let this dissension first be tried by

And then your Highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;

Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then. York. There is my pledge; accept it. Somerset.

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord. Glo. Confirm it so? Contounded be your strife:

And perish ye, with your audacious prate! vassals. are vou asham'd

With this immodest clamorous outrage To trouble and disturb the King and us? Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus And you, my lords-methinks you do not well

To bear with their perverse objections. Much less to take occasion from their mouths

To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves. Let me persuade you take a better course. Exe. It grieves his Highness. Good my lords, be friends. King. Come hither, you that would be combatants: Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour, Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause. And you, my lords, remember where we are:

In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:

As well they may upbraid me with my crown.

Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd.

But your discretions better can persuade Than I am able to instruct or teach; And, therefore, as we hither came in peace, So let us still continue peace and love. Cousin of York, we institute your Grace To be our Regent in these parts of France. And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot:

Tal. Go to the gates of Bordeaux. trumpeter: Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, aloft, the General of the French, and Others.

English John Talbot, Captains, calls you forth,

Servant in aims to Harry King of England; And thus he would-Open your city gates, Be humble to us, call my sovereign yours And do him homage as obedient subjects, And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;

But if you frown upon this profter'd peace, You tempt the fury of my three attendants, Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire:

Who in a moment even with the earth Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers.

It you forsake the offer of their love. Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,

Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge! The period of thy tyranny approacheth. On us thou canst not enter but by death; For, I protest, we are well fortified, And strong enough to issue out and fight. 20 If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed, Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee. On either hand thee there are squadrons

Hark! hark! The Daupnin's drum, a warning bell.

Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul; 40 And mine shall ring thy dire departure out. [Exit General.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy. Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.

O, negligent and heedless discipline! How are we park'd and bounded in a pale-A little herd of England's timorous deer, Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs! It we be English deer, be then in blood: Not rascal-like to fall down with a pinch, But rather, moody-mad and desperate stags,

Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel

And make the cowards stand aloof at bay. Sell every man his life as dear as mine, And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.

God and Saint George, Talbot and England's right.

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight! [Exeunt.

Scene III. Plains in Gascony.

YORK, with trumpet and many Soldiers. A Messenger meets him.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd

That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

Mess. They are return'd, my lord, and give it out

That he is march'd to Bordeaux with his power

To fight with Talbot; as he march'd along, By your espials were discovered Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,

Which join'd with him and made their march for Bordeaux.

A plague upon that villain Somerset

That thus delays my promised supply to Of horsemen that were levied for this siege! Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid. And I am louted by a traitor villain And cannot nelp the noble chevalier. God comfort him in this necessity! If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Thou princely leader of our Lucy. English strength.

Never so needful on the earth of France. Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot. Who now is girdled with a waist of iron 20 And hemm'd about with grim destruction. York!

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.

York. O God, that Somerset, who in proud heart

Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place !

So should we save a valiant gentleman By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.

Mad ire and wrathful fury makes me ween That thus we die while remiss traitors sleen. Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress'd lord! York. He dies; we lose; I break my warlike word.

We mourn · France smiles. We lose: they daily get-

All long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy. Then Ged take mercy on brave Talbot's soul,

And on his son, young John, who two hours since

I met in travel toward his warlike father. This seven years did not Talbot see his son: And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot

To bid his young son welcome to his grave? Away! vexation almost stops my breath. That sund'red friends greet in the hour of death.

Lucy, farewell; no more my fortune can But curse the cause I cannot aid the man. Maine, Blois, Poictiers, and Tours, are won away Long all of Somerset and his delay. Exit with Forces.

Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders, Sleeping neglection doth betray to loss 49 The conquest of our scarce-cold conqueror, That ever-living man of memory,

Henry the Fifth. Whiles they each other cross.

Lives, honours, lands, and all, hurry to loss. (Exit.

Scene IV. Other plains of Gascony.

Enter Somerset, with his Forces: an Officer of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late: I cannot send them now.

This expedition was by York and Talbot Too rashly plotted; all our general force Might with a sally of the very town Be buckled with. The over-daring Talbot ; Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure.

York set him on to fight and die in shame

That. Talbot dead, great York might bear To tutor thee in stratagems of war, the name.

Off. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with Set from our o'er-match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, Sir William! Whither were you sent?

Lucy. Whither, my lord! From bought and sold Lord Talbot,

Who, ring'd about with bold adversity, Cries out for noble York and Somerset To beat assailing death from his weak legions:

And whiles the honourable captain there Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs

And, in advantage ling'ring, looks for rescue. You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour, Keep off aloof with worthless emulation. Let not your private discord keep away The levied succours that should lend him aid. While he, renowned noble gentleman, Yield up his life unto a world of odds. Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy. Alençon, Reignier, compass him about. And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your Grace exclaims.

Swearing that you withhold his levied host, Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse. I owe him little duty and less love,

And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

now entrapp'd the noble-minded Hath Talbot.

Never to England shall he bear his life, But dies betray'd to fortune by your strife. Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen straight;

Within six hours they will be at his aid. Lucy. Too late comes rescue; he is ta'en or slain,

For fly he could not if he would have fled: And fly would Talbot never, though he might. Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then,

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt.

Scene V. The English camp near Bordeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee

That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd

When sapless age and weak unable limbs Should bring thy father to his dicoping chair.

But-O malignant and ill-boding stars! Now thou art come unto a feast of death, A terrible and unavoided danger;

Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse.

And I'll direct thee how thou shalt e-cape By sudden flight. Come, dally not, he gone. John. Is my name Talbot, and am I your son?

And shall I fly? O. if you love my mother. Dishonour not her honourable name, To make a bastard and a slave of me!

The world will say he is not Talbot's blood That basely fled when noble Talbot stood. Tal. Fly to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly.

Your loss is great, so your regard should be: My worth unknown, no loss is known in me: Upon my death the French can little boast: In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost. Flight cannot stain the honour you have

But mine it will, that no exploit have done; You fled for vantage, every one will swear; But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear. There is no hope that ever I will stay

If the first hour I shrink and run away. Here, on my knee, I beg mortality, Rather than life preserv'd with infamy. Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes he in one tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor cansi not lose it.

John. Yes, your renowned name; shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being

If death be so apparent, then both fly. Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die?

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be severed from your side Than can yourself yourself in twam divide. Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I; $_{50}$ For live I will not if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son.

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon. Come, side by side together live and die; 51 And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. A field of battle.

Alarum: excursions wherein John Talbot is hemm'd about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! Fight, soldiers, fight.

The Regent hath with Talbot broke his word And left us to the rage of France his sword. Where is John Talbot? Pause and take thy breath;

I gave thee life and rescu'd thee from death.

John. O, twice my father, twice am I thy son!

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done

Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate, To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck file, 10
It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire

Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age, of mine

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy'.

Here purposing the Bastard to destroy, 25 Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care;

Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou fare?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly, Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry? Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead: The help of one stands me in little stead. O, too much folly is it, well I wot.

To hazard all our lives in one small boat! If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage, To-morrow I shall die with mickle age. 35 By me they nothing gain an if I stay: 'Tis but the shoit'ning of my life one day.

In the the short ning of my life one day. In thee thy mother dies, our household's name.

My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's rame.

All these and more we hazard by thy stay; 40 All these are say'd it thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;

These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart.

SCENE VII. Another part of the field.

Alarum; excursions. Enter old TALBO1 led by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life? Mine own is gone.

O, where's young Talbot? Where is valuant John?

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity, Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee.

When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee,

His bloody sword he brandish'd over me, And like a hungry lion did commence Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience; But when my angry guardant stood alone, Tend'ring my ruin and assail'd of none, 10 Dizzy-ey'd fury and great rage of heart Suddenly made him from my side to start Into the clust'ring battle of the French; And in that sea of blood my boy did drench His overmounting spirit; and there died, 15 My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing 'e body of John Talbot.

Serv. O my dear lord, lo where your son is borne!

Tal. Thou antic Death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny, Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,

Two Talbots, winged through the lither

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'Is a mere French word:

We English warriors wot not what it means. I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en.

And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? our pilson is.

But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. But where's the great Alcides of the field. Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, Treated for his rate success in arms Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence.

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinifeld. Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton, Lucy. Is Talbot slain-the Frenchmen's only scourge.

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis? O, were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd, That I in ra e might shoot them at your faces!

He answer'd thus: 'Young Talbot was not O that I could but call these dead to life! 40 It were enough to fright the realm of France.

Were but his picture left amongst you here, It would amaze the proudest of you all. Give me their bodies, that I may bear them hence

And give them burial as beseems their weith.

Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,

Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.

And now to Paris in this conquering vein! Char. On what submissive message art All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. London. The palace.

Sennet. Enter the King, Gloucester, and Exerer.

King. Have you perus'd the letters from the Pope,

The Emperor, and the Earl of Armaguac?
Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:

They humbly sue unto your Excellence
To have a godly peace concluded of Between the realms of England and of France.

King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord, and as the only means

To stop effusion of our Christian blood And stablish quietness on every side. To King. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought

It was both impious and unnatural
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.
Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect
And surer bind this knot of amity,
The Earl of Aimagnac, near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,
Proffers his only daughter to your Grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptious dowly.

King. Marriage, uncle! Alas, my years are young!

And fitter is my study and my books
Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.
Yet call th' ambassadors, and, as you please,
So let them have their answers every one.
I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's

Enter Winchester in Cardinal's habit as CARDINAL BEAUFORT, the Papal Legate, and two Ambassadors.

Exe. What! Is my Lord of Winchester install'd

And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then I perceive that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy:
If once he come to be a cardinal,
He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown'.

King My Lords Ambassadors, your several suits

Have been consider'd and debated on. 15 Your purpose is both good and reasonable, And therefore are we certainly resolv'd To draw conditions of a friendly peace, Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean Shall be transported presently to France. 40

Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master.

I have inform'd his Fighness so at large, As, liking of the lady's virtuous gifts, Her beauty, and the value of her dower, He doth intend she shall be England's Queen.

King. [To Ambassauor] in argument and proof of which contract

Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection. And so, my Lord Projector, see them guarded

And safely brought to Dover; where, insh.pp'd,

Commit them to the fortune of the sea. 50

Win. Stay, inv Lord Legate; you shall first receive

The sum of money which I promised Should be delivered to his Holliness For clothing me in these grave ornaments, Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisuie.

Wm. [Aside] Now Winchester will not

Scene II. France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alençon, Bastard, Reignier, La Pucelle, and Foices.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:

'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt And turn again unto the warlike French. Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of Fiance,

And keep not back your powers in dalliance.
Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn

to us;
Else ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general, And happiness to his accomplices!

Char. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee speak.

Scout. The English army, that divided was

Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too suduen, sirs, the warning is;

But we will presently provide for them. 15
Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there.

Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear. A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace! Puc. Of all base passions fear is most accurs'd.

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine.

Let Henry fret and all the world repine. 20 Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate! L'xeunt.

Scene III. Before Angiers.

Alarum: excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.

Puc. The Regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly.

Now help, we charming spells and penapts: And we choice spirits that admonish me And give me signs of future accidents:

You speedy helpers that are substitutes Under the lordly monarch of the north, Appear and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends.

Enter French and English. Excursions. fighting. LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand: La Pucelle is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast.

Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms.

And try if they can gain your liberty.

See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows As if, with Circe, she would change my shape!

Puc. Charg'd to a worser shape thou canst not be.

York. O. Charles the Dauphin is a proper man:

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds! York. Fell banning hag; enchantress, hold thy tongue. Puc. I prithee give me leave to curse awhile. York. Curse. miscreant, when thou comest to the stake [Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter SUFFOLK, with MARGARET in his hand.

Sut. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner. [Gazes on her. O fairest beauty, do not tear nor fly!

For I will touch thee but with reverent hands:

I kiss these fingers for eternal peace, And lay them gently on thy tender side Who art thou? Say, that I may honour

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king.

The King of Naples-whosoe'er thou art. Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I

Yet, it this servile usage once offend, Go and be free again as Suffolk's triend. [She is going.

O, stay! [Aside] I have no power to let her pass; My hand would free her, but my heart says no. As plays the sun upon the glassy streams, Twinkling another counterfeited beam, So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes. Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak. I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind.

Fie, de la Pole! disable not thyself; Hast not a tongue? Is she not here thy prisoner?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight? Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk, if thy name be

Suf. [Aside] She's beautiful, and therefore to be woo'd:

She is a woman, therefore to be won. Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom-yea

Suf. [Aside] Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife:

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour? Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. [Aside] There all is marr'd: there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. [Aside] And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. [Aside] I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king! Tush, that's a wooden thing! Mar. He talks of wood. It is some carpenter. Suf. [Aside] Yet so my fancy may be satisfied. And peace established between these realms.

But there remains a scruple in that too; For though her father be the King of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor, 95 And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth!

And, madam, at your father's castle walls We'll crave a parley to confer with him. 130

Sound a parley. Enter REIGNIER on the walls.

See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner! Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me. Suffolk, what remedy? Reig. I am a soldier and unapt to weep

Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord.

Consent, and for thy honour give consent. Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king, Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto:

Mar. Hear ye, Captain—are you not at And this her easy-held imprisonment Hath gam'd thy daughter princely liberty. Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign. Reig. Upon thy princely warrant I descend

To give thee answer of thy just demand. [Exit Reignier from the walls.

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming. Trumpets sound. Enter REIGNIER below.

Reig. Welcome, brave Earl, into our territories; Command in Anjou what your Honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child.

Fit to be made companion with a king. What answer makes your Grace unto my suit? 150 Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord, Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the country Maine and Anjou,

Free from oppression or the stroke of war, My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please. Suf. That is her ransom; I deliver her. And those two counties I will undertake

And those two counties I will undertake Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name, As deputy unto that gracious king, 161 Give thee her hand for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,

Because this is in traffic of a king. 164
[Aside] And yet, methinks, I could be well content

To be mine own attorney in this case.—
I'll over then to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.
So, farewell, Reignier. Set this diamond safe

In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee as I would embrace

The Christian prince, King Henry, were he

Mar. Farewell, my lord. Good wishes, praise, and prayers,

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret.

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam. But hark you, Margaret—

No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as becomes a maid,

A virgin, and his servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.

But, madam, I must trouble you again— 1800 No loving token to his Majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good lord: a pure unspotted heart,

Never yet taint with love, I send the King. Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her. Mar. 'That tor thyself—I will not so presume 185

To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt Reignuer and Margaret.

Suf. O, wert thou for myself! But,

Suffolk, stay;
Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth:
There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk.
Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise. 140
Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount.
And natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet 194

Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Ext.

Scene IV. Camp of the Duke of York w Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and Others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright!

Have I sought every country far and near, Ard, now it is my chance to find thee out, Must I behold thy timeless cruel death? 5 Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!

I am descended of a gentler blood;

Thou art no father nor no triend or mine.

Shep. Out, out! My lords, an please you,

'tis not so;

I did beget her, all the paush knows. Her mother liveth yet, can testify She was the first fruit of my bacn'lorship.

War. Graceless, wilt thou deny thy parentage?

York. This argues what her kind of life hath been—

Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!

God knows thou art a collop of my flesh; And for thy sake have I shed many a tear. Denv me not, I prithee, gentle Joan. Puc. Peasant, avaunt! You have suborn'd this man

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

'Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest

The morn that I was wedded to her mother.

Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.

Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time

Of thy nativity. I would the milk

Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her breast
Had been a little ratebane for the sake

Had been a little ratsbane for the sake. Or else, when thou didst keep ray lambs a-field,

I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee. Dost fhou deny thy father, cursed drab? O, burn her, burn her! Hanging is too good.

[Ivit]

York. Take her away; for she hath hv'd too long.

To fill the world with vicious qualities. ...
Puc. First let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:

Not me begotten of a shepherd swain. But issued from the progeny of kings; Virtuous and holy, chosen from above By inspiration of celestial grace, To work exceeding miracles on earth. I never had to do with wicked spirits.

But you, that are polluted with your lusts, Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents, 11

Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices, Because you want the grace that others have.

You judge it straight a thing impossible devils.

No, misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been A virgin from her tender infancy, Chaste and immaculate in very thought; Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd. Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay. Away with her to execution!

War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid.

Spare for no fagots, let there be enow. Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake, That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?

Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity That warranteth by law to be thy privilege: I am with child, ye bloody homicides; Murder not then the fruit within my womb,

Although ye hale me to a violent death. York. Now heaven forfend! The holy maid with child! War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought: Is all your strict preciseness come to this?

York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling.

I did imagine what would be her refuge. War. Well, go to; we'll have no bastards Especially since Charles must father it. Puc. You are deceiv'd; my child is none of his:

It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love. York. Alençon, that notorious Machiavel!

It dies, an if it had a thousand lives. Puc. O, give me leave, I have deluded

you. 'Twas neither Charles nor yet the Duke I nam'd,

But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd. That's most War. A married man! intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well-

There were so many-whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.

Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee.

Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.

Puc. Then lead me hence-with whom 1 leave my curse:

May never glorious sun reflex his beams Upon the country where you make abode . But darkness and the gloomy shade of death

Environ you, till mischief and despair To compass wonders but by help of Drive you to break your necks or hang vourselves! [Exit, guarded.

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes.

Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended.

Car. Lord Regent, I do greet your Excellence

With letters of commission from the King. For know, my lords, the states of Christendom.

Mov'd with iemorse of these outrageous broils,

Have earnestly implor'd a general peace Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French:

And here at hand the Dauphin and his train

Approacheth, to confer about some matter. York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?

After the slaughter of so many peers, So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers. That in this quarrel have been overthrown And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,

Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace? Have we not lost most part of all the towns. By treason, falsehood, and by treachery, Our great progenitors had conquered? 110 O Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York. If we conclude a peace.

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, ALENCON, BASTARD.

REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed

That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,

We come to be informed by yourselves What the conditions of that league must be. York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice, By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:

That, in regard King Henry gives consent, Of mere compassion and of lenity, To ease your country of distressful war, 85 And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace, You shall become true hegemen to his crown;

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear

To pay him tribute and submit thyself. 130 Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him. And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself?

Adorn his temples with a coronet And yet, in substance and authority, Retain but privilege of a private man? This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd

With more than half the Gallian territories. And therein reverenc'd for their lawful Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd, Detract so much from that prerogative As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole? No, Lord Ambassador; I'll rather keep That which I have than, coveting for more, Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! Hast thou by secret means Us'd intercession to obtain a league. And now the matter grows to compromise Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison? 150 Either accept the title thou usurp'st, Of benefit proceeding from our king And not of any challenge of desert. Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. [To Charles] My lord, you do not well in obstinacy

To cavil in the course of this contract. If once it be neglected, ten to one We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. [To Charles] To say the truth, it is your policy

To save your subjects from such massacre And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen By our proceeding in hostility:

And therefore take this compact of a truce.

Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? Shall our condition stand? 165

Char. It shall;

Only reserv'd, you claim no interest In any of our towns of garrison.

Then swear allegiance to York. Maiesty:

As thou art knight, never to disobey Nor be rebellious to the crown of England-Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England. [Charles and the rest give tokens of fealty.

So, now dismiss your army when ye please; Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still.

For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. London. The balace. Enter SUFFOLK, in conference with the KING, GLOUCESTER and EXETER.

King. Your wondrous rare description. noble Earl.

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me. Her virtues, graced with external gifts. Do breed love's settled passions in my heart:

And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts 5 Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,

So am I driven by breath of her renown Either to suffer ship wreck or arrive

Where I may have fruition of her love. Suf. Tush, my good lord! This superficial tale

Is but a preface of her worthy praise. The chief perfections of that lovely dame. Had I sufficient skill to utter them. Would make a volume of enticing lines, Able to ravish any dull conceit; And, which is more, she is not so divine, So full-replete with choice of all delights. But with as humble lowliness of mind She is content to be at your command-Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents.

To love and honour Henry as her lord. King. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.

Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent That Marg'ret may be England's royal Queen

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter

You know, my lord, your Highness is betroth'd

Unto another lady of esteem.

How shall we then dispense with that contract,

And not deface your honour with reproach? Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful paths: Or one that at a triumph, having vow'd 31 To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists By reason of his adversary's odds: A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,

And therefore may be bloke without offence.

Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?

Her father is no better than an earl. Although in glorious titles he excel.

Sul. Yes, my lord, her father is a king. The King of Naples and Jerusaiem; And of such great authority in : rance As his alliance will confirm our peace, And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the Earl of Armagnac may do.

Because he is near kinsman unto Charles. 15 Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower; give.

Suf. A dow'r, my lords! Disgrace not so your king,

That he should be so abject, base, and poor, To choose for wealth and not for perfect

Henry is able to enrich his queen, And not to seek a queen to make him rich.

So worthless peasants bargain for their wives. As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse. Marriage is a matter of more worth Than to be dealt in by attorneyship; Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,

Must be companion of his nuptial bed. And therefore, lords, since he affects 'er

It most of all these reasons bindeth us In our opinions she should be preferr'd; For what is wedlock forced but a hell, An age of discord and continual strife? Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss, And is a pattern of celestial peace. Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king? Her peerless feature, joined with her birth, Approves her fit for none but for a king; Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit, More than in women commonly is seen, Will answer our hope in issue of a king; For Henry, son unto a conqueror, Is likely to beget more conquerors, If with a lady of so high resolve As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love. Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me

Where Reignier sooner will receive than That Margaret shall be Queen, and none but she.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,

My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that My tender youth was never yet attaint With any passion of inflaming love. I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd. I feel such sharp dissension in my breast. Such fierce alarums both of hope and fear, As I am sick with working of my thoughts. Take therefore shipping; post, my lord. to France:

Agree to any covenants; and procure That Lady Margaret do voucnsafe to come To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd

King Henry's faithful and anointed queen. For your expenses and sufficient charge, Among the people gather up a tenth. Be gone, I say; for till you do return I rest perplexed with a thousand cares. 95 And you, good uncle, banish all offence: If you do censure me by what you were, Not what you are, I know it will excuse This sudden execution of my will. And so conduct me where, from company, I may revolve and ruminate my grief.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.

Exeunt Gloucester and Exeter. Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes,

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece, With hope to find the like event in love 105 But prosper better than the Troyan did. Margaret shall now be Queen, and rule the King;

But I will rule both her, the King, and realm.

ACT ONE

Scene I. London. The palace.

Flourish of trumpets; then hautboys. Enter the King, Duke Humphrey of Glou-SALISBURY. WARWICK, and CESTER. CARDINAL BEAUFORT, on the one side; the QUEEN, SUFFOLK, YORK, SOMERSET, and BUCKINGHAM, on the other.

Suf. As by your high imperial Majesty I had in charge at my depart for France, As procurator to your Excellence, To marry Princess Margaret for your Grace:

So, in the famous ancient city Tours, 5 In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil,

The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon,

Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty By day, by night, waking and in my dreams, reverend bishops,

I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd;

And humbly now upon my bended knee, 10 In sight of England and her lordly peers.

Deliver up my title in the Queen To your most gracious hands, that are the substance

Of that great shadow I did represent: The happiest gift that ever marquis gave, 15 The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd. Kmg. Suffolk, arise. Welcome, Queen Margaret:

I can express no kinder sign of love Than this kind kiss. O Lord, that lends me

Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness! For thou hast given me in this beauteous face

A world of earthly blessings to my soul, If sympathy of love unite our thoughts. Queen. Great King of England, and my gracious lord, The mutual conference that my mind hath had.

In courtly company or at my beads, With you, mine alder-liefest sovereign, Makes me the bolder to salute my king With ruder terms, such as my wit affords 30 And over-joy of heart doth minister.

King. Her sight did ravish, but her grace in speech,

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty, Makes me from wond'ring fall to weeping

Such is the fulness of my heart's content. 35 Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. [Kneeling] Long live Queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Queen. We thank you all. [Flourish. Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your Grace.

Here are the articles of contracted peace 40 Between our sovereign and the French King Charles.

For eighteen months concluded by consent. Glo. [Reads] 'Imprimis: It is agreed between the French King Charles and William de la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.

Item: That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the King her father '— [Lets the paper fall.

King. Uncle, how now!
Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord; 50
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart, And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further. King. Uncle of Winchester, I pray read

Car. [Reads] 'Item: It is further agreed between them that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the King her father, and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry.'

King. They please us well. Lord Marquess, kneel down:

We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,

And girt thee with the sword. Cousin of York.

We here discharge your Grace from being Regent

I' th' parts of France, till term of eighteen months

Be full expir'd. Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloucester, York, Buckingham, Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;

We thank you all for this great favour done

In entertainment to my princely queen. Come, let us in, and with all speed provide To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, 70

To you Duke Humphrey must unload his grief-

Your grief, the common grief of all the land.

What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,

His valour, coin, and people, in the wars? Did he so often lodge in open field, 75 In winter's cold and summer's parching heat, To conquer France, his true inheritance? And did my brother Bedford toil his wits To keep by policy what Henry got?

Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,

Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,

Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?

Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself, With all the learned Council of the realm, Studied so long, sat in the Council House 85 Early and late, debating to and fro

How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?

And had his Highness in his infancy Crowned in Pairs, in despite of foes?

And shall these labours and these honours die?

Shall Hemy's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,

Your deeds of war, and all our counsel die? O peers of England, shameful is this league! Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame, Blotting your names from books of memory, Razing the characters of your renown, Defacing monuments of conquer'd France, Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance? 100 For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it if we can; But now it is impossible we should.

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,

Hath given the duchy of Anjou and Maine Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style Agrees not with the leanness of his purse. Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for all.

These counties were the keys of Normandy! But wheretore weeps Warwick, my valiant war. For grief that they are past recovery;

For were there hope to conquer them again My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them I tear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss, both:

Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:

And are the cities that I got with wounds Deliver'd up again with peaceful words? Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate,

That dims the honour of this warlike isle! France should have torn and rent my very heart

Before I would have yielded to this league. I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold and downes with their wives:

And our King Henry gives away his own 125 To match with her that brings no vantages. Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,

Suffolk should demand a whole That fifteenth

For costs and charges in transporting her! She should have stay'd in France, and stary'd in France. 130

Before-

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now ye grow

It was the pleasure of my lord the King. Glo. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind;

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike, But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye. Rancour will out: proud prelate, in thy tace

I see thy fury; if I longer stay

We shall begin our ancient bickerings. Lordings, tarewell; and say, when I am gone.

I prophesied France will be lost ere long. [Exit.

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage.

'Tis known to you he is mine enemy; Nay, more, an enemy unto you all, And no great friend, I fear me, to the King. Consider, lords, he is the next of blood And heir apparent to the English crown. Had Henry got an empire by his marriage And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west, There's reason he should be displeas'd at it. Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words

Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect.

What though the common people favour hım,

Calling him ' Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloucester"

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud

'Jesu maintain your royal excellence!' With God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'

He will be found a dangerous Protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign,

He being of age to govern of himself? Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,

And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk. We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay:

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently, [Exit. Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride

And greatness of his place be grief to us. Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal: His insolence is more intolerable Than all the princes in the land beside, If Gloucester be displac'd, he'll be Protector.

Buck. Or thou or I, Somerset, will be Protector.

Despite Duke Humphrey or the Cardinal. [Exeunt Buckingham and Somerset. Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.

While these do labour for their own preterment.

Behoves it us to labour for the realm. I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloucester

Did bear him like a noble gentleman. Oft have I seen the haughty Cardinal- 150 More like a soldier than a man o' th' church. As stout and proud as he were lord of all-

Swear like a ruffian and demean himself Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.

Warwick my son, the comfort of my age, 155 Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy housekeeping,

Hath won the greatest tayour of the commons,

Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey. And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland, In bringing them to civil discipline, Thy late exploits done in the heart of France

When thou wert Regent for our sovereign, Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people:

Join we together for the public good, In what we can, to bridle and suppress 195 The pride of Suffolk and the Cardinal, With Somerset's and Buckinghain's ambition; And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's deeds While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land And common profit of his country!

York. And so says York-[Asule] for he hath greatest cause.

[Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury. York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French:

Paris is lost; the state of Normandy 210 Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.

Suffolk concluded on the articles;

The peers agreed; and Henry was well pleas'd

To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

Enter DUKE HUMPHREY and his wife ELEANOR.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like overripen'd corn

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load? Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows.

As frowning at the favours of the world? Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth, Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?

What see'st thou there? King Henry's diadem,

Enchas'd with all the honours of the world? If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face Until thy head be circled with the same. 10 Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold.

What, is't too shor' I'll lengthen it with mine:

And having both together heav'd it up. We'll both together lift our heads to heaven, And never more abase our sight so low 15 As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts! And may that thought, when I imagine ill Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,

Be my last breathing in this mortal world! My troublous dreams this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? Tell me. and I'll requite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought this staff, mine officebadge in court,

Was broke in twain: by whom I have To play my part in Fortune's pageant. forgot.

But, as I think, it was by th' Cardinal; And on the pieces of the broken wand Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset

And William de la Pole, first Duke of Suffolk.

This was my dream; what it doth bode God knows. Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an argument That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove

Shall lose his head for his presumption. But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet Duke:

Methought I sat in seat of majesty In the cathedral church of Westminster, And in that chair where kings and queens were crown'd :

Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to me.

And on my head did set the diadem. Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide out-

Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor! Art thou not second woman in the realm. And the Protector's wife, belov'd of him? Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command

Above the reach or compass of thy thought? And wilt thou still be hammering treachery To tumble down thy husband and thyself From top of honour to disgrace's feet? Away from me, and let me hear no more! 50

Duch. What, what, my lord! Are you so choleric

With Eleanor for telling but her dream? Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his Highness' pleasure

You do prepare to ride unto Saint Albans, Where as the King and Queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll tollow presently. [Exeunt Gloucester and Messenger.

Follow I must; I cannot go before, While Gloucester bears this base humble mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood, I would remove these tedious stumblingblocks

And smooth my way upon their headless

And, being a woman, I will not be slack

Where are you there, Sir John? Nay, fear not, man.

We are alone; here's none but thee and I. Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal Majesty! Duch. What say'st thou? Majesty! I am but Grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God and Hume's advice.

Your Grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? Hast thou as yet conferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch of Eie. With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?

And will they undertake to do me good? Hume. This they have promised, to show your Highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of underground That shall make answer to such questions 80 As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:

When from Saint Albans we do make

We'll see these things effected to the full. Hume, take this reward: make Here merry, man,

With thy confederates in this weighty cause. [Exit.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the Duchess' gold;

Marry, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume!

Seal up your lips and give no words but mum:

The business asketh silent secrecy. Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:

Gold cannot come amiss were she a devil. Yet have I gold flies from another coast-I dare not say from the rich Cardinal,

And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk:

Yet I do find it so; for, to be plain, They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,

Have hired me to undermine the Duchess, And buzz these conjurations in her brain. They say 'A crafty knave does need no broker ':

Yet am I Suffolk and the Cardinal's broker. Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near

To call them both a pair or crafty knaves. Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at Hume's knavery will be the Duchess' wreck, And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall. Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.

Scene III. London. The palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, Peter, the Armourer's man, being one.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close; my Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man, Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the Queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.
2 Pet. Come back, fool; this is the Duke of Suffolk and not my Lord Protector. 9 Suf. How now, fellow! Wouldst anything with me?

1 Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me; I took ye for my Lord Protector.

Queen. [Reads] 'To my Lord Protector!' Are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them. What is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinal's man, for keeping my house and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too! That's some wrong indeed. What's yours? What's here! [Reads] 'Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.' How now, sir knave!

2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Queen. What say'st thou? Did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth. My master said that he was, and that the King was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servant. Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently. We'll hear more of your matter before the King.

[Exit Servant with Peter. Queen. And as for you, that love to be protected 35

Under the wings of our Protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the supplications. Away, base cullions! Suffolk, let them go. All. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt. Queen. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

Is this the fashions in the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,
And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What, shall King Henry be a pupil still,
Under the surly Gloucester's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours
Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love
And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of

France,
I thought King Henry had resembled thee
In courage, courtship, and proportion;
But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads; His champions are the prophets and apostles; His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ; His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves Are brazen images of canonized saints,

I would the college of the Cardinals
Would choose him Pope, and carry him to Rome,

And set the triple crown upon his head; That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient. As I was cause Your Highness came to England, so will I In England work your Grace's full content. Queen. Beside the haughty Protector, have we Beaufort 66 The imperious churchman; Somerset.

And grumbling York; and not the least of Suf. And he of these that can do most Cannot do more in England than the Nevils; Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers. Queen. Not all these lords do vex me half

As that proud dame, the Lord Protector's wife.

She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies, 73

More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's wife.

Strangers in court do take her for the Queen.

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds That she will light to listen to the lays, And never mount to trouble you again. So, let her rest. And, madam, list to me, so For I am bold to counsel you in this: Although we fancy not the Cardinal, Yet must we join with him and with the Sound a sennet. Enter the KING, DUKE CARDINAL BEAUFORT, HUMPHREY. BUCKINGHAM, YORK, SOMERSET, SALIS-BURY, WARWICK, and the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.

King. For my part, noble lords, I care not which:

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me. 100 York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France.

Then let him be denay'd the regentship. Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place, Let York be Regent: I will yield to him.

War. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea Dispute not that; York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. The Cardinal's not my better in the She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unfield.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best

Sal. Peace, son! And show some reason, Buckingham,

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this. Queen. Because the King, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the King is old enough himself

To give his censure. These are no women's matters.

Queen. If he be old enough, what needs vour Grace

To be Protector of his Excellence?

Glo. Madam, I am Protector of the realm:

And at his pleasure will resign my place. Suf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence.

Since thou wert king—as who is king but thon?-

The commonwealth hath daily run to wrack,

The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas.

And all the peers and nobles of the realm Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty. Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags

Are lank and lean with thy extortions. Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution

And left thee to the mercy of the law. Queen. Thy sale of offices and towns in France.

Give me my fan. What, minion, can ve not? [She gives the Duchess a box on the ear.

I cry your mercy, madam; was it you?

Duch. Was't I? Yea, I it was, proud Frenchwoman.

Could I come near your beauty with my nails.

I could set my ten commandments in your face.

King. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will.

Duch. Against her will, good King? Look to 't in time;

She'll hamper thee and dandle thee like a babv.

She'll gallop far enough to her destruction. [Exit.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Now, lords, my choler being overblown

With walking once about the quadrangle, I come to talk of commonwealth affairs. As for your spiteful false objections, Prove them, and I lie open to the law; But God in mercy so deal with my soul 155 As I in duty love my king and country! But to the matter that we have in hand: I say, my sovereign, York is meetest man

To be your Regent in the realm of France. Suf. Before we make election, give me leave

To show some reason, of no little force, That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet:

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride; Next, if I be appointed for the place, My Lord of Somerset will keep me here Without discharge, money, or furniture, Till France be won into the Dauphin's

Did never traitor in the land commit.

Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Horner, the Armourer, and his man PETER, guarded.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason:

Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself! York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

King. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? Tell me, what are these?

Suf. Please it your Majesty, this is the

That doth accuse his master of high treason;

His words were these: that Richard Duke of York

Was rightful heir unto the English crown, And that your Majesty was an usurper.

King. Say, man, were these thy words? Hor. An't shall please your Majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter. God is my witness, I am falsely accus'd by the villain.

Peter. [Holding up his hands] By these ten bones, my lords, he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour. 190

York. Base dunghill villain and mechanical,

I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech.

I do beseech your royal Majesty

Let him have all the rigour of the law. 194 Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me. I have good witness of this; therefore I beseech your Majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

King. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law ?

Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge: Let Somerset be Regent o'er the French, Because in York this breeds suspicion; 201 And let these have a day appointed them For single combat in convenient place, For he hath witness of his servant's malice. This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom. Som. I humbly thank your royal Majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly. Peter. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake, pity my case! The spite of By the eternal God, whose name and power man prevaileth against me. O Lord, have Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to prison; and the day of combat shall be the last of the next month.

Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away. [Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. The Duke of Gloucester's garden.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, the witch : the two priests, HUME and SOUTHWELL; and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters; the Duchess. I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided; will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay, what else? Fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit; but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft while we be busy below: and so I pray you go, in God's name, and leave us. [Ext Hume] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess aloft, followed by Hume.

Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all. To this gear, the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times:

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night.

The time of night when Troy was set on fire ;

The time when screech-owls cry and bandogs howl.

And spirits walk and ghosts break up their graves-

That time best fits the work we have in hand.

Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise

We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they do the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle; Bolingbroke or South-well reads: 'Conjuro te,' &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath,

Fig till thou speak thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt; that I had said and done.

Boling. [Reads] ' Pirst of the king: what shall of him become?'

Spir. The Duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.

Boling. 'What fates await the Duke of Suffolk?'

Spir. By water shall he die and take his end.

Boling. 'What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?'

Spir. Let him shun castles: Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains Than where castles mounted stand.

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake;

False fiend, avoid! 40 [Thunder and lightning. Exit Spirit.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK and the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM with their Guard, and break in.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash.

Beidam, I think we watch'd you at an inch. What, madam, are you there? The King and commonweal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains; My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not, 45' See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king,

Injurious Duke, that threatest where's no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this?

Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close, 50

All, away! [Excunt, above, Duchess and ingbroke, guarded.

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch'd her well.

55

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon! Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.

What have we here? [Reads.
'The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.' 60 Why, this is just

'Aio te, Æacida, Romanos vincere posse'. Well, to the rest:

'Tell me what fate awairs the Duke of Suffolk?'

By water shall he die and take his end.' 65 What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?"

'Let him shun castles; Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains

Than where castles mounted stand.'
Come, come, my lords;

These oracles are hardly attain'd,

And hardly understood.

The King is now in progress towards Saint

Albans, With him the husband of this lovely lady;

Thither go these news as fast as horse can carry them— 75
A sorry breakfast for my Lord Protector.

Buck. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York,

To be the post, in hope of his reward.

York. At your pleasure, my good to York. At your pleasure, my good lord. Who's within there, he?

Enter a Servingman.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick To sup with me to-morrow night. Away! [Exeunt.

ACT TWO

Scene I. Saint Albans.

Enter the King, Queen, Gloucester, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Falconers halloing.

Queen. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day;

Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high, And ten to one old Joan had not gone out. King. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made.

And what a pitch she flew above the rest!

To see how God in all His creatures works!

Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your Majesty, My Lord Protector's hawks do tow'r so

They know their master loves to be aloft, And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind

That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much; he would be above the clouds.

Glo. Ay, my lord Cardinal, how think you by that?

Were it not good your Grace could fly to heaven?

King. The treasury of everlasting joy! Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart; Pernicious Protector, dangerous peer, That smooth'st it so with King and commonweal.

grown peremptory?

Tantaene animis coelestibus irae?

Churchmen so hot? Good uncle, hide such malice:

With such holiness can you do it? Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well

So good a quarrel and so bad a peer.

Glo. As who, my lord?

Why, as you, my lord, An't like your lordly Lord's Protectorship. Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Queen. And thy ambition, Gloucester. I prithee, peace,

Good Queen, and whet not on these furious peers;

For blessed are the peacemakers on earth. Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make Against this proud Protector with my sword!

Glo. [Aside to Cardinal] Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that!

Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Marry, when thou dar'st.

[Aside to Cardinal] Make up no tactions numbers for the matter:

In thine own person answer thy abuse. Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Ay, where thou dar'st not peep; an if thou dar'st,

This evening on the east side of the grove. King. How now, my lords!

Believe me, cousin Gloucester, Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly.

We had had more sport. [Aside to Gloucester] Come with thy two-hand swoid. Glo. True, uncle.

Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Are ye advis'd? The east side of the grove?

Glo. [Aside to Cardinal] Cardinal, I am with you.

King. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester! Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord.

[Aside to Cardinal] Now, by God's Mother, priest.

I'll shave your crown for this.

Or all my ience shall fail.

Car. [Aside to Gloucester] Medice, teipsum; Protector, see to't well; protect yourself. King. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my heart! When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?

I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter a Townsman of Saint Albans, crying ' A miracle!

Glo. What means this noise?

Glo. What, Cardinal, is your priesthood Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim? 60 Towns. A miracle! a miracle!

Suf. Come to the King, and tell him what miracle.

Towns. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Albans shrine

Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight: A man that ne'er saw in his life before. 05 King. Now God be prais'd that to believing souls

Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair !

Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans and his Brethren, bearing SIMPCOX between two in a chair; his Wife and a mult-tude following.

Car. Here comes the townsmen on procession

To present your Highness with the man. King. Great is his comfort in this cartlely

Although by his sight his sin be multiplied. Glo. Stand by, my masters; bury him near the King;

His Highness' pleasure is to talk with 'i King. Good fellow, tell us here circumstance.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship. 80 Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.

King. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your Grace.

King. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee.

Let never day nor night unhallowed pass, 85 But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Queen. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd

A hundred times and oft'ner, in my sleep, By good Saint Alban, who said 'Simpcex, come.

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee '.

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft Myself have heard a voice to call him so. Car. What, art thou lame?

Simb. Ay, God Almighty help me! Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Wife. A plum tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O, born so, mastei!

Glo. What, and wouldst climb a tree? Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear. Glo. Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that wouldst venture so.

Simb. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some damsons

And made me climb, with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! But yet it shall not serve:

Let me see thine eyes; wink now; now open them:

In my opinion yet thou seest not well.

Simb. Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.

Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?

Simp. Red, master; red as blood. 110 Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

King. Why, then, thou know's what colour jet is of?

Suf. And yet, I think, let did be be elsec-Go. But cloaks and gowns before drie

Glo. What's his name?

Simb. I know not.

Glo. Nor his?

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. Saunder Simpcox, an if it please you, master.

Glo. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lying'st knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours; but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and would ye not think it cunning to be great that could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp. O master, that you could!

Glo. My masters of Saint Albans, have you not beadles in your town, and things call'd whips? Mayor. Yes, my lord, if it please your Grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

Mayor. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither [Exit an Attendant. straight.

Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone!

You go about to torture me in vain.

Enter a Beadle with whits.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Bead I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah: off with your doublet quickly. Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool and runs away; and they follow and cry ' A miracle! King. O God, seest Thou this, and bearest so long?

Queen. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glo. Follow the knave, and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need!

Glo. I et them be whipp'd through every Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black as inc. retaket town till they come to Berwick, mean whence they came.

King. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold:

A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent, Under the countenance and confederacy Oi Lady Eleanor, the Protector's wife, The ringleader and head of all this rout, 165 Have practis'd dangerously against your state, SCENE II. London. The Duke of York's garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave In this close walk to satisfy myself In craving your opinion of my title,

Which is infallible, to England's crown. Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full. War. Sweet York, begin; and if thy claim be good, The Nevils are thy subjects to command. York. Then thus:

Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons; ıρ

War. Father, the Duke hath told the truth:

Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown. York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead. The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, Duke of Clarence. from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue Philippe, a daughter,

Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March:

Edmund had issue, Roger Earl of March; Roger had issue, Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown: And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king.

Who kept him in captivity till he died. But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne, My mother, being heir unto the crown, Married Richard Earl of Cambridge, who

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth son, son.

By her I claim the kingdom; she was heir

To Roger Earl of March, who was the son Of Edmund Mortimer, who married Philippe, Sole daughter unto Lionel Duke of Clarence; So, if the issue of the elder son Succeed before the younger, I am King.

War. What plain proceedings is more plain than this?

Henry doth claim the crown from John of And you three shall be strangled on the Gaunt,

The fourth son: York claims it from the third.

Till Lionel's issue falls, his should not reign. It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock. Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together, And in this private plot be we the first 60 That shall salute our rightful sovereign

With honour of his birthright to the crown. Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's King!

York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king

Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be stain'd

With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster; And that's not suddenly to be perform'd, But with advice and silent secrecy. Do you as I do in these dangerous days: Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence, 70 At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition. At Buckingham, and all the crew of them, Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock. That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey;

'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that.

Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Warwick

Shall one day make the Duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself, Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick

The greatest man in England but the King. [Exeunt.

Scene III. London. A hall of justice.

Sound trumpets. Enter the KING and State: the QUEEN, GLOUCESTER, YORK, SUF-FOLK, and SALISBURY, with Guard, to banish the Duchess. Enter, guarded, the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, MARGERY HUME. SOUTHWELL. JOURDAIN. BOLINGBROKE.

King. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife:

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great; Receive the sentence of the law for sins Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death.

You four, from hence to prison back again; From thence unto the place of execution: The witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes.

gallows.

You, madam, for you are more nobly born, Despoiled of your honour in your life, Shall, after three days' open penance done, Live in your country here in banishment With Sir John Stanley in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee.

I cannot justify whom the law condemns. [Exeunt the Duchess and the other prisoners, guarded.

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.

Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground!

I beseech your Majesty give me leave to go; Sorrow would solace, and mine age would

King. Stay, Humphrey Duke of Gloucester; ere thou go,

Give up thy staff; Henry will to himself Protector be; and God shall be my hope, My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet. And go in peace, Humphrey, no less beloy'd Than when thou wert Protector to thy King.

Queen. I see no reason why a king of years Should be to be protected like a child. God and King Henry govern England's realm !

Give up your staff, sir, and the King his realm.

Glo. My staff! Here, noble Henry, is my staff.

As willingly do I the same resign

As ere thy father Henry made it mine; And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it As others would ambitiously receive it. 36 Farewell, good King; when I am dead and gone,

May honourable peace attend thy throne ! Exit.

Queen. Why, now is Henry King, and Margaret Queen,

And Humphrey Duke of Gloucester scarce himself.

That bears so shrewd a maim: two pulls at once-

His lady banish'd and a limb lopp'd off. This staff of honour raught, there let it stand

Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays; Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest York. Lords, let him go. Please it your Majesty,

This is the day appointed for the combat: And ready are the appellant and defendant,

So please your Highness to behold the fight.

Queen. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

King. A God's name, see the lists and all things fit;

Here let them end it, and God defend the York. I never saw a fellow worse bested, Or more afraid to fight, than is the For by his death we do perceive his appellant,

The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter at one door, HORNER, the Armourer, and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters with a drum before him and his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; and at the other door PETER, his man, with a drum and sand-bag, and Prentices drinking to kim.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough. 2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour; drink, and fear not your

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!

1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid. 2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices. 71

Peter. I thank you all. Drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer; and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord bless me, I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter? What more?

Peter. Thump. Sal. Thump? Then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man; and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queen; and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow ! York. Dispatch—this knave's tongue begins to double.

The armourer and his man, to enter the Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants! [Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes him down.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. Dies. York. Take away his weapon. Fellow. thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevail'd in right!

King. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight, guilt:

And God in justice hath reveal'd to us 100 The truth and innocence of this poor fellow. Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully.

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward. [Sound a flourish. Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. A street.

Enter DUKE HUMPHREY and his Men, in mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud,

And after summer evermore succeeds Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:

So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet. Sirs, what's o'clock?

Ten, my lord. Serv.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me

To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess.

Uneath may she endure the flinty streets To tread them with her tender-feeling feet. Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook 10 The abject people gazing on thy face,

With envious looks, laughing at thy shame. That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels

When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But, soft! I think she comes, and I'll prepare My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the Duchess of Gloucester in a white sheet, and a taper burning in her hand, with SIR JOHN STANLEY, the Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look how they gaze! See how the giddy multitude do point

And nod their heads and throw their eyes These few days' wonder will be quickly on thee!

Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks.

And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame And ban thine enemies, both mine and 25

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell: forget this grief.

myself!

For whilst I think I am thy married wife And thou a prince, Protector of this land, Methinks I should not thus be led along, 30 Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back.

And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans.

The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet. And when I start, the envious people laugh And bid me be advised how I tread. Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?

Trowest thou that e'er I'll look upon the world

Or count them happy that enjoy the sun? No: dark shall be my light and night my day; 40

To think upon my pomp shall be my hell. Sometime I'll say I am Duke Humphrey's

And he a prince, and ruler of the land: Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince he was, As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess, Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame.

Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will. For Suffolk—he that can do all in all With her that hateth thee and hates us all— And York, and impious Beautort, that false priest. Have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings, And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee.

But fear not thou until thy foot be snar'd. Nor never seek prevention of thy foes. Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear! Thou aimest all

I must offend before I be attainted: And had I twenty times so many foes, And each of them had twenty times their power,

All these could not procure me any scathe So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless. Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach?

Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away, But I in danger for the breach of law. Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell. I pray thee sort thy heart to patience;

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Majesty's Parliament,

Holden at Bury the first of this next month. Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before!

Duch. Ah. Gloucester, teach me to forget This is close dealing. Well. I will be there. [Exit Herald. My Nell, I take my leave-and, master sheriff. Let not her penance exceed the King's commission.

Sher. An't please your Grace, here my commission stays;

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady here?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse in that I prav

You use her well; the world may laugh again.

And I may live to do you kindness if You do it her. And so, Sir John, farewell. Duch. What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell! Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Servants. Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee ! For none abides with me. My joy is death-Death, at whose name I oft have been afeard,

Because I wish'd this world's eternity. 90 Stanley, I prithee go, and take me hence: I care not whither, for I beg no favour, Only convey me where thou art commanded. Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man,

There to be us'd according to your state. 95 Duch. That's bad enough, for 1 am but reproach-

And shall I then be us'd reproachfully? Stan. Like to a duchess and Duke Humphrey's lady;

According to that state you shall be us'd. Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare.

Although thou hast been conduct of my shame.

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me. Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharg'd.

Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet, 105

637

And go we to attire you for our journey. Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet.

No, it will hang upon my richest robes And show itself, attire me how I can. Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison. [Exeunt.

ACT THREE

Scene I. The Abbey at Bury St. Edmunds

Sound a sennet. Enter the King, the Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk, York, Bucking-HAM, Salisbury, and Warwick, io the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come.

'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now. Queen. Can you not see, or will ye not observe

The strangeness of his alter'd countenance? With what a majesty he bears himself; How insolent of late he is become, How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself?

affable.

And if we did but glance a far-off look Immediately he was upon his knee, That all the court admir'd him for submission.

But meet him now and be it in the morn, When every one will give the time of day, He knits his brow and shows an angry eye And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee, Disdaining duty that to us belongs. Small curs are not regarded when they grin, But great men tremble when the lion roars, And Humphrey is no little man in England. First note that he is near you in descent, And should you fall he is the next will mount;

Me seemeth, then, it is no policy-Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears, And his advantage following your decease That he should come about your royal person

Or be admitted to your Highness' Council. By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts:

And when he please to make commotion, 'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him. 30 Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallowrooted;

Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry. The reverent care I bear unto my lord Made me collect these dangers in the Duke. If it be fond, call it a woman's fear; Which fear if better reasons can supplant, I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the Hangs on the cutting short that fraudful Duke.

My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York.

Reprove my allegation if you can, Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your Highness seen into this duke;

And had I first been put to speak my mind. I think I should have told your Grace's tale. The Duchess, by his subornation, Upon my life, began her devilish practices: Or if he were not privy to those faults.

Yet by reputing of his high descent-As next the King he was successive heir-And such high vaunts of his nobility, Did instigate the bedlam brainsick Duchess By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,

And in his simple show he harbours treason.

The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.

No, no, my sovereign, Gloucester is a man Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit. Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law.

We know the time since he was mild and Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

> York. And did he not, in his protectorship, Levy great sums of money through the > realm For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent

> By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown

Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey.

King. My lords, at once: the care you have of us,

To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot.

Is worthy praise; but shall I speak my conscience?

Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent 69 From meaning treason to our royal person As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove: The Duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given

To dream on evil or to work my downfall: Queen. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance?

Seems he a dove? His feathers are but borrow'd,

For he's disposed as the hateful raven. Is he a lamb? His skin is surely lent him, For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf.

Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?

Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all 80

Enter SOMERSET.

All health unto my gracious l'hat England was defan.' by tyranny, sovereign!

King, Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories

Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.

King. Cold news, Lord Somerset; but God's will be done!

York. [Aside] Cold news for me: for I had hope of France

As firmly as I hope for fertile England. Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud, And caterpillars cat my leaves away; But I will remedy this gear ere long, Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

King! Pardon, my hege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon, Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art. I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk, thou shalt not see me

Nor change my countenance for this arrest: A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. 100 The purest spring is not so free from mud As I am clear from treason to my sovereign. Who can accuse me? Wherein ain I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France

And, being Protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;

By means whereof his Highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay Nor ever had one penny bribe from France. So help me God, as I have watch'd the night-

Ay, night by night-in studying good for England!

That dort that e'er I wrested from the King, Or any groat I hoarded to my use, Be brought against me at my trial-day!

No; many a pound of mine own proper store.

Because I would not tax the needy commons,

Have I dispursed to the garrisons, And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

York. In your protectorship you did Myself had notice of your conventicles devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard Ot.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that whiles I was Protector ity was all the fault that was in me; 125 'or I should melt at an offender's tears. And lowly words were ransom for their fault.

Unless it were a bloody muiderer,

Or foul felonious thief that fleec'd poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment, 130 Murder indeed, that bloody sin. I tortur'd Above the felon or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd:

But mighties crimes are laid unto your charge.

Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself. Glo. All happiness unto my lord the I do arrest you in his highness' name, And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal To keep until your turther time of trial.

King. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope

That you will clear yourself from all suspence.

My conscience tells me you are innocent. Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous!

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,

And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand:

Foul subornation is predominant. And equity exil'd your Highness' land, I know their complet is to have my life: And if my death might make this sland happy And prove the period of their tyranny, I would expend it with all willingness. 150 But mine is made the prologue to their play;

For thousands more that yet suspect no peril

Will not conclude their plotted tragedy. Beautort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice, And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate; Sharp Buckinghain unburdens with his tongue The envious load that lies upon his heart: And dogged York, that reaches at the moon. Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back. By false accuse doth level at my life. 160 And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,

Causeless have laid disgraces on my head, And with your best endeavour have stirr'd

My liefest liege to be mine enemy: Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me Ay, all of you have laid your heads together-

And all to make away my guiltless life.

Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt. The ancient proverb will be well effected: 'A staff is quickly found to beat a dog '. 171

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable. If those that care to keep your royal person From treason's secret knite and traitor's rage

Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at, 175 And the offender granted scope of speech, 'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your Grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here

With ignominious words, though clerkly couch'd.

As if she had suborned some to swear 180 False allegations to o'erthrow his state? Queen. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

indeed.

Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false!

And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He'll wrest the sense, and hold us here all day.

Lord Cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the Duke, and guard him sure.

Glo. Ah, thus King Henry throws away his crutch

Before his legs be firm to bear his body! 190 Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side.

And wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first.

Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it To rid us from the fear we have of him. were !

For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear. [Exit, guarded.

King. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best

Do or undo, as if ourself were here. Queen. What, will your Highness leave the Parliament?

King. Ay, Margaret; drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eves;

My body round engirt with misery-For what's more miserable than discontent? Ah, uncle Humphrey, in thy tace I see The map of honour, truth, and loyalty! And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come That e'er I prov'd thee false or fear'd thy faith.

What louring star now envies thy estate That these great lords, and Margaret our Queen,

Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?

I shall not want talse witness to condemn Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong:

And as the butcher takes away the calf, 210 And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays.

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house. Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence:

And as the dam runs lowing up and down. Looking the way her harmless young one went,

And can do nought but wail her dailing's loss,

Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case

With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eves

Look after him, and cannot do him good. So mighty are his vowed enemies. His fortunes I will weep, and 'twixt each groan Glo. Far truer spoke than meant: I lose Say 'Who's a traitor? Gloucester he is none'. [Exit.

Queen. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams:

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs. Too full of toolish pity; and Gloucester's show

Beguiles him as the mouinful crocodile With sorrow snares relenting passengers; Or as the snake, roll'd in a flow'ring bank, With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child

That for the beauty thinks it excellent, 730 Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I-

And yet herein I judge mine own wit good -This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world

Car. That he should die is worthy policy; But yet we want a colour for his death.

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law. Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:

The King will labour still to save his life; The commons haply rise to save his life; 210 And yet we have but trivial argument. my heart is More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I! York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.

But, my Lord Cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,

Say as you think, and speak it from your souls:

Were't not all one an empty eagle were set

To guard the chicken from a hungry kite As place Duke Humphrey for the King's Protector ?

Queen. So the poor chicken should be Had been the Regent there instead of me. sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and were't not madness then

To make the fox surveyor of the fold? Who being accus'd a crafty murderer. His guilt should be but idly posted over, 255 Because his purpose is not executed. No; let him die, in that he is a fox, By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock, Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood.

As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my hege.

And do not stand on quillets how to slay him: Be it by gins, by snares, by subtlety,

Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how, So he be dead; for that is good deceit Which mates him first that first intends deceit.

Queen. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were

For things are often spoke and seldom meant:

But that my heart accordeth with my tongue.

Seeing the deed is meritorious, And to preserve my sovereign from his foe, Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest: Say you consent and censure well the deed, And I'll provide his executioner— I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand the deed is worthy doing.

Queen. And so say I.

York. And I. And now we three have spoke it.

It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Post.

Post. Great lords, from Ireland am I come amain

To signify that rebels there are up

And put the Englishmen unto the sword. Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime.

Before the wound do grow uncurable; For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent as Regent thither:

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd, Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy, He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all as thou hast done.

I rather would have lost my life betimes Than bring a burden of dishonour home By staying there so long till all were lost. Show me one scar character'd on thy skin: Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win.

Queen. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire.

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with; No more, good York; sweet Somerset, be still.

Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been Regent there. Might happily have prov'd far worse than York. What, worse than nought? Nay, then a shame take all!

Som. And in the number, thee that wishest shame!

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.

Th' uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms 310 And temper clay with blood of Englishmen; To Ireland will you lead a band of men, Collected choicely, from each county some, And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his Majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent, And what we do establish he confirms: Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content; provide me soldiers, lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs. 320 Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.

But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him

That henceforth he shall trouble us no more. And so break off; the day is almost spent. Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers;

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland. Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of [Exeunt all but York. York. York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts

And change misdoubt to resolution; Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou art 2,0 Resign to death-it is not worth th' enjoying.

Witness the fortune he hath had in France. Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the meanborn man 335

641

And find no harbour in a royal heart.

Faster than spring-time show'rs comes thought on thought,

And not a thought but thinks on dignity.

My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,

Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies. 340

Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done
To send me packing with an host of men.
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them

I take it kindly. Yet be well assur'd You put sharp weapons in a madman's

Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band, I will stir up in England some black storm Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell;

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage Until the golden circuit on my head, Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,

Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

And for a minister of my intent

I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman, John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.

559
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,
And fought so long till that his thighs with darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine; And in the end being rescu'd, I have seen

Him caper upright like a wild Morisco, 365 Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells. Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern, Hath he conversed with the enemy, And undiscover'd come to me again And given me notice of their villainies. 370 This devil here shall be my substitute; For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble.

By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,

How they affect the house and claim of York.

Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured;
I know no pain they can inflict upon him

We have dispatch'd the Duke, as he commanded.

2 Mur. O that it were to do! What have we done?

Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter Suffolk.

1 Mur. Here comes my lord. 5
Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thing?

1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead. Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house;

I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The King and all the peers are here at hand.
Have you laid fair the bed? Is all things

According as I gave directions?

1 Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.
Suf. Away! be gone. [Exeunt Murderers.

Sound trumpets. Enter the King, the Queen, Cardinal, Somerset, with Attendants.

King. Go call our uncle to our presence straight;

Re-enter Suffolk.

How now! Why look'st thou pale? Why tremblest thou?

Where is our uncle? What's the matter, Suffolk?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloucester is dead.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK, SALISBURY, and many Commons.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign, That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is murd'red

And comment then upon his sudden death. war. That shall I do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury, With the rude multitude till I return. [Exit. Exit Salisbury with the Commons.

King. O Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts-

My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul

Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life!

If my suspect be false, forgive me, God; For judgment only doth belong to Thee. 140 Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips With twenty thousand kisses and to drain Upon his face an ocean of salt tears

To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:

But all in vain are these mean obsequies; And to survey his dead and earthy image, What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

Bed put forth with the body. Enter WARWICK.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign view this body. King. That is to see how deep my grave is made; For with his soul fled all my worldly solace

For, seeing him, I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live With that dread King that took our state upon Him

To free us from his Father's wrathful curse I do believe that violent hands were laid Upon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?

War. See how the blood is settled in his face.

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd

And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd.

Look, on the sheets his hair, you see. is sticking;

His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodged.

It cannot be but he was murd'red here: The least of all these signs were probable. Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the Duke to death? Myself and Beaufort had him in protection: And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers. 181

War. But both of you were vow'd Duke Humphrey's foes:

And you, forsooth, had the good Duke to keep.

Tis like you would not feast him like a friend;

And 'tis well seen he found an enemy. Queen. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen

As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe, But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest But may imagine how the bird was dead, Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?

Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Queen. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? Where's your knife? Is Beaufort term'd a kite? Where are his talons? Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping men;

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease.

That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.

Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwick- Here in our presence! Dare you be so

That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death. [Exeunt Cardinal, Somerset, and others.

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Queen. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller, 205 Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still-with reverence may I say:

For every word you speak in his behalf Is slander to your royal dignity.

Re-enter Salisbury.

Sal. [To the Commons within] Sirs, stand apart, the King shall know your mind.

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me

Unless Lord Suffolk straight be done to death.

Or banished fair England's territories, 245 They will by violence tear him from your palace

And torture him with grievous ling'ring death.

They say by him the good Duke Humphrey died;

They say in him they fear your Highness' death;

And mere instinct of love and loyalty, 250 Free from a stubborn opposite intent,

As being thought to contradict your liking, Makes them thus forward in his banishment.

They say, in care of your most royal person. That if your Highness should intend to sleep

And charge that no man should disturb vour rest.

In pain of your dislike or pain of death, Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict, Were there a serpent seen with torked tongue

That shly glided towards your Majesty, 260 It were but necessary you were wak'd, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber. War. Away even now, or I will drag thee The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal.

And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,

That they will guard you, whe'er you will or no,

From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is; With whose envenomed and fatal sting Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,

They say, is shamefully bereft of life. Commons. [Within] An answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury!

King, or we will all break in !

King. Go. Salisbury, and tell them all from me 270

I thank them for their tender loving care; And had I not been cited so by them, Yet did I purpose as they do entreat; For sure my thoughts do hourly prophesy

Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means. And therefore by His Majesty I swear, 285

Whose far unworthy deputy I am, He shall not breathe infection in this air But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit Salisbury. Queen. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!

King. Ungentle Queen, to call him gentle Suffolk!

No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him, Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath. Had I but said, I would have kept my word;

But when I swear, it is irrevocable. If after three days' space thou here be'st found

On any ground that I am ruler of. The world shall not be ransom for thy life. Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;

I have great matters to impart to thee. Exeunt all but Queen and Suffolk.

Suf. Cease, gentle Queen, these execrations.

And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave. Queen. Fie, coward woman and softhearted wretch, Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy? Suf. A plague upon them! Wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill as doth the mandrake's groan,

I would invent as bitter searching terms, As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear, Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth, With full as many signs of deadly hate, As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave. My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words.

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint.

Mine hair be fix'd an end, as one distract; Ay, every joint should seem to curse and

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell-Queen. Enough, sweet Suffolk, thou torment'st thyself:

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst

Or like an overcharged gun, recoil. And turns the force of them upon thyself. Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave? Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from.

Well could I curse away a winter's night, 335 Though standing naked on a mountain top Where biting cold would never let grass grow,

And think it but a minute spent in sport. Queen. O, let me entreat thee cease! Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears; Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place To wash away my woeful monuments.

Loather a hundred times to part than die. Yet now, farewell; and farewell life with thee! 356

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,

Once by the King and three times thrice by thee.

'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence;

A wilderness is populous enough, So Suffolk had thy heavenly company; For where thou art, there is the world itself, With every several pleasure in the world; And where thou art not, desolation. 364 I can no more: Live thou to joy thy life; Myself no joy in nought but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Queen. Whither goes Vaux so fast? What news, I prithee?

Vaux. To signify unto his Majesty That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death; For suddenly a grievous sickness took him That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air. Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.

Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost

Were by his side; sometime he calls the King

And whispers to his pillow, as to him. 375 The secrets of his overcharged soul; And I am sent to tell his Majesty

That even now he cries aloud for him. Queen. Go tell this heavy message to the Exit Vaux. King.

Ay me! What is this world! What news are these! But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor

Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure? Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee, And with the southern clouds contend in tears-

Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?

Now get thee hence: the King, thou know'st, is coming:

If thou be found by me, thou art but dead. Suf. If I depart from thee I cannot live; And in thy sight to die, what were it else But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap? 390 Here could I breathe my soul into the air, As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe Dying with mother's dug between its lips; Where, from thy sight, I should be raging

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes, To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth;

So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul, Or I should breathe it so into thy body, And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.

To die by thee were but to die in lest: 400 From thee to die were torture more than death.

O, let me stay, befall what may befall! Queen. Away! Though parting be a fretful corrosive,

It is applied to a deathful wound.

To France, sweet Suffolk. Let me hear from Lord Card'nal, if thou think'st on heaven's thee;

For whereso'er thou art in this world's globe

I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out. Suf. I go.

Queen. And take my heart with thee.

[She kisses him. Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woefull'st cask

That ever did contain a thing of worth. 410 Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we: This way fall I to death.

Queen. This way for me. [Exeunt severally.

King. How fares my lord? Speak. Beaufort, to thy sovereign. Car. If thou be'st Death I'll give thee England's treasure. Enough to purchase such another island, So thou wilt let me live and feel no pain.

King. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life 5 Where death's approach is seen so terrible! War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.

Died he not in his bed? Where should he die?

Can I make men live, whe'er they will or O, torture me no more! I will confess.

Alive again? Then show me where he is; I'll give a thousand pound to look upon hum.

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Comb down his hair; look, look! it stands upright,

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul! Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary Bring the strong poison that I bought of him. King. O Thou eternal Mover of the heavens, Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch! O, beat away the busy meddling fiend

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul.

And from his bosom purge this black despair!

War. See how the pangs of death do make hım grin.

Sal. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.

King. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be !

Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope. He dies, and makes no sign: O God,

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

King. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.

Scene I. The coast of Kent.

Alarum. Fight at sea. Ordnance goes off. Enter a Lieutenant, a Shipmaster and his Mate, and Walter Whitmore, with Sailors; SUFFOLK and other Gentlemen, as prisoners.

Lieut. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day

Is crept into the bosom of the sea; And now loud-howling wolves arouse the Never yet did base dishonour blur our iades

That drag the tragic melancholy night; Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws

Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air. Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize;

For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,

Here shall they make their ransom on the sand.

Or with their blood stain this discoloured shore.

Suf. Poole? Lieut. Ay, kennel, puddle, sink, whose filth and dirt Troubles the silver spring where England drinks:

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth For swallowing the treasure of the realm. Thy lips, that kiss'd the Queen, shall sweep the ground:

And thou that smil'dst at good Duke Humphrey's death

Against the senseless winds shalt grin in

Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again: And wedded be thou to the hags of hell For daring to affy a mighty lord Unto the daughter of a worthless king. Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem. Enter George Bevis and John Holland.

Geo. Come and get thee a sword, though made of a lath; they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now, then.

Geo. I tell thee Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Well, I say it was never merry world in England since gentlemen came up.

Dick. [Aside] Or rather, of stealing a cad of herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes—command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer— Dick. [Aside] He was an honest man and a good bricklaver.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet-Dick. [Aside] I knew her well; she was midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies— Dick. [Aside] She was, indeed, a pedlar'daughter, and sold many laces.

Smith. [Aside] But now of late, not able to travel with her furr'd pack, she washe bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. [Aside] Av. by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he born, under a hedge, for his father had never a house but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. [Aside] 'A must needs: for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. [Aside] No question of that : for I have seen him whipt three market days ogether.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire. Smith. [Aside] He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof.

Dick. [Aside] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' th' hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then, for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hoop'd pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer. All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And when I am kingas king I will be-

All. God save your Majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people—there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score, and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? That parchment, being scribbl'd o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings; but I say 'tis the bee's wax; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! Who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham. write and read and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies. Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. Has a book in his pocket with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't; the man is a proper man, of mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee. What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters; 'twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like a honest plain-dealing man? Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I nave been so well brought up that I can write my name. All. He hath confess'd. Away with him!

He's a villam and a traitor. Cade. Away with him, I say! Hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck. [Exit one with the Clerk.

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our General?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow. Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the King's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encount'red with a' man as good as himself. He is but a knight, is 'a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels] Rise up, Sir John Mortimer, [Rises] Now have at him!

HUMPHREY William his brother, with drum and Soldiers.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent.

Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down:

Home to your cottages, forsake this groom; The King is merciful if you revolt. W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,

If you go forward; therefore yield or die. Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not;

It is to you, good people, that I speak, O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign;

For I am rightful heir unto the crown. Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer; And thou thyself a shearman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener. W. Staf. And what of that?

Earl of March,

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not?

Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staf. That's false.

Cade. Ay, there's the question; but I say 'tis true.

The elder of them being put to nurse, Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away, And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a bricklayer when he came to

His son am I; deny it if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's words

That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we: therefore get ve gone.

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. [Aside] He lies, for I invented it mvself-Go to, sirrah, tell the King from me that for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to spancounter for French crowns. I am content he shall reign; but I'll be Protector over

Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England main'd and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth and made it an eunuch; and more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor. 162

Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance! Cade Nay, answer if you can; the Frenchmen are our enemies. Go to, then, I ask but this: can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor. or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,

Assail them with the army of the King. 170 Staf. Herald, away; and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade:

That those which fly before the battle ends May, even in their wives' and children's sight,

Be hang'd up for example at their doors. 175 Cade. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, And you that be the King's friends, follow > Exeunt the two Staffords and Soldiers. Cade. And you that love the commons follow me.

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty. We will not leave one lord, one gentleman; Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon, For they are thrifty honest men and such As would—but that they dare not—take our parts. Dick. They are all in order, and march towārd us.

Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march for-141 ward. (Exeunt. Scene III. Another part of Blackheath.

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are slain. Enter CADE and the rest.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house; therefore thus will I reward thee—the Lent shall be as long again as it is, and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deserv'st no less. [Putting on Sir Humphrey's brigandine] This monument of the victory will I bear, and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter the King with a supplication, and the Queen with Suffolk's head; the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, and the LORD SAY.

Queen. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind

And makes it fearful and degenerate; Think therefore on revenge and cease to

But who can cease to weep, and look on this?

Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast;

But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your Grace to the rebels' supplication?

King. I'll send some holy bishop to King. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;

For God forbid so many simple souls 10 Should perish by the sword! And I myself, Rather than bloody war shall cut them short.

Will parley with Jack Cade their general. But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Queen. Ah, barbarous villains! Hath this lovely face

Rul'd like a wandering planet over me, 16 And could it not enforce them to relent That were unworthy to behold the same?

King. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope your Highness shall have his.

King. How now, madam!

Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death?

I fear me, love, if that I had been dead, Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for me.

Queen. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

King. How now! What news? Why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer,

Descended from the Duke of Clarence' house,

And calls your Grace usurper, openly, 30 And vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged multitude

Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless; Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death

Hath given them heart and courage to proceed. 35

All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call false caterpillars and intend their death.

King. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth 39

Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Queen. Ah, were the Duke of Suffolk now alive.

These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd!

King. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee; Therefore away with us to Killingworth. Say. So might your Grace's person be in danger.

The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
And therefore in this city will I stay
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London Bridge.

The citizens fly and forsake their houses; 50 The rascal people, thirsting after prey, Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear

To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse.

King. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Queen. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd. 56

King. [To Lord Say] Farewell, my lord, trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betrav'd.

The trust I have is in mine innocence.

And therefore am I bold and resolute. 60 [Exeunt.

SCENE V. London. The Tower.

LORD SCALES upon the Tower.

walking. Then enter two or three Citizens.

Scales. How now! Is Jack Cade slain? 1 Cit. No. my lord, nor likely to be slain ; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them. The Lord Mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels. 5

Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command.

But I am troubled here with them myself: The rebels have assav'd to win the Tower. But get you to Smithfield, and gather head, And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe; Fight for your King, your country, and your lives;

And so, farewell, for I must hence again. TExeunt.

Scene VI London. Cannon street.

Enter JACK CADE and the rest, and strikes his staff on London stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London Stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now henceforward it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running,

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade! Cade. Knock him down there.

[They kill him. Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call ye Jack Cade more; I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them. But first go and set London Bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. [Exeunt. Come. let's away.

Scene VII. London. Smithfield.

Alarums. MATTHEW GOFFE is slain, and all the rest. Then enter JACK CADE, with his company.

down the Savoy; others to th' Inns of Court; down with them all.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. [Aside] Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese.

Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm. My mouth shall be the Parliament of England.

John. [Aside] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pull'd out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! Here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! Now art thou within point blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my Majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Mounsieur Basimecu the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school; and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be us'd, and, contrary to the King, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed iustices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison, and because they could not read, thou hast hang'd them, when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'st not to let thy Cade. So, sirs. Now go some and pull horse wear a cloak, when honester men than thou go in their hose and doublets. 47

Dick. And work in their shirt too, as Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship. myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say, You men of Kent-

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: 'tis' bona terra. mala gens'.

Cade. Away with him, away with him! O, let me live! He speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.

Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ. Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle. Sweet is the country, because full of riches; The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy; Which makes me hope you are not void of

I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy; Yet, to recover them, would lose my life. Justice with favour have I always done; Pray'rs and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands, But to maintain the King, the realm, and vou ?

Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,

Because my book preferr'd me to the King, And seeing ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven.

Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits You cannot but forbear to murder me. This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings

For your behoof.

Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say, Great men have reaching hands. Oft have-I struck

Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! What, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o' th' ear, and that will make 'em red again.

Say, Long sitting to determine poor men's causes

Hath made me full of sickness and diseases. Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then, and the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man? Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes

Cade. Nay, he nods at us, as who should say 'I'll be even with you'; I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein have I offended

Have I affected wealth or honour? Speak. Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold? Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my

death? 95

50 These hands are free from guiltless bloodshedding.

This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts.

Cade. [Aside] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it. He shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. -Away with him! He has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently, and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your pray'rs,

God should be so obdurate as yourselves. How would it fare with your departed souls?

And therefore yet relent, and save my life. Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some with Lord Say] The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it. Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as tree as heart can wish or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently,

All. O. brave!

Re-enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they lov'd well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night; for with these borne before us instead of maces will we ride through the streets, and at every corner have them kiss. Away! [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. Southwark.

Alarum and retreat. Enter again CADE and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish Street! down Saint Magnus' Corner! Kill and knock down! Throw them into Thames! [Sound a parley What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley when I command them kill?

Enter Buckingham and old Clifford attended.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee.

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from Henry hath money; you are strong and the King

Unto the commons whom thou hast misled; And here pronounce free pardon to them all

That will forsake thee and go home in peace. Clif. What say ye, countrymen? Will ye relent

And vield to mercy whilst 'tis offer'd you, Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths? Who loves the King, and will embrace his pardon, Fling up his cap and say 'God save his Majesty!'

Who hateth him and honours not his father, Henry the Fifth, that made all France to guake.

Shake he his weapon at us and pass by. All. God save the King! God save the King!

Cade. What, Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? Will you needs be hang'd with your pardons about your Hath my sword therefore broke necks? through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ve would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom. But you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one; and so God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade! Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth, That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him?

Will he conduct you through the heart of France,

And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?

Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to: Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil, Unless by robbing of your friends and us. Were't not a shame that whilst you live at

The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,

Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you?

Methinks already in this civil broil I see them lording it in London streets, Crying 'Villiago!' unto all they meet. 45 Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry

Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.

To France, to France, and get what you have lost;

Spare England, for it is your native coast. And Henry, though he be infortunate, manly.

God on our side, doubt not of victory. All. A Clifford! a Clifford! We'll follow the King and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me. My sword make way for me for here is no staying. In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very middest of you! and heavens and honour be witness that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit.

Buck. What, is he fled? Go some, and follow him; And he that brings his head unto the King Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward. [Exeunt some of them. Follow me, soldiers; we'll devise a mean

To reconcile you all unto the King. [Exeunt.

Scene IX. Killingworth Castle.

Sound trumpets. Enter King, Queen, and Somerset, on the terrace.

King. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne

And could command no more content than I?

No sooner was I crept out of my cradle But I was made a king, at nine months old. Was never subject long'd to be a king As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and old CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health and glad tidings to your Majesty!

King. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surpris'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, Multitudes, with halters about their necks.

Clif. He is fled, my lord, and all his powers do vield. And humbly thus, with halters on their necks Expect your Highness' doom of life or death.

King. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise! Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,

And show'd how well you love your Prince and country. Continue still in this so good a mind, Assure yourselves, will never be unkind. And so, with thanks and pardon to you all. I do dismiss you to your several countries. All. God save the King! God save the King!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your Grace to be adver-

The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland

And with a puissant and a mighty power 25 Of gallowglasses and stout kerns Is marching hitherward in proud array. And still proclaimeth, as he comes along, His arms are only to remove from thee The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor. King. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd:

Like to a ship that, having scap'd a tempest, Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate:

But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd,

And now is York in arms to second him. 35 I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him And ask him what's the reason of these arms.

Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the

And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither Until his army be dismiss'd from him. 40 Som. My lord

I'll yield myself to prison willingly,

Or unto death, to do my country good. King. In any case be not too rough in terms.

For he is fierce and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord, and doubt not so to deal

As all things shall redound unto your good. King. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;

For yet may England curse my wretched reign. [Flourish. Exeunt Scene X. Kent. Iden's garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambitions! Fie on myself. that have a sword and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am T so hungry that, if I might have a lease o my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climb'd into this garden, to see if I can eat grass or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word turn the edge, or cut not out the burlysallet 'was born to do me good; for many bon'd clown in chines of beef ere thou sleep time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had een cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath serv'd me instead of a juart-pot to drink in; and now the word sallet' must serve me to feed on.

Enter IOEN.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these ? This small inheritance my father left me lontenteth me, and worth a monarchy.

I seek not to wax great by others' waning 20 Or gather wealth I care not with what envy: Sufficeth that I have maintains my state. And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his feesimple without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the King by carrying my head to him; out I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich and swallow my sword like a great pin ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou be, know thee not; why then should I betray thee?

is't not enough to break into my garden And like a thief to come to rob my grounds, Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner, But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee? Ay, by the best blood that ever was broach'd, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days, yet come thou and thy five men and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands, That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent. Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man. Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine: See if thou canst outface me with thy looks; Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser; Thy hand is but a finger to my fist, Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon; My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast.

And if mine arm be heaved in the air, 50 Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth. As for words, whose greatness answers words,

Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou in thy sheath, I beseech God on my knees thou mayst be turn'd to hobnails. [Here they fight; Cade falls] O, I am slain! famine and no other hath slain me. Let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead.

Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,

But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat 69
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour. [Dies.

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge.

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword.

So wish I I might thrust thy soul to hell. Hence will I drag thee headlong by the Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave, And there cut off thy most ungracious head, Which I will bear in triumph to the King, Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

Enter YORK, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right

And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:

Ring bells aloud, burn bonfires clear and bright,

To entertain great England's lawful king. Ah, sancta majestas! who would not buy thee dear?

Let them obey that knows not how to rule; This hand was made to handle nought but gold.

I cannot give due action to my words
Except a sword or sceptre balance it.
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

[Aside] Whom have we here? Bucking-ham, to disturb me?

The King hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, accept thy greeting.

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,

To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,

Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, 20 Should raise so great a power without his leave,

Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great.

O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,

I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,

On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury. I am far better born than is the King,

More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;

But I must make fair weather yet awhile, 30 Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.—

Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me That I have given no answer all this while; My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.

The cause why I have brought this army hither Is to remove proud Somerset from the King,

Seditious to his Grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part;

But if thy arms be to no other end, The King hath yielded unto thy demand: 40 The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner? Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner. York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my pow'rs.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;

Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field, You shall have pay and everything you wish.

And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry, Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons, As pledges of my fealty and love.

1'il send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I

Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

We twain will go into his Highness' tent. 55 Enter the King, and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us.

That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm ?

York. In all submission and humility York doth present himself unto your Highness.

Then what intends these forces thou dost bring?

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from hence, And fight against that monstrous rebel Cade, Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with Cade's head.

Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition May pass into the presence of a king, Lo, I present your Grace a traitor's head, The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew. King. The head of Cade! Great God, how just art Thou! O, let me view his visage, being dead, That living wrought me such exceeding trouble. Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that I know, ere they will have me go to ward, slew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your Majesty. King. How art thou call'd? And what is thy degree? Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name; A poor esquire of Kent that loves his king. Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss

He were created knight for his good service. King. Iden, kneel down. [He kneels] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks, And will that thou thenceforth attend on us. Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,

And never live but true unto his liege!

Enter the QUEEN and SOMERSET.

King. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with th' Queen: Go, bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.

Queen. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head, But boldly stand and front him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty? Then, York, unloose thy long-imprisoned thoughts

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart. Shall I endure the sight of Somerset? False king, why hast thou broken faith with me,

Buck. York, I commend this kind sub-mission. Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse? King did I call thee? No, thou art not king;

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes.

Which dar's not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff. And not to grace an awful princely sceptre. That gold must round engirt these brows of mine,

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear.

Is able with the change to kill and cure. Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up, And with the same to act controlling laws. Give place. By heaven, thou shalt rule no more O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler. TOS Som. O monstrous traitor! I arrest thee. York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the King and crown.

Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace, York. Wouldst have me kneel? First let me ask of these.

If they can brook I bow a knee to man. 110 Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail:

[Exit Attendant. They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

Queen. Call hither Clifford; bid him come amain.

To say if that the bastard boys of York 115 Shall be the surety for their traitor father. Exit Buckingham.

York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan, Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!

The sons of York, thy betters in their birth. Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those

That for my surety will refuse the boys!

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Enter CLIFFORD and his Son.

Queen. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.

Clif. Health and all happiness to my lord the King! [Kneels. York. I thank thee, Clifford. Say, what news with thee? Nay, do not fright us with an angry look. We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again; For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my King, York, I do not mistake:

But thou mistakes me much to think I do. And shame thine honourable age with To Bedlam with him! Is the man grown mad?

King. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humeur

Makes him oppose himself against his king. Clil. Ife is a traitor; let him to the Tower.

And chop away that factious pate of his. 135 Queen. He is arrested, but will not obey; His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image

I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.

Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,

That with the very shaking of their chains They may astonish these fell-lucking curs. Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the EARLS OF WARWICK and SALISBURY.

Clif. Are these thy bears? We'll bait thy I am resolv'd for death or dignity. bears to death,

And manacle the berard in their chains, If thou dar'st bring them to the baitinglace.

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur Run back and bite, because he was withheld:

Who, being suffer'd, with the bear's fell

Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs and cried;

And such a piece of service will you do, 25-If you oppose yourselves to match Lord The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,

As crooked in thy manners as thy shape! anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.

forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair, Thou mad misleader of thy brainsick son! What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles? O. where is faith? O, where is loyalty? If it be banish'd from the frosty head, Where shall it find a harbour in the earth? Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war blood ?

Why art thou old, and want'st experience Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it? For shame! In duty bend thy knee to me. That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have considered with myself

The title of this most renowned duke, And in my conscience do repute his Grace The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

King. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have. King. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath? Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin; But greater sin to keep a sinful oath Who can be bound by any solemn vow

To do a murd'rous deed, to rob a man, 185 To force a spotless virgin's chastity, To reave the orphan of his patrimony,

To wring the widow from her custom'd right,

And have no other reason for this wrong But that he was bound by a solemn oath? Queen. A subtle traitor needs no sophister. King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. 102

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hasr.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true. 195 War. You were best to go to bed and dream again

To keep thee from the tempest of the field. Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm Than any thou carst conjure up to-day; And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, 200 Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest, staff,

This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet, As on a mountain-top the cedar shows, 205 That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm, York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly Even to affright thee with the view thereof. Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear And tread it under foot with all contempt, King. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee Despite the beard that protects the bear. Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious > father, To quell the rebels and their complices. Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! Speak not > in spite, For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night. Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell. Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.

659

Scene II. Saint Albans.

Alarums to the battle. Enter WARWICK.

War, Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls:

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear.

Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarum

And dead men's cries do fill the empty air, Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with mé.

Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumber-

Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord! what, all a-foot? York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed:

But match to match I have encount'red him,

And made a prey for carrion kites and crows

Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well. Enter old CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase.

For I myself must hunt this deer to death. War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day, It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit. Clif. What seest thou in me, York? Why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love

But that thou art so fast mine enemy. Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem

But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason. York. So let it help me now against thy sword.

As I in justice and true right express it! 25 Clif. My soul and body on the action both!

York. A dreadful lay! Address thee instantly.

[They fight and Clifford falls. Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres. [Dies. York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will! [Exit.

Enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! All is on the rout:

660

Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,

Whom angry heavens do make their minister,

Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part 35 Hot coals of vengeance! Let no soldier fly. He that is truly dedicate to war

Hath no self-love: nor he that loves himself

Hath not essentially, but by circumstance. The name of valour. [Sees his father's body. O, let the vile world end

And the premised flames of the last day Knit earth and heaven together! Now let the general trumpet blow his blast.

Particularities and petty sounds To cease! Wast thou ordain'd, dear father, To lose thy youth in peace and to achieve The silver livery of advised age,

And in thy reverence and thy chair-days thus

To die in ruffian battle? Even at this sight My heart is turn'd to stone; and while 'tis mine It shall be stony. York not our old men spares: No more will I their babes. Tears virginal Shall be to me even as the dew to fire: And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims, Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax, 55 Henceforth I will not have to do with pity: Meet I an infant of the house of York,

Into as many gobbets will I cut it As wild Medea young Absyrtus did; In cruelty will I seek out my fame. Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house;

As did Æneas old Anchises bear. So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders; But then Æneas bare a living load.

Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. 65 [Exit with the body.

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET to fight. Somerset is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there; For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign, The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset Hath made the wizard famous in his death.

Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still: Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.

Fight. Excursions. Enter King, Queen, and Others.

Queen. Away, my lord! You are slow; for shame, away!

King. Can we outrun the heavens? Good Margaret, stay.

Queen. What are you made of? You'll nor fight nor fly.

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence, Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds To give the enemy way, and to secure us

By what we can, which can no more but fly. [Alarum afar off. If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom our fortunes; but if we haply Of all scape-As well we may, if not through your neglect-We shall to London get, where you are lov'd.

And where this breach now in our fortunes made May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter young CLIFFORD.

mischief set. I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly: But fly you must; uncurable discomfit parts. Away, for your relief! and we will live To see their day and them our fortune give. [Exeunt. Away, my lord, away!

Scene III. Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum, Retreat, Enter YORK, RICHARD, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him.

That winter hon, who in rage forgets Aged contusions and all brush of time And, like a gallant in the brow of youth, Repairs him with occasion? This happy day

Is not itself, nor have we won one foot, If Salisbury be lost. My noble father, Rich.

Three times to-day I holp him to his horse. Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off. Persuaded him from any further act: But still where danger was, still there I met him:

And like rich hangings in a homely house. So was his will in his old feeble body. But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day! By th' mass, so did we all. I thank you,

Richard: God knows how long it is I have to live, Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future And it hath pleas'd Him that three times > to-day You have defended me from imminent death. Reigns in the hearts of all our present Well, lords, we have not got that which we have:

'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled, Being opposites of such repairing nature. York. I know our safety is to follow them: For, as I hear, the King is fled to London To call a present court of Parliament. Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth. What says Lord Warwick? Shall we after them? War. After them? Nav. before them, if

Now, by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:

Saint Albans' battle, won by famous York. Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come. Sound drum and trumpets and to London all:

And more such days as these to us befall ! [Exeunt

THE SCENE: England and France.

ACT ONE

LORD HASTINGS.

LORD STAFFORD.

SCENE I. London. The Parliament House. Alarum. Enter DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WAR-WICK, and Soldiers, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder how the King escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He slily stole away and left his men; Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland. Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat.

Cheer'd up the drooping army, and himself, Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,

Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Búckingham, Is either slain or wounded dangerous; I cleft his beaver with a downright blow. 662

That this is true, father, behold his blood. Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood, Whom I encount'red as the battles join'd. Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down Somerset's head. York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.

But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head. 20 War. And so do I. Victorious Prince of York.

Before I see thee seated in that throne Which now the house of Lancaster usurps, I vow by heaven these eyes shall never

This is the palace of the fearful King, 25 And this the regal seat. Possess it, York; For this is thine, and not King Henry's close.

heirs'. York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will:

For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you; he that flies shall die. 30

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk. Stay by me, my lords:

And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this And they have troops of soldiers at their night.

[They go up. beck?

War. And when the King comes, offer him no violence.

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.

York. The Queen this day here holds her parliament,

But little thinks we shall be of her council. By words or blows here let us win our right. Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd, 39

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be King, And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice

Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute:

I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancastei,
Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.
I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares.

Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown. York occupies the throne Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Exeter, and Others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,

Even in the chair of state! Belike he means,

Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,

To aspire unto the crown and reign as king. Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father;

And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge 55

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!

Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

West. What, shall we suffer this? Let's pluck him down;

My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons such as he; He durst not sit there had your father liv'd. My gracious lord, here in the parliament Let us assail the tamily of York. North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin; be it so.

K. Her. Ah, know you not the city favours them.

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?

Exe. But when the Duke is slain they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart.

Henry's heart, 70
To make a shambles of the parilament house!

Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats.

Shall be the war that Henry means to use. Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne

And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet; I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine.

Exe. For shame, come down; he made thee Duke of York.

York. 'I was my inheritance, as the earl-dom was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown 80
In following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural king?

War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?

York. It must and shall be so; content thyself.

War. Be Duke of Lancaster; let him be King.

West. He is both King and Duke of Lancaster; And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it.

You forget

That we are those which chas'd you from the field,

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread

March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I'll have more lives

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that instead of words

65 I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger

As shall revenge his death before I stir. 100 War. Poor Clifford, how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York; Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March:

I am the son of Henry the Fifth,

Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,

And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces. War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I:

When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet methinks you lose.

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head. Mont. Good brother, as thou lov'st and honourest arms,

Let's fight it out and not stand cavilling

the King will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou! and give King Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first. Hear him, lords:

And be you silent and attentive too,

For he that interrupts him shall not live. K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, Wherein my grandsire and my father sat? No; first shall war unpeople this my realm; Ay, and their colours, often borne in France,

And now in England to our heart's great sorrow,

Shall be my winding-sheet. Why faint you, lords?

My title's good, and better far than his. 130 War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be King.

K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest

king.

K. Hen. [Aside] I know not what to say: my title's weak.-

York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful King;

For Richard, in the view of many lords, 664

Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth. Whose heir my father was, and I am his, 140 York. He rose against him, being his sovereign.

And made him to resign his crown perforce. War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,

Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown?' Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown

But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful King.

K. Hen. [Aside] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,

Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd. War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all. North. Thou art deceiv'd. 'Tis not thy southern power

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and Can set the Duke up in despite of me. Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong, Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence.

May that ground gape, and swallow me alıve, Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father! K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive

my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.

What mutter you, or what conspire you, lords ? War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York: Or I will fill the house with armed men, And over the chair of state, where now he sits, Write up his title with usurping blood. [He stamps with his foot and the Soldiers show themselves. K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear but got the crown. one word: 170

'Twas by rebellion against his Let me for this my life-time reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs.

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir? 135 And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

> K. Hen. I am content. Richard Plantagenet,

Enjoy the kingdom after my decease. 175

Clif. What wrong is this unto the Prince vour son l

War. What good is this to England and himself!

Base, fearful, and despairing Henry I

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

I cannot stay to hear these articles. North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the Queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-harted and degenerate king.

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York

And die in bands for this unmanly deed! Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcome.

Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd! IExeunt Northumberland, Clifford and Westmoreland.

War. Turn this way. Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.

K. Hen. Ah, Éxeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord? K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit. But be it as it may. [To York] I here entail The crown to thee and to thine heirs for 195 ever:

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live, To honour me as thy king and sovereign, And neither by treason nor hostility To seek to put me down and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. [Coming from the throne. War. Long live King Henry! Planta-genet, embrace him. K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exe. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes!

[Sennet. Here they come down. York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself [Exeunt the Yorkists. I came. K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court. 210

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES.

Exe. Here comes the Queen, whose looks bewray her anger. I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes? Ah, wretched man! Would I had died a maid. And never seen thee, never borne thee son. Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father! Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?

Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I, Or felt that pain which I did for him once, Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood, Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-

blood there

Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir,

And disinherited thine only son. Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit

If you be King, why should not I succeed? K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret: pardon me, sweet son.

The Earl of Warwick and the Duke enforc'd

Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee! Art thou King and wilt be forc'd?

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me; And giv'n unto the house of York such head

As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance. To entail him and his heirs unto the crown, What is it but to make thy sepulchre 236 And creep into it far before thy time? Warwick is Chancellor and the lord of Calais; Stern Falconbridge commands the narrow seas;

The Duke is made Protector of the realm; And yet shalt thou be safe? Such safety finds

The trembling lamb environed with wolves. Had I been there, which am a silly woman, The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes

Before I would have granted to that act. 245 But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour;

Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed, Until that act of parliament be repeal'd Whereby my son is disinherited.

665

The northern lords that have forsworn thy colours spread:

And spread they shall be, to thy foul It will outrun you, father, in the end, disgrace

And utter ruin of the house of York. Thus do I leave thee. Come, son, let's away; Our army is ready; come, we'll after them. K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou will stay with me?

Q. Mar. Av, to be murder'd by his enemies.

Prince. When I return with victory from the field

I'll see your Grace: till then I'll follow her. Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus. [Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.

K. Hen. Poor queen! How love to me and to her son

Hath made her break out into terms of Reveng'd may she be on that hateful Duke. Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire, Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle Tire on the flesh of me and of my son! The loss of those three lords torments my

Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife?

What is your quarrel? How began it first? Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention. York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and us-be forsworn. York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took

Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous. Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think

I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush.

To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless. Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,

Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman. Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?

It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen:

That beggais mounted run their horse to death.

ACT TWO

Scene I. A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

A march. Enier ED VARD, RICHARD, and their rower.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father scap'd,

Or whether he be scap'd away or no Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit.

Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news;

Had he been slain, we should have heard the news;

Or had he scap'd, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape. How fares my brother? Why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become. 10 I saw him in the battle range about

And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth. Methought he bore him in the thickest troop As doth a hon in a herd of neat;

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs, Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,

The rest stand all aloof and bark at him. So far'd our father with his enemies; So fled his enemies my warlike father. Methinks 'tis prize enough to be his son, 20

164 And takes her farewell of the glorious sun. How well resembles it the prime of youth, Trimm'd like a younker prancing to his love!

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suas?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun;

Not separated with the racking clouds. But sever'd in a p e clear-shitting sky. See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss.

As if they vow'd some league inviolable, 30 Now are they but one lamp, one light, one

In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like vet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field. That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet, 35 Each one already blazing by our meeds. Should notwithstanding join our lights together

And ov, shine the earth, as this the world. Whate'ei it bodes, henceforward will I bear Upon my target three fair shining suns. 40 Rich. Nay, bear three daughters-by your leave I speak it.

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger, blowing. But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mess. Ah, one that was a woeful looker-

When as the noble Duke of York was slain, Your princely father and my loving lord! Edw. O, speak no more! for I have heard too much. Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes, And stood against them as the hope of Troy Against the Greeks that would have ent'red Troy.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds: And many strokes, though with a little axe. Hews down and fells the hardest-timber'd oak.

By many hands your father was subdu'd: But only slaught'red by the ireful arm Of unrelenting Clifford and the Queen,

Who crown'd the gracious Duke in high despite,

Laugh'd in his face; and when with grief he wept.

The ruthless Queen gave him to dry his cheeks

A napkin steeped in the harmless blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain ;

And after many scorns, many foul taunts, They took his head, and on the gates of York

They set the same; and there it doth remain.

The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd. Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to lean upon.

Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay. O Clifford, boist'rous Clifford, thou hast slaın The flow'r of Europe for his chivalry;

And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd hım.

For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee.

Now my soul's palace is become a prison. Ah, would she break from hence, that this my body

Might in the ground be closed up in rest! For never henceforth shall I joy again; Never, O never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture

Scarce serves to quench my furnaceburning heart;

Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden.

For self-same wind that I should speak withal

Is kindling coals that fires all my breast, And burns me up with flames that tears would quench.

To weep is to make less the depth of grief. 85 Tears then for babes: blows and revenge for me!

Richard, I bear thy name; I'll venge thy death,

Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valuant duke hath I cannot judge; but, to conclude with left with thee;

His dukedom and his chair with me is left.

Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun; Or like an idle thresher with a flail, For chair and dukedom, throne and king- Fell gently down, as if they struck their dom, say:

his.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare? What news abroad?

deliverance

Stab poinards in our flesh till all were told, The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant lord, the Duke of York is slain!

Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that Plantagenet Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death. War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears : And now, to add more measure to your woes,

I come to tell you things sith then befall'n. After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought. Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp, Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run. Were brought me of your loss and his depart.

I, then in London, keeper of the King, Muster'd my soldiers, gathered flocks of friends. And very well appointed, as I thought,

March'd toward Saint Albans to intercept the Queen. Bearing the King in my behalf along: 115

For by my scouts I was advertised That she was coming with a full intent

To dash our late decree in parliament Touching King Henry's oath and your succession.

Short tale to make-we at St. Albans met. Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:

But whether 'twas the coldness of the King, Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen, That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen,

Or whether 'twas report of her success, 125 Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour.

Who thunders to his captives blood and death,

truth,

Their weapons like to lightning came and went:

friends.

Either that is thine, or else thou wert not I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause, With promise of high pay and great iewards. 131

But all in vain; they had no heart to fight.

And we in them no hope to win the day; So that we fled: the King unto the Queen; Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,

Our baleful news and at each word's In haste post-haste are come to join with you;

For in the marches here we heard you were Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day England?

War. Some six miles off the Duke is with the soldiers:

And for your brother, he was lately sent 145 From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy, With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Warwick fled.

Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit, But ne'er till now his scandal of retire. 150 War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear; For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head

And wring the awful sceptre from his fist, Were he as famous and as bold in war 155 As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well. Lord Warwick; blame me not.

'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak. But in this troublous time what's to be done?

Shall we go throw away our coats of steel And wrap our bodies in black mourninggowns,

Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads? Or shall we on the helmets of our foes Tell our devotion with revengeful arms? If for the last, say 'Ay', and to it, lords. 165

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;

And therefore comes my brother Montague. Attend me, lords. The proud insulting Queen,

With Clifford and the haught Northumber-

And of their feather many moe proud birds, Have wrought the easy-melting King like wax.

He swore consent to your succession, His oath enrolled in the parliament: And now to London all the crew are gone To frustrate both his oath and what beside May make against the house of Lancaster. Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong. Now if the help of Norfolk and myself, With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March. Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure. Will but amount to five and twenty thousand.

Why, Via! to London will we march amain, And once again bestride our foaming steeds, And once again cry 'Charge upon our foes!

But never once again turn back and fly. Warwick speak. 186

That cries 'Retire!' if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean:

And when thou fail'st-as God forbid the hour !-Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valuant Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forfend. War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York:

The next degree is England's royal throne. For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd

In every borough as we pass along: And he that throws not up his cap for joy Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head. King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague. Stav we no longer, dreaming of renown, But sound the trumpets and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,

As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds. I come to pierce it or to give thee mine. Edw. Then strike up drums. God and Saint George for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news? 205 Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me

The Queen is coming with a puissant host. And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why, then it sorts; brave warriors, let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Before York.

Flourish. lourish. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, the Prince of Wales, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, with drum and trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy That sought to be encompass'd with your crown.

Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck-

To see this sight, it irks my very soul. Withhold revenge, dear God; 'tis not my fault.

Nor wittingly have I infring'd my yow. Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity And harmful pity must be laid aside. To whom do lions cast their gentle looks? Not to the beast that would usurp their den.

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?

Not his that spoils her young before her You promis'd knighthood to our forward face.

Who scapes the lurking serpent's mortal Unsheathe your sword and dub him sting?

Not he that sets his foot upon her back. The smallest worm will turn, being trodden

And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown, Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows. He, but a Duke, would have his son a king, And raise his issue like a loving site: Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son.

Didst yield consent to disinherit him. Which argued thee a most unloving father Unreasonable creatures feed their young; And though man's face be fearful to their eyes, defence?

For shame, my liege, make them your precedent!

Were it not pity that this goodly boy Should lose his birthright by his father's fault.

And long hereafter say unto his child 'What my great-grandfather and grandsire got

My careless father fondly gave away '? Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the bov:

And let his manly face, which promiseth Successful fortune, steel thy melting hear-To hold thine own and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Inferring arguments of mighty force. But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear That things ill got had ever bad success? And happy always was it for that son Whose father for his hoarding went to hell? I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind-And would my father had left me no more! For all the rest is held at such a rate As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep Than in possession any jot of pleasure. Ah, cousin York! would thy best friends

I'll draw it as apparent to the crown.

And in that quarrel use it to the death Clif Why, that is spoken like a toward pillice.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness:

For with a band of thirty thousand men Comes Waiwick, backing of the Duke of York,

And in the towns, as they do march along, Proclaims him king, and many fly to him. Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Clif I would your Highness would depart the field:

Offering their own lives in their young's The Queen hath best success when you are absent.

> Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my tortune too; therefore I'll stay.

North. Be it with resolution, then, to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords.

And hearten those that fight in your defence.

Unsheathe your sword, good father; cry 'Saint George!

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE. RICHARD. WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace

And set thy diadem upon my head,

Or bide the mortal fortune of the field? Q. Mar. Go rate thy minions, proud insulting boy.

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms >5 Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king? Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his knee.

I was adopted heir by his consent:

Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,

You that are King, though he do wear the crown,

Have caus'd him by new act of parliament To blot out me and put his own son in. Clif. And reason too:

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher? O, I cannot speak!

Clif. Ay, crook-back, here I stand to There is no wrong, but every thing is right. answer thee.

Or any he, the proudest of thy sort. Rutland, was it not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry? Wilt thou yield the crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick! Dare you speak? When you and I met at Saint Albans last

Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine.

Clif. You said so much before, and vet you fled.

'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.

Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain The execution of my big-swol'n heart

Q. Mar. Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips.

K. Hen. I prithee give no limits to my tongue: I am a king, and privileg'd to speak.

Clif. My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here Cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be stıll. Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword. By Him that made us all, I am resolv'd

That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue. Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right,

And had he match'd according to his state.

He might have kept that glory to this day: But when he took a beggar to his bed And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day.

Even then that sunshine brew'd a show'r for him

That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France

And heap'd sedition on his crown at home. For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride?

Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept:

And we, in pity of the gentle King,

Had slipp'd our claim until another age. Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,

And that thy summer bred us no increase, We set the axe to thy usurping root; 165 And though the edge hath something hit ourselves, Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,

We'll never leave till we have hewn thee down,

Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.

Alarum; excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race.

I lay me down a little while to breathe: For strokes receiv'd and many blows repaid Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength.

And spite of spite needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven, or strike, ungentle death;

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! What hap? What hope of good?

Enter GEORGE.

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us. 10 What counsel give you? Whither shall we fly?

Edw. Bootless is flight: they follow us For yet is hope of life and victory. with wings; And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD. Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,

Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;

And in the very pangs of death he cried, Like to a dismal clangor heard from far, 'Warwick, revenge! Brother, revenge my death'. So, underneath the belly of their steeds. 20 That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood.

The noble gentleman gave up the ghost. War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood. I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly. Why stand we like soft-hearted women here, Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage,

And look upon, as if the tragedy Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors? Here on my knee I was to G d above I'll never pause aga never stand still, 30

Sound trumpets; let our bloody colours. Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine

Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine,

And in this vow do chain my soul to thine! And ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to Thee,

Thou setter-up and plucker-down of kings, Beseeching Thee, if with Thy will it stands That to my foes this body must be prey, Yet that Thy brazen gates of heaven may Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and, gentle Warwick,

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms. 45 I that did never weep now melt with woe That winter should cut off our spring-time

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops, And give them leave to fly that will not

And call them pillars that will stand to us; Geo. Our hap is lost, our hope but sad And if we thrive, promise them such rewards

> As victors wear at the Olympian games. This may plant courage in their quailing breasts.

> Forslow no longer; make we hence amain.

Scene IV. Another part of the field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, i have singled thee alone.

Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York, And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,

Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone.

This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York:

And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland:

And here's the heart that triumphs in their death

And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother

To execute the like upon thyself: And so, have at thee! They fight.

Enter WARWICK: Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;

For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. Exeunt.

Scene V. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter King Henry alone.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light,

What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,

Can neither call it perfect day nor night. Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea 5 Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind:

Now sways it that way, like the selfsame

Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind. Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind:

Now one the better, then another best; 10 Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast, Yet neither conqueror nor conquered.

So is the equal poise of this fell war. Here on this molehill will I sit me down. To whom God will, there be the victory! 15 For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too, Have chid me from the battle, swearing both

For what is in this world but grief and woe? O God! methinks it were a happy life To be no better than a homely swain;

To sit upon a hill, as I do now, To carve out dials quaintly, point by point, Thereby to see the minutes how they run-How many makes the hour full complete, How many hours brings about the day, How many days will finish up the year, How many years a mortal man may live. When this is known, then to divide the times-So many hours must I tend my flock:

So many hours must I take my rest; So many hours must I contemplate;

So many hours must I sport myself;

So many days my ewes have been with young;

So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean; So many years ere I shall shear the fleece: So minutes, hours, days, months, and years, Pass'd over to the end they were created, Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave. Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!

To shepherds looking on their silly sheep, Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy To kings that fear their subjects' treachery? O yes, it doth; a thousand-fold it doth.

And to conclude: the shepherd's homely curds.

His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle. His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade. All which secure and sweetly he enjoys, 50 Is far beyond a prince's delicates-His viands sparkling in a golden cup.

His body couched in a curious bed.

When care, mistrust, and treason waits on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that hath kill'd his Father, at one door: and a Father that hath kill'd his Son, at another door.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.

This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight

May be possessed with some store of crowns:

And I, that haply take them from him now. May yet ere night yield both my life and them

To some man else, as this dead man doth me.

Who's this? O God! It is my father's face. Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.

O heavy times, begetting such events! From London by the King was I press'd forth:

My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,

Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;

And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life, Have by my hands of life bereaved him. Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did. And pardon, father, for I knew not thee. 70 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;

And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!

Whiles lions war and battle for their dens, Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity 75 Weep, wretched man; I'll aid thee tear for

And let our hearts and eves, like civil war. Be blind with tears and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter Father, bearing of his Son.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hath resisted me,

Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold; 80 For I have bought it with an hundred blows.

But let me see. Is this our foeman's face? Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son! Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee, Throw up thine eye! See, see what show'rs arise.

Blown with the windy tempest of my heart Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit. Upon thy wounds, that kills mine eve and heart!

O, pity, God, this miserable age!

What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly, Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural, This deadly quarrel daily doth beget! O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,

And hath bereft thee of thy life too late! common grief!

O that my death would stay these ruthful deeds!

O pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity!

The red rose and the white are on his face, The fatal colours of our striving houses: The one his purple blood right well resembles:

The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth.

Wither one rose, and let the other flourish! If you contend, a thousand lives must perish.

Son. How will my mother for a father's death

Take on with me, and ne'er be satisfied! Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my son

Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied! K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances Misthink the King, and not be satisfied! Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death?

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre, For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go;

My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell; And so obsequious will thy father be,

Even for the loss of thee, having no more, As Priam was for all his valiant sons. I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will.

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care,

Here sits a king more woeful than you are.

Alarums; excursions. Enter QUEEN MAR-GARET, PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER.

Prince. Fly, father, fly; for all your friends are fled. And Warwick rages like a chafed bull.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord: towards Berwick post amain.

Edward and Richard, like a brace of grey-

Having the fearful flying hare in sight, 130 With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath. And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands.

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

> Exe. Away! for vengeance comes along with them. Nay, stay not to expostulate; make speed;

> Or else come after. I'll away before. K. Hen. Nav. take me with thee, good sweet Exeter.

> Not that I fear to stay, but love to go Whither the Queen intends. Forward: away! [Exeunt.

Scene VI. Another part of the field.

A loud alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded. Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies. Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.

O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow

More than my body's parting with my soul! My love and fear glu'd many friends to thee; And, now I fall, thy tough commixture melts.

Impairing Henry, strength'ning misproud Ÿork.

The common people swarm like summer flies:

And whither fly the gnats but to the sun? And who shines now but Henry's enemies? O Phœbus, hadst thou never given consent That Phaethon should check thy fiery steeds, Thy burning car never had scorch'd the earth!

And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do.

Or as thy father and his father did, Giving no ground unto the house of York, They never then had sprung like summer flies:

I and ten thousand in this luckless realm Had left no mourning widows for our death; And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.

For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air? And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds.

No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight.

The foe-is merciless and will not pity; 25 For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity. The air hath got into my deadly wounds, faint.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords. Good fortune bids us pause

And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks.

Some troops pursue the bloody-minded Oueen

And now the battle's ended. If friend or foe, let him be gently used. 45 Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;

In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth.

But set his murd'ring knife unto the root From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring-

I mean our princely father, Duke of York. War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head.

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there:

Instead whereof let this supply the room. Measure for measure must be answered. 59 Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house.

Tis but his policy to counterfeit, 65 Because he would avoid such bitter taunts Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, ven him with eager words.

Rich. Chifford, ask mercy and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults. Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy

Edw. Thou pitied'st Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence

you now? 75
War. They mock thee, Clifford; swear as thou wast wont. Rich. What, not an oath? Nay, then the world goes hard When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath. I know by that he's dead; and by my soul.

If this right hand would buy two hours' life, That I in all despite might rail at him.

This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood Stifle the villain whose unstanched thirst York and young Rutland could not satisfy. War. Ay, but he's dead. Off with the traitor's head.

And rear it in the place your father's stands. And now to London with triumphant march.

There to be crowned England's royal King: From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France.

And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen. 90 So shalt thou sinew both these lands together:

And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatt'red foe that hopes to rise again: For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,

That nothing sung but death to us and Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears.

ACT THREE

Scene I. A chase in the north of England Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in then hands.

1 Keeb. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves,

For through this laund anon the deer will come:

And in this covert will we make our stand. Culling the principal of all the deer.

2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost. Here stand we both, and aim we at the best: And, for the time shall not seem tedious, I'll tell thee what befell me on a day

In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

2 Keep. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love, To greet mine own land with my wishful sight. No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine; 15 Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee, Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed.

No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now, No humble suitors press to speak for right, No. not a man comes for redress of thee; 20 For how can I help them and not myself?

1 Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee.

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,

For wise men say it is the wisest course. 25 2 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands Your crown content and you must be conupon him.

I Keep Forbear awnile; we'll hear a little more.

K. He., My Queen and son are gone to France for aid;

And, as I near, the great commanding Warnick

Is thither gone to crave the French King's SISTER

To wife for Edward. If this news he true, Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost: For Warwick is a subtle orator, And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words. By this account, then, Margaret may win

For she's a woman to be pitied much. Her sighs will make a batt'ry in his breast: Her tears will pierce into a marble heart:

The tiger will be mild whiles she doth mourn; And Nero will be tainted with remorse 10

O Marg tret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul.

Ait then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn! 2 Kecp. Say, what art thou that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:

A man at least, for less I should not be; And men may talk of kings, and why not I? 2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king. K. Hen. Why, so I am-in mind; and that's enough.

2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,

Nor to be seen. My crown is call'd content: A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy. 65 2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content.

To go along with us; for, as we think, You are the king King Edward hath depos'd:

And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath? 2 Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?

2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old:

v father and my grandfather were kings And you were sworn true subjects unto me And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

1 Keep. No;

For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? Do I not breathe a man?

Look, as I blow this feather from my face, And as the air blows it to me again, Obeying with my wind when I do blow, And yielding to another when it blows, Commanded always by the greater gust, Such is the lightness of you common men. But do not break your oaths; for of that

My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty. Go where you will, the King shall be commanded;

And be you kings: command, and I'll obey. 1 Keep. We are true subjects to the King, King Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,

If he were seated as King Edward is. 1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name and the King's,

To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your King's name be obey'd;

And what God will, that let your King perform;

And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. London. The balace.

Enter King Edward, Gloucester, Clar-ENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Albans' field

This lady's husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slain.

His land then seiz'd on by the conqueror. Her suit is now to repossess those lands; Which we in justice cannot well deny. 68o

Because in quarrel of the house of York The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glo. Your Highness shall do well to grant her suit;

It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less: but yet I'll make a pause.

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] Yea, is it so? I see the lady hath a thing to grant,

Before the King will grant her humble suit. Clar. [Aside to Gloucester] He knows the game; how true he keeps the wind!

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] Silence! K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your

And come some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious loid, I cannot brook delay.

May it please your Highness to resolve me

And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me. Glo. [Aside] Av. widow? Then I'll warrant you all your lands.

Ah, simple men, you know not what you An if what pleases him shall pleasure vou.

> Fight closer or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar. [Aside to Gloucester] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall.

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] God forbid that. for he'll take vantages.

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow, tell me.

Clar. [Aside to Gloucester] I think he means to beg a child of her.

Glo. [Aside to Clarence] Nay, then whip me; he'll rather give her two.

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord. Glo. [Aside] You shall have four if you'll be rul'd by him.

K. Edw. 'Twere pity they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it, then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave; I'll try this widow's wit.

Glo. [Aside] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave

Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch.

[Gloucester and Clarence withdraw. K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?

L. Grey. To do them good I would sustain some harm.

K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your Majesty.

- K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.
- L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your But, mighty lord, this merry inclination Highness' service.
- if I give them?
- L. Grey. What you command that rests in me to do.
- K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.
- L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.
- K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.
- L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your Grace commands.
- wears the marble.
- Clar. As red as fire! Nay, then her wax must melt.
- L. Grey. Why stops my lord? Shall I not hear my task?
- K. Edw. An easy task: 'tis but to love a king.
- L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject fit to jest withal. I am a subject.
- K. Edw. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee. L. Grev. I take my leave with many - thousand thanks.
- Glo. The match is made: she seals it with a curtsy.
- love I mean. L. Grev. The truits of love I mean, my
- loving hege.
- K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense. What love, thinkst thou, I sue so much to - get? L. Grey. My love till death, my humble Thou art a widow, and thou hast some

- such love.
- thought you did.
- K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.
- L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
- Your Highness aims at, if I aim aright.
- K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to he with thee.
- L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.
- K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
- L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower; For by that loss I will not purchase them.
- K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.

- L. Grey. Herein your Highness wrongs both them and me.
- Accords not with the sadness of my suit. K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me Please you dismiss me, either with ay or no.
 - K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay to my request;
 - No, if thou dost say no to my demand. 80 L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at
 - an end. Glo. The widow likes him not: she knits her brows.
 - Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.
 - K. Edw. [Aside] Her looks doth argue her replete with modesty;
- Glo. He plies her hard; and much rain Her words doth show her wit incomparable; All her perfections challenge sovereignty. One way or other, she is for a king;
 - And she shall be my love, or else my queen. Say that King Edward take thee for his queen?
 - L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord.

 - But far unfit to be a sovereign.
 - K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee
 - I speak no more than what my soul intends; And that is to enjoy thee for my love. 95
- L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto. K. Edw. But stay thee—'tis the fruits of I know I am too mean to be your gueen.
 - And yet too good to be your concubine.
 - K. Edw. You cavil. widow: I did mean

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers; I can tell you both

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious loid. Henry your foe is

And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower.

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him

To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along. Lords, use her honourably.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.

Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,

That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring

To cross me from the golden time I look for! And yet, between my soul's desire and me-The lustful Edward's title buried-

Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,

And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies,

To take their rooms ere I can place myseli. A cold premeditation for my purpose! Why, then I do but dream on sovereignty; Like one that stands upon a promontory 135 And spies a far-off shore where he would

Wishing his foot were equal with his eye; And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,

Saying he'll lade it dry to have his way-So do I wish the crown, being so far off; 11 And so I chide the means that keeps me from it:

And so I say I'll cut the causes off, Flattering me with impossibilities.

My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweens too much.

Unless my hand and strength could equal them.

Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard:

What other pleasure can the world afford? I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,

And deck my body in gay ornaments, And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.

O miserable thought! and more unlikely Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns. Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb:

And, for I should not deal in her soft laws, She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe 682

Glo. By so much is the wonder in To shrink mine aim up like a wither'd shrub:

To make an envious mountain on my back. Where sits deturnity to mock my body: To shape my legs of an unequal size; To disproportion me in every part, Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp That carries no ampression like the dani. And ain I, then, a man to be belov'd?

O monstrous fault to harbour such a though! 1

Then, since this earth affords no joy to me But to command, to check, to o'eibear such As are of better person than myself, I'll make my heaven to dream upon the

And cry 'Content!' to that which grieves my heart.

And wet my cheeks with artificial tears. And frame my face to all occasions. 185 I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall:

I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk; I'll play the orator as well as Nestor. Deceive more slily than t lysses could. And, like a Sinon, take another Troy. I can add colours to the chameleon, Change shapes with Protheus for advantages.

And set the murderous Machiavel to school. Can I do this, and cannot get a crown? Tut, were it farther off, I'll pluck it down. [Exit.

Scene III. France. The King's palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, his sister Bona, his Admiral call'd BOURBON; BOURBON; PRINCE EDWARD, QUEEN MARGARET, and the EARL OF OXFORD. Lewis sits, and riseth up again.

Lewis. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,

Sit down with us. It ill befits thy state And birth that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.

O. Mar. No, mighty King of Flance. Now Margaret

Must strike her sail and learn a while to serve

Where kings command. I was. I must confess.

Great Albion's Queen in former golden days:

But now mischance hath trod my title down

And with dishonour laid me on the ground, Where I must take like seat unto my fortune.

And to my humble seat conform myself. Lewis. Why, say, fair Queen, whence springs this deep despair? Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eves with tears And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

Lewis. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself.

And sit thee by our side. [Seats her by him] Yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind

Still ride in triumph over all mischance. Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;

It shall be eas'd, if France can yield tehef. 20 Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.

Now therefore be it known to noble Lewis That Henry, sole possessor of my love, Is, of a king, become a banish'd man, And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn; While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York

Usurps the regal title and the seat Of England's true-anointed lawful King. This is the cause that I, poor Margaret, 30 With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir.

Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid; And if thou fail us, all our hope is done. Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help:

Our people and our peers are both misled, 35 Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight, And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

Lewis. Renowned Queen, with patience calm the storm.

While we bethink a means to break it off. O. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.

Lewis. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.

Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.

And see where comes the breeder of my And thou no more art prince than she is sorrow !

Enter WARWICK.

Lewis. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence ?

Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

Lewis. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[He descends. She ariseth. Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise :

For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,

My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend.

I come, in kindness and unfeigned love. First to do greetings to thy royal person, And then to crave a league of amity.

And lastly to confirm that amity With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister,

To England's King in lawful marriage. Q. Mar. [Aside] If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. [To Bona] And, gracious madani, in our king's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favour,

Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue

To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart; Where fame, late ent'ing at his heedful

Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me speak

Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love,

But from deceit bred by necessity; For how can tyrants safely govern home Unless abroad they purchase great alliance? To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,

That Henry liveth still; but were he dead,

Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's son.

Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour; For though usurpers sway the rule a while Yet heav'ns are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince. And why not Queen? War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;

did subdue the greatest part of Spain:

And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,

Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest; And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth.

Who by his prowess conquered all France. From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath

All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten? Methinks these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest: you tell a pedigree Of threescore and two years—a silly time To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxf. Why. Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege.

Whom thou obeyed'st thirty and six years, And not bewray thy treason with a blush? War. Can Oxford that did ever fence the

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree? For shame! Leave Henry, and call Edward That Bona shall be wife to the English king. Oxf. Call him my king by whose injurious doom

My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death; and more than so, my father.

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years, When nature brought him to the door of death? No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm.

This arm upholds the house of Lancaster. War. And I the house of York.

Lewis. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford.

Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside 110 While I use further conference with War-

[They stand aloof. Q. Mar. Heavens grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

Lewis. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience.

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.

Lewis. But is he gracious in the people's

The more that Henry was unfortunate.

Lewis. Then further: all dissembling set aside.

Tell me for truth the measure of his love 120 684

Such it seems War. As may be eem a monarch like himself. Myself have often heard him say and swear That this his love was an eternal plant

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,

The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun,

Exempt from envy, but not from disdain. Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain.

Lewis. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant or your denial shall be

[To Warwick] Yet I confess that often ere this day,

When I have heard your king's desert recounted,

Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire. Lewis. Then, Warwick, thus: our sister shall be Edward's.

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn Touching the jointure that your king must make,

Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd.

Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness

king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king. Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick, it was thy

By this alliance to make void my suit.

Before thy coming, Lewis was Henry's friend.

Lewis. And still is friend to him and Margaret.

But if your title to the crown be weak. 145 As may appear by Edward's good success. Then 'tis but reason that I be releas'd From giving aid which late I promised.

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand

That your estate requires and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his

Where having nothing, nothing can he lose. And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,

You have a father able to maintain you, And better 'twere you troubled him than France. 155

Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick,

Proud setter up and puller down of kings! I will not hence till with my talk and tears, Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold

Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love:

For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[Post blowing a horn within. Lewis. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee.

Enter the Post.

Post. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,

Sent from your brother, Marquis Montague. These from our King unto your Majesty. 165 And, madam, these for you; from whom I know not. [They all read their letters.

Oxf. I like it well that our fair Queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nav. mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled.

I hope all's for the best. Lewis. Warwick, what are thy news?

And yours, fair Queen? Q. Mar. Mine such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys. War. Mine full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

Lewis. What, has your king married the Lady Grey?

And now, to soothe your forgery and his, Sends me a paper to persuade me patience? Is this th' alliance that he seeks with France?

Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your Majesty as much before.

This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest in sight of heaven.

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss, That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's-

No more my king, for he dishonours me, But most himself, if he could see his shame.

Did I forget that by the house of York My father came untimely to his death? Did I let pass th' abuse done to my niece? Did I impale him with the regal crown? Did I put Henry from his native right? 190 And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame? Shame on himself! for my desert is honour; And to repair my honour lost for him I here renounce him and return to Henry. My noble Queen, let former grudges pass, And henceforth I am thy true servitor. 196 I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona, And replant Henry in his former state. Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have That if our Queen and this young Prince turn'd my hate to love; And I forgive and quite forget old faults, 200 And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, av. his unfeigned friend.

That if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us With some few bands of chosen soldiers. I'll undertake to land them on our coast 205 And force the tyrant from his seat by war. 'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him:

And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me, He's very likely now to fall from him For matching more for wanton lust than honour

Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd

But by thy help to this distressed queen? Q. Mar. Renowned Prince, how shall poor Henry live Unless thou rescue him from foul despair? Bona. My quairel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with yours.

Lewis. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd You shall have aid.

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

Lewis. Then, England's messenger, return in post

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king, That Lewis of France is sending over masquers

To revel it with him and his new bride. 225 Thou seest what's past; go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow-garland for his sake. Q. Mar. Tell him my mourning weeds are laid aside, And I am ready to put armour on. War. Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong, And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.

There's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Post. But, Warwick, Lewis. Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men. Shall cross the seas and bid false Edward battle:

And, as occasion serves, this noble Queen And Prince shall follow with a fresh supply. Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt: What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty:

Q. Mai. Yes, I agree, and thank you for Which are so weak of courage and in your motion.

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous, Therefore delay not-give thy hand to Warwick;

And with thy hand thy faith irrevocable That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it:

And here to pledge my vow, I give my hand. 250

[He gives his hand to Warwick. Lewis. Why stay we now? soldiers shall be levied :

Admiral.

Shall waft them over with our royal fleet. I long till Edward fall by war's mischance For mocking marriage with a dame of France. [Exeunt all but Warwick.

War. I came from Edward as ambassador,

But I return his sworn and mortal foe. Matter of marriage was the charge he gave

But dreadful war shall answer his demand. Had he none else to make a stale but me? Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow. I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown, And I'll be chief to bring him down again; Not that I pity Henry's misery,

But seek revenge on Edward's mockery, 265

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey? Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas, you know 'tis far from hence to France!

How could he stay till Warwick made return?

Mess. At my depart, these were his very words:

'Go tell false Edward, the supposed king, Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's That Lewis of France is sending over masquers

And leave your brothers to go speed else- To revel it with him and his new bride'. 95 K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? Belike he thinks me Henry.

But what said Lady Bona to my marriage? Mess. These were her words, utt'red with mild disdain:

'Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

For I have heard that she was there in place. Mess, 'Tell him' quoth she 'my mourning weeds are done.

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.

And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now. brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I sure of victory.

K. Edw. The Duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted,

Thou call'dst me King?

Ay, but the case is alter'd. When you disgrac'd me in my embassade, Then I degraded you from being King, And come now to create you Duke of York. Alas, how should you govern any kingdom That know not how to use ambassadors, 30 Nor how to be contented with one wife, Nor how to use your brothers brotherly, Nor how to study for the people's welfare, Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

SCENE IV. London. The balace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Rw. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn

What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward? Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick? Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person. Riv. Then is my sovereign slam?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner ;

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares; And, as I further have to understand, Is new committed to the Bishop of York, Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of guef;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may: Warwick may lose that now hath won the đay.

O. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair For love of Edward's offspring in my womb. This is it that makes me bridle passion And bear with mildness my mistortune's cross:

Av. av. for this I draw in many a tear And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs, Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown King Edward's fruit, true heir to th' English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London

To set the crown once more on Henry's head.

Guess thou the rest: King Edward's friends must down.

But to prevent the tyrant's violence-For trust not him that hath once broken

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary To save at least the heir of Edward's right. There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.

Come, therefore, let us fly while we may fly: Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us If Warwick take us, we are sure to die. 35 [Exeunt.

Scene V. A bark near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, LORD HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and Others.

Glo. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither Into this chiefest thicket of the park. Thus stands the case: you know our King, my brother,

Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands

He hath good usage and great liberty; And often but attended with weak guard Comes hunting this way to disport himself. I have advertis'd him by secret means That if about this hour he make this way, Under the colour of his usual game. and men.

To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King EDWARD and a Huntsman with Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man. See where the huntsmen stand.

Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Stand you thus close to steal the Bishop's deer?

Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste; Your horse stands ready at the park corner. K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hast To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness. Glo. But wherefore stay we? Tis no time to talk. K. Edw. Huntsmen, what say'st thou? Wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.

Glo. Come then, away; let's ha' no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell. Shield thee from Waiwick's frown.

And pray that I may repossess the crown. [Exeunt.

Scene VI. London. The Tower.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clarence, WARWICK, SOMERSET, 'young HENRY EARL OF RICHMOND, OXFORD, MON-TAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master Lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat And turn'd my captive state to liberty, My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys, At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieut. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sov'reigns;

But if an humble prayer may prevail, I then crave pardon of your Majesty.

K. Hen. For what, Lieutenant? well using me?

Nay, be thou sure I'll well requite thy kindness,

For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure:

Av. such a pleasure as incaged birds Conceive when, after many moody thoughts. At last by notes of household harmony They quite forget their loss of liberty. He shall here find his friends, with horse But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,

And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee: He was the author, thou the instrument. Therefore, that I may conquer tortune's spite

For choosing me when Clarence is in place. Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway.

To whom the heav'ns in thy nativity Adjudg'd an olive branch and laurel crown. As likely to be blest in peace and war; 35 And therefore I yield thee my tree consent. War. And I choose Clarence only for Protector.

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands.

Now join your hands, and with your hands vour hearts.

That no dissension hinder government. 40 I make you both Protectors of this land. While I myself will lead a private life And in devotion spend my latter days, To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent,

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why, then, though loath, yet must

I be content.

We'll voke together, like a double shadow To Henry's body, and supply his place; 50 I mean, in bearing weight of government, While he enjoys the honour and his ease. And, Clarence, now then it is more than And we shall have more wars before't be needful Clar. What else? And that succession be determin'd.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs.

Let me entreat-for I command no more-That Margaret your Queen and my son Edward

Be sent for to return from France with speed:

For till I see them here, by doubtful fear My joy of liberty is haif eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that,

Of whom you seem to have so tender care? Som. My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope. Lays his hand on his head. If secret powers

Enter a Post.

War. What news, my friend?

Post. That Edward is escaped from your brother

And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy. War. Unsavoury news! But how made he escape?

Post. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him In secret ambush on the forest side And from the Bishop's huntsmen rescu'd him; For hunting was his daily exercise. War. My brother was too careless of his charge.

A salve for any sore that may betide.

Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst

Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany. Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown.

'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall down.

Som. It shall be so: he shall to Brittany. Come therefore, let's about it speedily. [Exeunt.

Scene VII. Before York.

Flour ish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOU-CESTER, HASTINGS, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest.

Yet thus far fortune maketh us amends. And says that once more I shall interchange My waned state for Henry's regal crown. Well have we pass'd and now repass'd the seas, And brought desired help from Burgundy: What then remains, we being thus arriv'd From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,

But that we enter, as into our dukedom? Glo. The gates made fast! Brother, I like not this:

For many men that stumble at the threshold

Are well foretold that danger lurks within. K. Edw. Tush, man, abodements must not now affright us.

By fair or foul means we must enter in, For hither will our friends repair to us. 15 Hast. My hege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the walls, the Mayor of York and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves, For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, Master Mayor, if Henry be your King, But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide Yet Edward at the least is Duke of York.

May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom.

As being well content with that alone.

Glo. [Aside] But when the fox hath once got in his nose,

He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Glo. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,

Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd. K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! But why come you in arms?

Mont. To help King Edward in his time of storm.

As every loyal subject ought to do.

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget

Our title to the crown, and only claim Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again.

I came to serve a king and not a duke. 40 Drummer, strike up, and let us march away. [The Drum begins to march.

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Coventry.

Enter WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and Others upon the walls.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hithérward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?

Where is the post that came from Montague?

2 Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.

quickly know.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, March. GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

Glo. See how the surly Warwick mans the wall.

War. O unbid spite! Is sportful Edward come?

Where slept our scouts or how are they seduc'd

That we could hear no news of his repair? K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,

Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee,

Call Edward King, and at his hands beg mercy?

And he shall pardon thee these outrages. War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence.

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down.

Call Warwick patron, and be penitent? And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said the King;

Or did he make the jest against his will? 30 War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

and tide thy friend, This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair, Shall, whiles thy head is warm and new cut off.

Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood:

' Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more'.

Enter Oxford, with drum and colours.

War. O cheerful colours! See where Oxford comes.

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster! 59 [He and his forces enter the city.

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too. K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs.

Stand we in good array, for they no doubt Will issue out again and bid us battle: If not, the city being but of small defence, We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

K. Edw. So, lie thou there. Die thou, and die our fear ;

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all. Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee, That Warwick's bones may keep thine company. [Exit.

War. Ah, who is nigh? Come to me, friend or foe.

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?

Why ask I that? My mangled body shows, My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows.

That I must yield my body to the earth And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe. 10 Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle.

Under whose shade the ramping lion slept. Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree

And kept low shrubs from winter's pow'rful wind.

And more he would have said; and more he spoke,

Which sounded like a clamour in a vault, That mought not be distinguish'd; but at last.

I well might hear, delivered with a groan, O farewell, Warwick!

War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves;

For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet Dies. in heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queen's great power! Here they bear away his body.

Scene III. Another part of the field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD in triumph; with GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory. But in the midst of this bright-shining day I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud That will encounter with our glorious sun 5 Ere he attain his easeful western bed—

I mean, my lords, those powers that the Queen Hath rais'd in Gallia have arriv'd our coast

And, as we hear, march on to fight with us. Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud

And blow it to the source from whence it came;

Thy very beams will dry those vapours up, For every cloud engenders not a storm. Glo. The Queen is valued thirty thousand strong.

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her. 15 If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends

That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury;

Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this!

Say Warwick was our anchor; what of that?

And Montague our top-mast; what of him ?

Our slaught'red friends the tackles; what of these?

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor? And Somerset another goodly mast?

The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?

And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge? We will not from the helm to sit and weep. But keep our course, though the rough wind say no.

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.

Glo. It is; and lo where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What, can so young a man begin to prick? Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to? Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York.

Glo. Why should she live to fill the world with words?

K. Edw. What, doth she swoon? Use means for her recovery.

Scene VI. London. The Tower.

Enter King Henry and Gloucester with the Lieutenant, on the walls.

Glo. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord-my lord, I should say rather.

'Tis sin to flatter; 'good' was little better. 'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil' were alike, from the wolf:

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece.

And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.

What scene of death hath Roscius now to

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind:

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird that hath been hmed in a bush

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush:

And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird, 15 Have now the fatal object in my eye Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete

That taught his son the office of a fowl! And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.

K. Hen. I, Dædalus; my poor boy, Icarus:

Thy father, Minos, that denied our course; The sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet

Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner? K. Hen. A persecutor I am sure thou art. If murdering innocents be executing, Why, then thou art an executioner. Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption. K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when first thou didst presume, 35

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine. And thus I prophesy, that many a thousand Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear, And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's,

And many an orphan's water-standing eye-

Men for their sons, wives for their husbands,

Orphans for their parents' timeless death— Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born. The owl shriek'd at thy birth—an evil sign; The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time:

Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees:

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves; we And chatt'ring pies in dismal discords sing: Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain. K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope,

To wit, an indigest deformed lump,

Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree. Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast born.

To signify thou cam'st to bite the world: And if the rest be true which I have heard. Thou cam'st-

Glo. I'll hear no more. Die, prophet, in thy speech. [Stabs him. For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O, God forgive my sins and pardon thee! 60

Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster

Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See how my sword weeps for the poor King's death.

O, may such purple tears be alway shed From those that wish the downfall of our house!

If any spark of life be yet remaining, Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee Stabs him again.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear. Indeed, 'tis true that Henry told me of; For I have often heard my mother say 70 I came into the world with my legs forward. Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right? The midwife wonder'd; and the women

'O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!' And so I was, which plainly signified That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it. I have no brother, I am like no brother; 80 And this word 'love', which greybeards call divine,

Be resident in men like one another, And not in me! I am myself alone.

Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light,

But I will sort a pitchy day for thee; For I will buzz abroad such prophecies That Edward shall be fearful of his life; And then to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.

King Henry and the Prince his son are gone. Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest;

Counting myself but bad till I be best. I'll throw thy body in another room, And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom. [Exit with the body.

London. The balace. SCENE VII.

Enter King Edward, Queen Flourish. GLOUCESTER ELIZABETH. CLARENCE, HASTINGS, Nurse with the young PRINCE and Attendants.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's roval throne,

With them the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,

That in their chains fetter'd the kingly Having my country's peace and brothers'

Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night,

Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat, That thou might'st repossess the crown in peace;

And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain. Glo. [Aside] I'll blast his harvest if your head were laid;

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.

This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave:

And heave it shall some weight or break my back. Work thou the way-and that shall

K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights, with Margaret? Reignier, her father, to the King of France Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem, And hither have they sent it for her ransom. K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.

And now what rests but that we spend the time

With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,

Such as befits the pleasure of the court? Sound drums and trumpets. Farewell, sour annoy!

21 For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy. Exeunt.

ACT ONE

called also

LORD STANLEY.

DERBY.

LORD LOVEL.

Scene I. London. A street.

Enter RICHARD, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, solus.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent Made glorious summer by this sun of York; And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house

In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.

Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;

5

Our bruised arms hung up for monuments; Our stern alarums chang'd to merry meetings,

Our dreadful marches to delightful measures. Unless to spy my shadow in the sun

Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his And descant on mine own deformity.
Wrinkled front, And therefore, since I cannot prove a

And now, instead of mounting barbed steeds 10

To fright the souls of fearful adversaries, He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.

But I—that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,

Nor made to court an amorous lookingglass— 15 I—that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's

To strut before a wanton ambling nymph—
I—that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world scarce half made up,
21

And that so lamely and unfashionable That dogs bark at me as I halt by them— Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace, Have no delight to pass away the time, 25 Unless to spy my shadow in the sun

And descant on mine own detormity.

And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determined to prove a villain 30
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,

70I

To set my brother Clarence and the King In deadly hate the one against the other; And if King Edward be as true and just 36 As I am subtle, false, and treacherous, This day should Clarence closely be mew'd

About a prophecy which says that G Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. 40 Dive, thoughts, down to my soul. Here Clarence comes.

> Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.

Brother, good day. What means this armed guard

That waits upon your Grace?

His Majesty, Clar. Tend'ring my person's safety, hath appointed This conduct to convey me to th' Tower. 45

Glo. Upon what cause? Because my name is George. Clar. Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of vours:

He should, for that, commit your godfathers.

O, belike his Majesty hath some intent That you should be new-christ'ned in the And that the Queen's kindred are made Tower.

But what's the matter, Clarence? May I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I

As yet I do not; but, as I can learn, He hearkens after prophecies and dreams And from the cross-row plucks the letter

And says a wizard told him that by G His issue disinherited should be; And, for my name of George begins with G It follows in his thought that I am he. These, as I learn, and such like toys as these Hath mov'd his Highness to commit m now.

Glo. Why, this it is when men are rul'd by women:

'Tis not the King that sends you to the Tower;

My Lady Grey his wife, Clarence, 'tis she That tempers him to this extremity. Was it not she and that good man o worship,

Antony Woodville, her brother there, That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower,

From whence this present day he delivered?

We are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe Clar. By heaven, I think there is no ma is secure

But the Queen's kindred, and night-walkin heralds

By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams, That trudge betwixt the King and Mistress Shore.

Heard you not what an humble suppliant Lord Hastings was, for her delivery? Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity ot my Lord Chamberlain his liberty. 'll tell you what-I think it is our way. f we will keep in favour with the King, To be her men and wear her livery: The jealous o'er-worn widow and herself.

Since that our brother dubb'd them gentlewomen. Are mighty gossips in our monarchy. Brak. I beseech your Graces both to pardon me: His Majesty hath straitly given in charge 85 That no man shall have private conference. Of what degree soever, with your brother, Glo. Even so; an't please your worship. Brakenbury,

You may partake of any thing we say: We speak no treason, man; we say the gentlefolks.

How say you, sir? Can you deny all this? Brak. With this, my lord, myself have nought to do.

Glo. Nought to do with Mistress Shore! I tell thec, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one. Were best to do it secretly alone. Brak. What one, my lord?

Glo. Her husband, knave! Wouldst thou betray me? Brak. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, and withal Forbear your conference with the noble Duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury. and will obey.

Glo. We are the Queen's abjects and must obev.

Brother, farewell; I will unto the King; And whatsoe'er you will employ me in-Were it to call King Edward's widow sister-

I will perform it to enfranchise you. Meantime, this deep disgrace in brother-

Touches me deeper than you can imagine. Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well. Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be

I will deliver you, or else lie for you. Meantime, have patience.

I must perforce. Farewell. Clar. [Exeunt Clarence, Brakenbury, and Guard.

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Glo. Go tread the path that thou shalt Ciarence still breathes; Edward still lives ne'er return.

Simple, plain Claience, I do love thee so That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven, If heaven will take the present at our hands. But who comes here? The new-delivered Hastings?

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord!

Glo. As much unto my good Lord
Chamberlain!
Well are you welcome to the open air.

How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must;

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks

That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall

Clarence too;

For they that were your enemies are his, 130 And have prevail'd as much on him as you Hast. More pity that the eagles should be mew'd Whiles kites and buzzards prey at liberty Glo. What news abroad?

home · 135

The King is sickly, weak, and melancholy, And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by Saint John, that news is bad indeed.

O, he hath kept an evil diet long And overmuch consum'd his royal person! 'Tis very greyous to be thought upon. 141 Where is he? In his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.
[Exit Hastings.

He cannot live, I hope, and must not die 145 Till George be pack'd with posthorse up to heaven.

I'll in to urge his hatred more to Clarence W:th hes well steel'd with weighty arguments;

And, if I tail not in my deep intent,

Clarence hath not another day to live; 150 Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,

And leave the world for me to bustle in!
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter.

What though I kill'd her husband and her father?

The readiest way to make the wench amends

Is to become her husband and her father; The which will I—not all so much for love As for another secret close intent

By marrying her which I must reach unto. But yet I run before my horse to market.

Ciarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns; 161 When they are gone, then must I count my gains. 152 if

Scene II. London. Another street.

Enter the corpse of King Henry the Sixth, with Halberds to guard it; LADY ANNE being the mourner, attended by TRESSEL and BERNELEY.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load—

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse;
Whilst I awhile obsequiously lament
Th' untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!

Be it lawful that I invocate thy ghost Io hear the lamentations of poor Anne, Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughtered son, ro

Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds.

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life I pour the helpless but a firm poor eyes. Curs'd be the hand that made these fatal holes!

Cursed the heart that had the heart to do it!

Cursed the blood that let this blood from hence!

More direful hap betide that hated wretch That makes us wretched by the death of Tlan I can wish to adders, spiders, toads, Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives! If ever he have child, abortive be it, 2r Prodigious, and untimely blought to light, Whose ugly and unmatural aspect May fright the hopeful mother at the view,

And that be heir to his unhappiness! 2
If ever he have wife, let her be made
M we miserab'e by the death of him than I am made by my young lord and thee!

Come, now towards Chertsey with your holy load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there; 30 And still as you are weary of this weight Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's corse.

The bearers take up the coffin.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend

To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glo. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

I'll make a corse of him that disobeys!

1 Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! Stand thou, when I command.

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, 40

Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot

And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the coffin.

Anne. What, do you tremble? Are you all afraid?

Alas, I blame you not, for you are mortal, And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil. 45 Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell! Thou hadst but power over his mortal body.

His soul thou canst not have; therefore, be

Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so cuist.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence and trouble us not;

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,

Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep ex-

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds, Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.

O, gentlemen, see, see! Dead Henry's wounds

Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh.

Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity, For 'tis thy piesence that exhales this blood From cold and empty veins where no blood dwells;

Thy deeds inhuman and unnatural 60 Provokes this deluge most unnatural. O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death!

O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge

his death!
Either, heav'n, with lightning strike the murd'rer dead;

Or, earth, gape open wide and eat him

quick, 65
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,

Which his hell-govern'd aim hath butchered.

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity, Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou knowest nor law of God nor man:

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!

Glo. More wonderful when angels are so angry.

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman, 75 Of these supposed crimes to give me leave By circumstance but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, deffus'd infection of a man.

For these known evils but to give me leave By circumstance to curse thy cursed self. Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have

Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make

No excuse current but to hang thyself.

Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself.

Anne. And by despairing shalt thou stand excused

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glo. Sav that I slew them not?

Anne. Then sav they were not slain. But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive. Glo. Nay, he is dead, and slain by Edward's hands.

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest:

Queen Margaret saw

Thy murd'rous falchion smoking in his blood:

The which thou once didst bend against her breast, 95

But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glo. I was provoked by her sland'rous tongue

That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,

That never dream'st on aught but butchenes.

Didst thou not kill this king?
Glo. I grant ye.
Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog? Then,

God grant me too

Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!

O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous!

Glo. The better for the King of Heaven, that hath him. 105

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glo. Let him thank me that holp to send him thither,

For he was fitter for that place than earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hel.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.

Anne. Some dungeon.

Your bed-chamber. Glo. Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!

Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you Anne. I hope so.

I know so. But, gentle Lady Anne To leave this keen encounter of our wits, 115 And fall something into a slower method— Is not the causer of the timeless deaths Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward As blameful as the executioner?

Anne. Thou wast the cause and most No, when my father York and Edward accurs'd effect.

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect-

Your beauty that did haunt me in my sleep To undertake the death of all the world So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,

These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.

Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck;

You should not blemish it if I stood by. As all the world is cheered by the sun, So I by that; it is my day, my life. Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!

Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.

Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on

Glo. It is a guarrel most unnatural, To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee. 135

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable, To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband

Did it to help thee to a better husband. Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.

Glo. He lives that loves thee better than he could.

Anne. Name him

Glo. Plantagenet.

Why, that was he. Anne. Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature.

Anne. Where is he?

Here. [She spits at him] Why dost Glo. thou spit at me?

Anne. Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!

Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler

Out of my sight! Thou dost infect mine I will not be thy executioner.

Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.

Anne. Would they were basilisks to strike thee dead! I50 Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once;

For now they kill me with a living death. Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears.

Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops-

These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear.

wept

To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made

When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him:

Nor when thy warlike father, like a child, Told the sad story of my father's death, 160 And twenty times made pause to sob and weep

That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks

Like trees bedash'd with rain-in that sad

My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear: And what these sorrows could not thence exhale

Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.

I never sued to friend nor enemy:

My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing word:

But, now thy beauty is propos'd my fee, My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.

[She looks scornfully at him. Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was made

For kissing, lady, not for such contempt. If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,

Lo here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword:

Which if thou please to hide in this true breast

And let the soul forth that adoreth thee. I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,

And humbly beg the death upon my knee. [He lays his breast open; she offers at it with his sword.

Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Henry-

But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me. 180 Nay, now dispatch; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward-

But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on. [She falls the sword. Take up the sword again, or take up me.

Anne. Arise, dissembler; though I wish thy death.

Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.

Anne. I have already.

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Glo. That was in thy rage. Speak it again, and even with the word This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love, Shall for thy love kill a far truer love; 190 To both their deaths shalt thou be acces-sary.

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.

Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me both are false.

Glo. Then never was man true.

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say, then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.

Glo. But shall I live in hope?

Anne. All men, I hope, live so.

Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ling.

Anne. To take is not to give.

[Puts on the ring.
Glo. Look how my ring encompasseth thy finger,

Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart:

Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.

And if thy poor devoted servant may But beg one favour at thy gracious hand Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.

Anne. What is it?

Glo. That it may please you leave these sad designs

To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,

And presently repair to Crosby House; Where—after I have solemnly interr'd At Chertsey monast'ry this noble king, And wet his grave with my repentant

I will with all expedient duty see you.
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too

To see you are become so penitent. 22
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.
Glo. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve; But since you teach me how to flatter you, Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt two gentlemen with Lady Anne. Glo. Sirs, take up the corse.

Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord? Glo. No, to White Friars; there attend my coming.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester.
Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour won?
I'll have her; but I will not keep her long.
What! I that kill'd her husband and his father—

To take her in her heart's extremest hate, With curses in her mouth, tears in her

The bleeding witness of my hatred by;

Having God, her conscience, and these bars against me,

And I no friends to back my suit at all 235 But the plain devil and dissembling looks, And yet to win her, all the world to nothing! Ha!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince, Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,

Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury? A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman—Fram'd in the prodigality of nature, Young, valiant, wise, and no doubt right

The spacious world cannot again afford; 245 And will she yet abase her eyes on me, That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet

prince
And made her widow to a woeful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?

240

moiety?

On me, that halts and am misshapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while.
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a maiv'llous proper man.
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,
And entertain a score or two of tailors
To study fashions to adon my body.
Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But first I'll turn yon fellow in his grave,
And then return lamenting to my love.

26r
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass.

That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.

Scene III. London. The palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt his Majesty

Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse:

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,

And cheer his Grace with quick and merry eyes.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Grey. No other harm but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a ford includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son

To be your comforter when he is gone. 10 Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young; and his minority

Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloucester, A man that loves not me, nor none of you. Riv. Is it concluded he shall be Pro- Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and tector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded vet:

But so it must be, if the King miscarry.

. Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Grev. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Derby.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal Grace !

Der. God make your Majesty joyful as you have been.

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Derby,

To your good prayer will scarcely -say

Yet, Derby, notwithstanding she's your wife

And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Derby. I do beseech you, either not believe

The envious slanders of her false accusers: Or, if she be accus'd on true report, Bear with her weakness, which I think pro-

From wayward sickness and no grounded Makes him to send that he may learn the malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the King to-day, my Lord of Derby?

Der. But now he Duke of Buckingham

Are come from visiting his Majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam; he desires to make atonement

Between the Duke of Gloucester and your brothers,

And between them and my Lord Chamberlain;

And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! But that will never be.

I fear our happiness is at the height.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it.

Who is it that complains unto the King That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not?

By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly

That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.

Because I cannot flatter and look fair,

cog,

Duck with French nods and anish courtesy. I must be held a rancorous enemy. Cannot a plain man live and think no harm But thus his simple truth must be abus'd With silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To who in all this presence speaks vour Grace?

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace. When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong, Or thee, or thee, or any of your faction? A plague upon you all! His royal Grace-

Whom God preserve better than you would wish !-Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing while 60

But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter.

The King, on his own royal disposition And not provok'd by any suitor else-Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred 65 That in your outward action shows itself Against my children, brothers, and myself-ground.

Glo. I cannot tell; the world is grown so That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch. Since every Jack became a gentleman,

There's many a gentle person made a lack. Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester: You envy my advancement and my friends':

God grant we never may have need of you! Glo. Meantime, God grants that I have need of you.

Our brother is imprison'd by your means, Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility

Held in contempt; while great promotions Are daily given to ennoble those That scarce some two days since were worth a noble.

O. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd. I never did incense his Majesty Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been

An earnest advocate to plead for him. My lord, you do me shameful injury

Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects. Glo. You may deny that you were not the mean

Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—Glo. She may, Lord Rivers? Why, who knows not so?

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

She may do more, sir, than denying that: Ay, and forswore himself-which Jesu She may help you to many fair preferments

And then deny her aiding hand therein, And lay those honours on your high desert. What may she not? She may-ay, marry, may she-

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Marry Glo. What, marry, may she? with a king,

A bachelor, and a handsome stripling too. Iwis your grandam had a worser match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scofts.

By heaven, I will acquaint his Majesty 105 Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd.

I had rather be a country servant-maid Than a great queen with this condition-To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at.

Enter old QUEEN MARGARET, behind.

Small joy have I in being England's Queen.

Q. Mar. And less'ned be that small, God, I beseech Him!

Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me. Glo. What! Threat you me with telling of the King?

Tell him and spare not. Look what I have

I will avouch't in presence of the King. 115 I dare adventure to be sent to th' Tow'r. 'Tis time to speak-my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I do remember them too well:

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower.

And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury. Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs, A weeder-out of his proud adversames, A liberal rewarder of his friends;

To royalize his blood I spent mine own. 125 Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his or thine. Glo. In all which time you and your husband Grey

Were factious for the house of Lancaster; And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Albans slain? Let me put in your minds, if you forget, What you have been ere this, and what you Withal, what I have been, and what I am. Q. Mar. A murd'rous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father, Warwick, 135 pardon !-

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party for the crown:

And for his meed, poor lord, he is mewed up. I would to God my heart were flint like Edward's.

Or Edward's soft and pitiful like mine. I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame and leave this world,

Thou cacodemon; there thy kingdom is. Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy davs

Which here you urge to prove us enemies. We tollow'd then our lord, our sovereign

So should we you, if you should be our king. Glo. If I should be! I had rather be a pedlar.

Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy were you this country's king,

As little joy you may suppose in me

That I enjoy, being the Queen thereof.
Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the Queen thereof:

For I am she, and altogether joyless. I can no longer hold me patient.

Advancing. Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall

In sharing that which you have pill'd from me.

Which of you trembles not that looks on me?

If not that, I am Queen, you bow like subjects,

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?

Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away! Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd,

That will I make before I let thee go. Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death? Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband and a son thou ow'st to me; 170 And thou a kingdom; all of you allegiance. This sorrow that I have by right is yours: And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes,

And then to dry them gav'st the Duke a clout

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland—

His curses then from bitterness of soul Denounc'd against thee are all fall'n upon

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported. 185

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What, were you snarling all before I came,

Ready to catch each other by the throat, And turn you all your hatred now on me? Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,

Should all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?

195

Why then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,

As ours by murder, to make him a king! Edward thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,

For Edward our son, that was Prince of Wales, 200

Die in his youth by like untimely violence! Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen, Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self! Long mayest thou live to wail thy children's death.

And see another, as I see thee now, 205 Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!

Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And, after many length'ned hours of grief,

And, after many length ned hours of grief, Die neither mother, wife, nor England's Queen!

Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by, And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my son

Was stabb'd with bloody daggers. God, I pray him,

That none of you may live his natural age, But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag. 275
Q. Mar. And leave out thee? Stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee, O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,

And then hurl down their indignation 220 On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!

The worm of conscience still be-gnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends! 224
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,

Unless it be while some tormenting dream Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils! Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog, Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity The slave of nature and the son of hell, 230 Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb,

Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins, Thou rag of honour, thou detested—

Glo. Margaret!

Q. Mar. Richard! Glo. Ha?

Q. Mar. I call thee not.
Glo. I cry thee mercy then, for I did think

That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did, but look'd for no reply.

O, let me make the period to my curse!

Glo. 'Tis done by me, and ends in—Margaret.

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself. 240

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider

Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about? Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself.

The day will come that thou shalt wish for me 245

To help thee curse this poisonous bunchback'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse.

Lest to thy harm thou move our patience. Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine.

Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty. 250 Q. Mar. To serve me well you all should do me duty, Teach me to be your queen and you my subjects.

O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty!

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Dor. Dispute not with her; she is lunatic O. Mar. Peace, Master Marquis, vou are malapert:

Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current.

O, that your young nobility could judge What 'twere to lose it and be miserable! They that stand high have many blasts to shake them,

And if they fall they dash themselves to pieces.

Glo. Good counsel, marry; learn it, learn it, Marquis.

Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.

Glo. Ay, and much more; but I was born so high.

Our aery buildeth in the cedar's top, And dallies with the wind, and scorns the

O. Mar. And turns the sun to shadealas! alas!

Witness my son, now in the shade of death, Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath

Hath in eternal darkness folded up. Your aery buildeth in our aery's nest. O God that seest it, do not suffer it; As it is won with blood, lost be it so!

Buck. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity!

O. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me.

Uncharitably with me have you dealt, 275 And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.

My charity is outrage, life my shame; And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Buck. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I'll kiss thy hand

In sign of league and amity with thee. Now fair befall thee and thy noble house! Thy garments are not spotted with our And for your Grace, and you, my gra-

Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never

The lips of those that breathe them in the

the sky

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping beace.

O Buckingham, take heed of yonder dog! Look when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites.

His venom tooth will rankle to the death: Have not to do with him, beware of him: Sin, death, and hell, have set their marks on him.

And all their ministers attend on him.

Glo. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham? Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord.

O. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,

And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?

O, but remember this another day,

When he shall split thy very heart with

And say poor Margaret was a prophetess! Live each of you the subjects to his hate. And he to yours, and all of you to God's! IExit.

Buck. My hair doth stand an end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine. I muse why she's at liberty.

Glo. I cannot blame her; by God's holy Mother,

She hath had too much wrong; and I repent

My part thereof that I have done to her.

Q. Eliz. I never did her any to my knowledge.

Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong. I was too hot to do somebody good

That is too cold in thinking of it now. Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid: He is frank'd up to fatting for his pains:

od pardon them that are the cause thereof! Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion. 316

To pray for them that have done scathe to us!

Glo. So do I ever—[Aside] being well advis'd:

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself. Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his Majesty doth call for cious lords.

Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come. Lords, will you go with me?

Riv. We wait upon your Grace.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester. Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.

Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend The secret mischiefs that I set abroach 325 I lay unto the grievous charge of others. Tarence, who I indeed have cast in dark-do beweep to many simple gulls;

Namely, to Derby, Hastings, Buckingham; And tell them 'tis the Queen and her allies

That stir the King against the Duke my brother.

Now they believe it, and withal whet me To be reveng'd on Rivers, Dorset, Grev:

But then I sigh and, with a piece of Struck me, that thought to stay him, over-Scripture. Tell them that God bids us do good for evil.

And thus I clothe my naked villainy With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ. And seem a saint when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But, soft, here come my executioners. 339 How now, my hardy stout resolved mates! Are you now going to dispatch this thing? 1 Murd. We are, my lord, and come to have the warrant, That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon; I have it here [Gives the warrant. about me. When you have done, repair to Crosby Place.

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution, Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead; For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps May move your hearts to pity, if you mark

1 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate;

Talkers are no good doers. Be assur'd We go to use our hands and not our tongues.

Your eyes drop millstones when fools' eyes fall tears. Glo.

I like you, lads; about your business straight: Go. go. dispatch.

We will, my noble lord. 1 Murd. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. The Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and Keeper.

Keep. Why looks your Grace so heavily to-day?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night, So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights, That, as I am a Christian faithful man, I would not spend another such a night Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days-

So full of dismal terror was the time! Keep. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you tell me. Clar. Methoughts that I had broken from the Tower

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy: 10 And in my company my brother Gloucester, Who from my cabin tempted me to walk Upon the hatches. Thence we look'd toward England. And cited up a thousand heavy times, During the wars of York and Lancaster, 15 That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along Upon the giddy footing of the hatches, Methought that Gloucester stumbled, and in falling board

Into the tumbling billows of the main. 20 O Lord, methought what pain it was to drown,

What dreadful noise of waters in my ears. What sights of ugly death within my eyes! Methoughts I saw a thousand fearful wrecks.

A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon, Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,

Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels, All scatt'red in the bottom of the sea;

Some lay in dead men's skulls, and in the holes

Where eyes did once inhabit there were crept.

As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems, That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatt'red by.

Keep. Had you such leisure in the time of death

To gaze upon these secrets of the deep? 35 Clar. Methought I had: and often did I strive

To yield the ghost, but still the envious flood

Stopp'd in my soul and would not let it forth

To find the empty, vast, and wand'ring air:

But smother'd it within my panting bulk. Who almost burst to belch it in the sea. 4x Keep. Awak'd you not in this sore agony? Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life.

O, then began the tempest to my soul! I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood With that sour ferryman which poets write of.

Unto the kingdom of perpetual night. The first that there did greet my stranger soul

Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick,

Who spake aloud 'What scourge for perjury

Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?

And so he vanish'd. Then came wand'ring by

A shadow like an angel, with bright hair Dabbled in blood, and he shriek'd out aloud

'Clarence is come—false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury. Seize on him, Furies, take him unto torment!

With that, methoughts, a legion of foul fiends

Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears

TIG

Such hideous cries that, with the ver noise.

I trembling wak'd, and for a season after Could not believe but that I was in hell, Such terrible impression made my dream. No marvel, lord, though i Keep.

affrighted you;

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it. Clar. Ah, Keeper, Keeper, I have don these things

That now give evidence against my soul For Edward's sake, and see how he requites me!

O God! If my deep prayers cannot appeas

Thee, But Thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds Yet execute Thy wrath in me alone; O, spare my guiltless wife and my poo children!

Keeper, I prithee sit by me awhile; My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep. Keep. I will, my lord. God give you [Clarence sleeps Grace good rest.

Enter BRAKENBURY the Lieutenant.

Brak. Sorrow breaks seasons and repos ing hours,

Makes the night morning and the noontide

Princes have but their titles for their glories,

An outward honour for an inward toil; And for unfelt imaginations They often feel a world of restless cares, So that between their titles and low name There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Ho! who's here?

how cam'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief?

Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious. Let him see our commission and talk no more. [Brakenbury reads it. Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands. I will not reason what is meant hereby. Because I will be guiltless from the meaning.

There lies the Duke asleep; and there the keys.

I'll to the King and signify to him That thus I have resign'd to you my charge. 1 Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Brakenbury and Keeper. 2 Murd. What, shall I stab him as he sleeps?

1 Murd. No; he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2 Murd. Why, he shall never wake until the great judgment-day.

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say we stabb'd him sleeping.

2 Murd. The urging of that word judgment hath bred a kind of temotse in me.

1 Mund. What, art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant; but to be damn'd for killing him. from the which no warrant can defend me.

1 Muid. I thought thou hadst been resolute.

2 Murd. So I am, to let him live. 1 Murd. I'll back to the Duke of Gloucester and tell him so.

2 Muid. Nay, I prithee, stay a little. I hope this passionate humour of mine will change; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now? 2 Murd. Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.

2 Murd. Zounds, he dies; I had forgot the reward.

1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. O, in the Duke of Glovcoster's purse!

1 Murd. When he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go; there's few or none will entertain it. 1 Murd. What if it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it—it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot he with his Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow, and neighbour's wife, but it detects him. 'Tis a blushing shamefac'd spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills a man full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold that-by chance I found. It beggars any man that keeps it. It is turn'd out of towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it.

1 Murd. Zounds, 'tis even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the Duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind and believe him not; he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong-fram'd; he cannot revail with me.

2 Murd. Spoke like a tall man that respects thy reputation. Come, shall we all to work?

1 Murd. Take him on the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then chop him 100 in the malmsey-butt in the next room. 153

2 Murd. O excellent device! and make a Sourn at his edict and fulfil a man's? sop of him.

1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike!

1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, Keeper? Give me a cup of wine.

2 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what ait thou?

Muid. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not as I am, royal. 2 Murd. Nor you as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

1 Murd. My voice is now the King's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly and how deadly dost thou speak!

Your eyes do menace me. Why look you pale?

Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

2 Muid. To, to, to-Clar. To murder me?

Both Murd. Ay, ay.

Clai. You scarcely have the hearts to tell

And therefore cannot have the hearts to

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you? I Mand. Offended us you have not, but the King.

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again. 2 Mind. Never, my lord; therefore pre pare to die.

Clar. Are you drawn forth among a would of men

To slay the innocent? What is my offence? Where is the evidence that doth accuse me? What lawful quest have given their verdict up

Unto the frowning judge, or who pronounc'd

The bitter sentence of poor Claience' death?

Before I be convict by course of law, To threaten me with death is most unlawful. I charge you, as you hope to have redemption By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins, That you depart and lay no hands on me.

The deed you undertake is damnable. 1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon Go you to him from me.

command. 2 Murd. And he that hath commanded is our king.

Clar. Erroneous vassals! the great King Bless'd his three sons with his victorious of kings

Hath in the tables of his law commanded And charg'd us from his soul to love each That thou shalt do no murder. Will you then

Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand

To hurl upon their heads that break his law.

2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hull on thee

For false torswearing, and for murder too: Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight In quariel of the house of Lancaster.

1 Muid. And like a traitor to the name of God

Didst break that vow; and with thy treacherous blade

Unripp'dst the bowels of thy sov'ieign's son.

2 Mind. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

1 Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us.

When thou hast broke it in such dear degree ?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did 1 that ill deed?

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake. He sends you not to murder me for this. 210 For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed. O, know you yet He doth it publicly.

Take not the quarrel from His pow'rful arm:

He needs no indirect or lawless course 213 To cut off those that have offended Him.

1 Mund. Who made thee then a bloody

When gallant-springing brave Plantagenet. That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?

Clar My brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

1 Mu.d. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy faults,

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee. Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me:

I am his brother, and I love him well. If you are hir'd for meed, go back again, 275

And I will send you to my brother Gloucester.

Who shall reward you better for my life Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd: your brother Gloucester hates you. Clar. O, no, he loves me, and he holds me dear. 230

1 Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him when that our princely father York

1 Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right, as snow in harvest. Come, you deceive yourself: 'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune

And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore with sobs

That he would labour my delivery.

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you From this earth's thraldom to the joys of heaven.

2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your SOUTE

To counsel me to make my peace with God, And are you yet to your own souls so 250 blind

That you will war with God by murd'ring me?

O, sirs, consider: they that set you on To do this deed will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do? Relent, and save your souls. Clar. I Murd. Relent! No, 'tis cowardly and womanish. 255

Clar. Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilish.

Which of you, if you were a prince's son, Being pent from liberty as I am now, If two such murderers as yourselves came to you.

260 Would not entreat for life? My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks; O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side and entreat for me-As you would beg were you in my distress. A begging prince what beggar pities not? 2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord. 266

1 Murd. [Stabbing him] Take that, and that. If all this will not do,

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within. [Exit with the body.

Re-enter First Murderer.

1 Murd. How now, what mean'st thou that thou help'st me not?

By heavens, the Duke shall know how slack you have been!

2 Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother! Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;

Bid Gloucester think of this, and he will For I repent me that the Duke is slain.

ACT TWO

Scene I. London. The palace.

Enter KING EDWARD sick. QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and Others.

K. Edw. Why, so. Now have I done a good day's work.

You peers, continue this united league. I every day expect an embassage

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence: And more at peace my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.

Hastings and Rivers, take each other's hand;

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love. Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed you dally not before your king;

Lest He that is the supreme King of kings Confound your hidden falsehood and award Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love !

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself is not exempt from this:

Nor you, son Dorset; Buckingham, nor you:

You have been factious one against the other.

Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand:

And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings; I will never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine! K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him; Hastings love Lord Marquis.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,

Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [They embrace. K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies, I would to God all strifes were well com-And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. [To the Queen] Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate

Upon your Grace, but with all duteous love Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me With hate in those where I expect most love!

When I have most need to employ a friend And most assured that he is a friend, Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile, Be he unto me! This do I beg of God When I am cold in love to you or yours. 40

They embrace. K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham.

Is this thy yow unto my sickly heart. There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here To make the blessed period of this peace. Buck. And, in good time, Here comes Sir Richard Ratcliff and the Duke.

Enter GLOUCESTER, and RATCLIFF.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen:

And, princely peers, a happy time of day! K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day.

Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity, Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate, 50 Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign

Among this princely heap, if any here, By false intelligence or wrong surmise, Hold me a foe-55

If I unwittingly, or in my rage, Have aught committed that is hardly borne To any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me to his friendly peace: 'Tis death to me to be at enmity;

I hate it, and desire all good men's love. First, madam, I entreat true peace of you, Which I will purchase with my duteous service;

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham. If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us; Of you, and you, Lord Rivers, and of Dorset.

That all without desert have frown'd on me:

Of you, Lord Woodville, and, Lord Scales, of you;

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen-indeed, of Kneel'd at my feet, and bid me be advis'd? all.

I do not know that Englishman alive With whom my soul is any jot at odds More than the infant that is born to-night. I thank my God for my humility.

hereafter.

pounded.

sovereign lord, I do beseech your Highness

To take our brother Clarence to your grace. Glo. Why, madam, have I off'red love for this.

To be so flouted in this 10yal presence?

Who knows not that the gentle Duke is dead? They all start. You do him injury to scorn his corse.

K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead! Who knows he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this!

Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in the presence

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks. K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? The order was revers'd.

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order died.

And that a winged Mercury did bear; Some tardy cripple bare the countermand That came too lag to see him buried. God grant that some, less noble and less loyal,

Nearer in bloody thoughts, an not in blood, Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did.

And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter DERBY.

Der. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!

K. Edw. I prithee, peace; my soul is full of sorrow.

Der. I will not rise unless your Highness hear me.

K. Edw. Then say at once what is it thou requests.

The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life;

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman 100 Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk. K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death, And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave? My brother kill'd no man-his fault was thought, And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who sued to me for him? Who, In my wrath, 106

Who spoke of brotherhood? Who spoke of love?

Who told me how the poor soul did forsake The mighty Warwick and did fight for me?

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury When Oxford had me down, he rescued me And said 'Dear Brother, live, and be a king'?

Who told me, when we both lav in the field Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me Even in his garments, and did give himself, All thin and naked, to the numb cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutish wrath

Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you 129 Had so much grace to put it in my mind. But when your carters or your waiting-vassals

Have done a drunken slaughter and defac'd The precious image of our dear Redeemer, You straight are on your knees for pardon, pardon;

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you. 125 [Derby rises.

But for my brother not a man would speak; Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all llave been beholding to him in his life; Yet none of you would once beg for his life. O God, I fear thy justice will take hold 131 On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this!

Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. Ah, poor Clarence!

[Exeunt some with King and Queen.
Glo. This is the fruits of rashness.
Mark'd you not *34

How that the guilty kindred of the Queen Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence' death?

O, they did urge it still unto the King! God will revenge it. Come, lords, will you

To comfort Edward with our company?

Buck. We wait upon your Grace. 40

[Execunt.

Scene II. London. The palace.

Enter the old Duchess of York, with the Son and Daughter of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Daugh. Why do you weep so oft, and beat your breast,

And cry' O Clarence, my unhappy son!'?

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your head.

And call us orphans, wretches, castaways, It that our noble father were alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me both;

I do lament the sickness of the King, 9 As loath to luse him, not your father's death;

It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost. Son. Then you conclude, my grandam, he is dead.

The King mine uncle is to blame for it.

God will revenge it; whom I will importune

With earnest prayers all to that effect. 15 Daugh. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! The King doth love you well.

Incapable and shallow innocents.

You cannot guess who caus'd your father's death.

Son. Giandam, we can; for my good uncle Gloucester

Told me the King, provok'd to it by the Queen,

Devis'd impeachments to imprison him. And when my uncle told me so, he wept, And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek; Bade me rely on him as on my father, 25 And he would love me dearly as a child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shape,

And with a virtuous vizor hide deep vice! He is my son; ay, and therein my shame; Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Av. bov.

Son. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this?

Enter Queen Elizabeth, with her hair about her ears; Rivers and Dorset after her.

Q. Eliz. Ah, who shall hinder me to wail and weep,

To chide my fortune, and torment myself? I'll join with black despair against my soul And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence. Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead. Why grow the branches when the root is gone?

Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?

If you will live, lament; if die, be brief, That our swift-winged souls may catch the King's,

Or like obedient subjects follow him 45 To his new kingdom of ne'er-changing night.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow

As I had litle in thy noble husband! I have bewept a worthy husband's death, And liv'd with looking on his images; 50 But now two mirrors of his princely semblance

Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death, And I for comfort have but one false glass, That grieves me when I see my shame in

Thou art a widow, yet thou art a mother 53

But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble hands-

Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I-

Thine being but a moiety of my moan— 60 To overgo thy woes and drown thy cries? Son. Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's death!

How can we aid you with our kindred tears? Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd;

Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept! 65 Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation; I am not bairen to bring forth complaints. All springs reduce their currents to mine eves

That I, being govern'd by the watery moon, May send forth plenteous tears to drown the world! Ah for my husband, for my dear Lord Edward!

Chil. Ah for our father, for our dear Lord Clarence!

Duch. Alas for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and he's gone.

Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a Duch. Was never mother had so dear a

Alas, I am the mother of these griefs! 80 Their woes are parcell'd, mine is general. She for an Edward weeps, and so do I: I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she. These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I: I for an Edward weep, so do not they. Alas, you three on me, threefold distress'd, Pour all your tears! I am your sorrow's nurse,

And I will pamper it with lamentation. Dor. Comfort, dear mother. God is much displeas'd

That you take with unthankfulness his doing.

In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungrateful

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;

Much more to be thus opposite with heaven.

For it requires the royal debt it lent you. 95 Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother.

And hast the comfort of thy children left. Of the young prince your son. Send straight for him;

Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives.

Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave.

And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, DERBY, HASTINGS, and RATCLIFF.

Glo. Sister, have comfort. All of us have cause

To wail the dimming of our shining star: But none can help our harms by wailing them.

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy: I did not see your Grace. Humbly on my 105

I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee; and put meekness in thy breast,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty! Glo. Amen! [Asule] And make me die a good old man!

That is the butt end of a mother's blessing: I marvel that her Grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy punces and heartsorrowing peers,

That bear this heavy mutual load of moan. Now cheer each other in each other's love. Though we have spent our harvest of this

We are to reap the harvest of his son. The broken rancour of your high-swol'n hearts. But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together. Must gently be preserv'd, cheush'd, and kept.

Me seemein good that, with some little tiam.

Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince he fet

Hither to London, to be crown'd our King. Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my ord, lest by a multitude The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out, would be so much the more Which dangerous

By how much the estate is green and yet ungovern'd;

Where every horse bears his commanding rein

And may direct his course as please himself, As well the fear of harm as harm apparent,

In my opinion, ought to be prevented. Glo. I hope the King made peace with all of us; And the compact is firm and true in me. Ris. And so in me; and so, I think, in all. Yet, since it is but green, it should be put Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months To no apparent likelihood of breach, таб Which haply by much company might be urg'd;

Therefore I say with noble Buckingham That it is meet so few should fetch the Prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine

Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam, and you, my sister, will you go To give your censures in this business?

[Exeunt all but Buckingham and Gloucester. Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the Prince,

For God sake, let not us two stay at home; For by the way I'll sort occasion.

As index to the story we late talk'd of, To part the Queen's proud kindred from the Prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory.

My oracle, my prophet, my dear cousin, I, as a child, will go by thy direction. Toward Ludlow then, for we'll not stay IExeunt. behind.

SCENE III. London. A street.

Enter one Citizen at one door, and another at the other.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour. Whither away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself.

Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes, that the King is dead. 2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better.

I fear, I fear 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

Give you good morrow, sir. 3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?

2 Cit. Av, sir, it is too true; God help the while!

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

3 Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child.

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of governmen#

Which, in his nonage, council under him, And, in his full and ripened years, himself, No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern

1 Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth old.

3 Cit. Stood the state so ? No, no, good friends. God wot: For then this land was famously enrich'd

With politic grave counsel; then the King Had virtuous uncles to protect his Grace, 21 1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

3 Cit. Better it were they all came by his father,

Or by his father there were none at all: For emulation who shall now be nearest 25 Will touch us all too near, if God prevent

O. full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester! And the Queen's sons and brothers haught and proud;

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,

This sickly land might solace as before, 30 1 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well. 3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks:

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand:

When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?

Untimely storms make men expect a dearth. All may be well; but, if God sort it so.

'Tis more than we deserve or I expect. 2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear. You cannot reason almost with a man That looks not heavily and full of dread. 40

3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so ;

By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust Ensuing danger; as by proof we see The water swell before a boist'rous storm. But leave it all to God. Whither away ? 45 2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3 Cit. And so was I; I'll bear you company. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. The palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they lay at Stony Stratford,

And at Northampton they do rest to-night; To-morrow or next day they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the Prince.

I hope he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear no; they say my son of York Has almost overta'en him in his growth.

York. Av. mother: but I would not have Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners. it so.

Duch. Why, my good cousin, it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night as we did sit at supper,

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow 'Ay,' quoth my More than my brother. uncle Gloucester

'Small herbs have grace: great weeds do grow apace.

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast.

Because sweet flow'rs are slow and weeds make haste.

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold

In him that did object the same to thee. He was the wretched'st thing when he was voung.

So long a-growing and so leisurely

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so no doubt he is, my gracious madam.

Duch. I hope he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been rememb'red,

I could have given my uncle's Grace a flout To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd mine.

Duch. How, my young York? I prithee let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so

That he could gnaw a crust at two hours

'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth. Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I prithee, pretty York, who told thee this?

thou wast born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

O. Eliz. A parlous boy! Go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

O. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What news?

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report.

Q. Eliz. How doth the Prince? Well, madam, and in health. Mess.

Duch. What is thy news? Are sent to Pomfret, and with them

Duch. Who hath committed them? Mess. The mighty Dukes. Gloucester and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence? 15 Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd. Why or for what the nobles were committed

Is all unknown to me, my gracious lord.

Q. Eliz. Ay me, I see the ruin of my house! The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;

Insulting tyranny begins to jet Upon the innocent and aweless throne. Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre!

I see, as in a map, the end of all. Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days.

How many of you have mine eyes beheld! My husband lost his life to get the crown: And often up and down my sons were toss'd

For me to joy and weep their gain and loss; And being seated, and domestic broils Clean over-blown, themselves the conquerors

Make war upon themselves-brother to brother.

Blood to blood, self against self. O, preposterous

And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen.

Or let me die, to look on death no more! 65 Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to sanctuary. Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you. Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. [To the Queen] My gracious lady, go. And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your Grace 70 The seal I keep; and so betide to me As well I tender you and all of yours! York. Grandam, his nurse. As well I tender you and all of yours! Duch. His nurse! Why she was dead ere Go, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.

ACT THREE

Scene I. London. A street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the PRINCE OF WALES, GLOUCESTER. BUCKINGHAM. CATESBY, CARDINAL BOURCHIER, and Others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet Prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign.

The weary way hath made you melancholy. Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the Lord Rivers and Lord Grey Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy.

I want more uncles here to welcome me. Glo. Sweet Prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit; Nor more can you distinguish of a man Than of his outward show: which, God He knows, Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart. Those uncles which you want were dangerous;

Grace attended to their sug'ied Your words

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts God keep you from them and from such false friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends but they were none.

Glo. My lord, the Mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train.

May. God bless your Grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord, and thank you all.

I thought my mother and my brother York

Would long ere this have met us on the way.

Fig. what a slug is Hastings, that he comes

To tell us whether they will come or no!

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God He knows, not I.

The Queen your mother and your brother York

Have taken sanctuary. The tender Prince Would fain have come with me to meet your Grace,

But by his mother was perforce withheld. Buck. Fie, what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers? Lord Cardinal, will your Grace

Persuade the Queen to send the Duke of Methinks the truth should live from age to York

Unto his princely brother presently? If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him 35 And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the Duke of York, Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate

To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid 40 We should infringe the holy privilege Of blessed sanctuary! Not for all this land With what his valour did enrich his wit. 85

Would I be guilty of so deep a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord.

Too ceremonious and traditional. Weigh it but with the grossness of this age. You break not sanctuary in seizing him. The benefit thereof is always granted

To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place

And those who have the wit to claim the place. This Prince hath neither claim'd it nor deserv'd it, And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it.

Then, taking him from thence that is not there.

You break no privilege nor charter there. Oft have I heard of sanctuary men: But sanctuary children never till now.

Card. My lord, you shall overrule my mind for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may.

Exeunt Cardinal and Hastings. Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come, Where shall we so ourn till our coronation? Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal

If I may counsel you, some day or two Your Highness shall repose you at the Tower.

Then where you please and shall be thought most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place.

Did Julius Casar build that place, my lord? Glo. He did, my gracious loid, begin that place,

Which, since, succeeding ages have reedified.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported Successively from age to age, he built it? Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not regist'red,

As 'twere retail'd to all posterity, Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. [Aside] So wise so young, they say, do never live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle? Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives long.

[Aside] Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity, I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,

I'll win our ancient right in France again, Or die a soldier as I liv'd a king.

Glo. [Aside] Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Enter young YORK, HASTINGS, and the CARDINAL.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York, how fares our loving brother?

York. Well my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay brother, to our grief, as it is yours.

Too late he died that might have kept that

Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord.

You said that idle weeds are fast in growth.

The Prince my brother hath outgrown me

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle? 105 Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so. York. Then he is more beholding to you than I.

Glo. He may command me as my sovereign:

But you have power in me as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? With all my heart!

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give,

And being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift! O, that's the York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it!

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O, then, I see you will part but with light gifts:

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glo. It is too heavy for your Grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier. Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Glo. How?

York. Little.

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk.

Uncle, your Grace knows how to bear with

Uncle, your Grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me.

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me; Because that I am little, like an ape, 130 He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle He prettily and aptly taunts himself.

So cunning and so young is wonderful. 135 Glo. My lord, will't please you pass along?

Myself and my good cousin Buckingham Will to your mother, to entreat of her

To meet you at the Tower and welcome you. York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord?

Prince. My Lord Protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, what should you fear?
York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry ghost.

My grandam told me he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not

But come, my lord; with a heavy heart, Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower. 150 [A sennet. Exeunt all but Gloucester, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York

Was not incensed by his subtle mother To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt. O, vis a perilous boy;

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable. He is all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest. Come hither, Catesby.

Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend

As closely to conceal what we impart. Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way.

What think'st thou? Is it not an easy matter

To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,

For the instalment of this noble Duke
In the seat royal of this famous isle?

5

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Cale. He for his father's sake so loves the Prince 105 That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? Will not he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby,

And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings 170

How he doth stand affected to our purpose; And summon him to-morrow to the Tower, To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us, Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:

If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling, Be thou so too, and so break off the talk, And give us notice of his inclination; For we to-morrow hold divided councils, Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.

Glo. Commend me to Lord William. Tell him, Catesby, 181
His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries

Io-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle; And bid my lord, for joy of this good news, Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more Buck. Good Catesby, go effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.

Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glo. At Crosby House, there shall you find us both. [Exit Catesby. Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glo. Chop off his head—something we will determine.

And, look when I am King, claim thou of me

The earldom of Hereford and all the movables

Whereof the King my brother was possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your Grace's hand.

Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards We may digest our complots in some form.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. Before Lord Hastings' house.

Enter a Messenger to the door of Hastings.

Mess. My lord, my lord! [Knocking. Hast. [Within] Who knocks? Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within] What is't o'clock? Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it appears by that I have to say. First, he commends him to your noble self. Hast. What then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship that this night

He dreamt the boar had razed off his helm. Besides, he says there are two councils kept,

And that may be determin'd at the one Which may make you and him to rue at th' other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure—

If you will presently take horse with him
And with all speed post with him toward the north

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord:

Bid him not fear the separated council: ~o His honour and myself are at the one, And at the other is my good friend Catesby; Where nothing can proceed that toucheth

Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance:

And for his drams, I wonder he's so simple To trust the mock'ry of unquiet slumbers. To fly the boar before the boar pursues Were to incense the boar to follow us

And make pursuit where he did mean no chase.

Go, bid thy master rise and come to me; And we will both together to the Tower, Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.

Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring.

What news, what news, in this our tott'ring state?

Cate. It is a reeling world indeed my Cate. It is a reeling world indeed, my lord;

And I believe will never stand upright 39
Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.

Hast, How, wear the garland! Does thou Hast. How, wear the garland! Dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord.

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd. But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it? Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find Were jocund and suppos'd their states were you forward

Upon his party for the gain thereof:

And thereupon he sends you this good news.

That this same very day your enemies, The kindred of the Queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed. I am no mourner for that news. Because they have been still my adversaries:

But that I'll give my voice on Richard's side

To bar my master's heirs in true descent. God knows I will not do it to the death. 55 Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve month hence,

That they which brought me in my master's hate.

I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older.

I'll send some packing that yet think not

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious

When men are unprepar'd and look not for it. 65

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! And so falls it out

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so 'twill

With some men else that think themselves as safe

As thou and I, who, as thou knowest, are dear To princely Richard and to Buckingham

Cate. The Princes both make high account of you-

[Aside] For they account his head upon the bridge.

Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boarspear, man?

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided? Stan. My lord, good morrow; good morrow, Catesby.

You may jest on, but, by the holy road, I do not like these several councils, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as yours,

And never in my days, I do protest, Was it so precious to me as 'tis now.

Think you, but that I know our state secure,

I would be so triumphant as I am? Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, Sure.

And they indeed had no cause to mistrust : But yet you see how soon the day o'ercast. This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt: Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward. What, shall we toward the Tower? The day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk'd of are beheaded. Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats.

But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter HASTINGS, a pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow.

[Exeunt Stanley and Catesby. How now, Hastings! How goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me

Than when thou met'st me last where now we meet :

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower By the suggestion of the Queen's allies: But now, I tell thee-keep it to thyself-This day those enemies are put to death, 105 And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content!

Hast. Gramercy, Hastings; there, drink that for me. [Throws him his purse. Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit.

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt for your last exercise; Come the next Sabbath, and I will content [He whispers in his ear. Pr. I'll wait upon your lordship.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, Lord Chamberlain!

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest: Your honour hath no shriving work in hand. Hast. Good faith, and when I met this hely man, The men you talk of came into my mind.

What, go you toward the Tower? Buck. I do, my lord, but long I cannot stay there: 85 I shall return before your lordship thence. Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. [Aside] And supper too, although thou knowest it not .-

Come, will you go?

I'll wait upon your lordship Hast. Exeunt.

Scene III. Pomfret Castle.

Enter SIR RICHARD RATCLIFF, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles, RIVERS, GREY and VAUGHAN, to death.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God bless the Prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers. Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch: the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison, Fatal and ominous to noble peers! Within the guilty closure of thy walls Richard the Second here was hack'd to death:

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat, We give to thee our guiltless blood to drink. Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon our heads. When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd I mean, your voice for crowning of the she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Hastings. O, remember, God,

To hear her prayer for them, as now for us! And for my sister, and her princely sons, 20 Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood, Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be I saw good strawberries in your garden spilt.

expiate.

Riv. Come, Grey; come, Vaughan; let us here embrace.

Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. 25 Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. The Tower.

Enter BUCKINGHAM, DERBY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVEL, with Others and seat themselves at a table.

Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met

Is to determine of the coronation. In God's name speak-when is the royal day?

Buck. Is all things ready for the royal time?

Der. It is, and wants but nomination, 5 Elv. To-morrow then I judge a happy dav.

Buck. Who knows the Lord Protector's mind herein?

Who is most inward with the noble Duke? Ely. Your Grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces; for our hearts.

He knows no more of mine than I of yours: Or I of his, my lord, than you of mine. Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me well;

But for his purpose in the coronation I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd His gracious pleasure any way therein.

But you, my honourable lords, may name the time :

And in the Duke's behalf I'll give my voice, Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Elv. In happy time, here comes the Duke himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins all. good morrow.

I have been long a sleeper, but I trust My absence doth neglect no great design 25 Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your cue. my lord,

For standing by when Richard stabb'd her William Lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part-

King.

Glo. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder; His lordship knows me well and loves me well. My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn there. Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is I do beseech you send for some of them, 35 Ely. Marry and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit.

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with [Takes him aside. you.

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,

And finds the testy gentleman so hot 39 That he will lose his head ere give consent His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, Shall lose the royalty of England's throne. Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile; I'll go with you.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Buckingham. Der. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden; Stanley did dream the boar did raze our For I myself am not so well provided As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter the BISHOP OF ELY.

Elv. Where is my lord the Duke of And started when he look'd upon the Gloucester?

I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His Grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning:

There's some conceit or other likes him well When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.

I think there's never a man in Christendom Can lesser hide his love or hate than he; For by his face straight shall you know his

Der. What of his heart perceive you in his face

By any livelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve

That do conspire my death with devilish plots

Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd

Upon my body with their hellish charms? Hast. The tender love I bear your Grace, my lord.

Makes me most forward in this princely presence

To doom th' offenders, whosoe'er they be. I say, my lord, they have deserved death. Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil.

Look how I am bewitch'd; behold, mine arm

Is like a blasted sapling wither'd up. And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,

Consorted with that harlot strumpet Shore, That by their witchcraft thus have marked

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord-

Glo. If ?—thou protector of this damned strumpet,

Talk'st thou to me of ifs? Thou art a traitor.

Off with his head! Now by Saint Paul I swear

I will not dine until I see the same.

Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done. 80 The rest that love me, rise and follow me. [Exeunt all but Hastings, Lovell, and Ratcliff.

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me: For I, too fond, might have prevented this.

To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd, And I myself secure in grace and favour.

O Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head! Rat. Come, come, dispatch; the Duke would be at dinner.

Make a short shrift; he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men, Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!

Who builds his hope in air of your good looks

Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast, Ready with every nod to tumble down Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Scene V. London. The Tower-walls.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake and change thy colour.

Murder thy breath in middle of a word, And then again begin, and stop again, As if thou were distraught and mad with terror? Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian; Speak and look back, and pry on every side, Tremble and start at wagging of a straw, Intending deep suspicion. Ghastly looks Are at my service, like enforced smiles; And both are ready in their offices At any time to grace my stratagems.

But what, is Catesby gone? Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck, Lord Mayor-Glo. Look to the drawbridge there! Buck. Hark! a drum.

Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent-

Glo. Look back, defend thee; here are

Buck. God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter LOVELL and RATCLIFF, with Hastings' head.

Glo. Be patient; they are friends— Ratcliff and Lovel.

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble

The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings. Glo. So dear I lov'd the man that I must

I took him for the plainest harmless creature

That breath'd upon the earth a Christian; Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded

The history of all her secret thoughts. So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue

That, his apparent open guilt omitted, I mean his conversation with Shore's

He liv'd from all attainder of suspects.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st Only for saying he would make his son shelt'red traitor

That ever liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost believe— 35 Were't not that by great preservation We live to tell it—that the subtle traitor This day had plotted, in the council-house, To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester.

May. Had he done so?

Glo. What! think you we are Turks or Infidels?

Or that we would, against the form of law, Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death But that the extreme peril of the case, The peace of England and our persons' safety, Enforc'd us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! He deserv'd his death;

And your good Graces both have well proceeded

To warn false traitors from the like attempts.

I never look'd for better at his hands After he once fell in with Mistress Shore. Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should die Until your lordship came to see his end-Which now the loving haste of these our friends.

Because, my lord, I would have had you heard

The traitor speak, and timorously confess The manner and the purpose of his treasons: That you might well have signified the same

Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconster us in him and wail his death.

May. But, my good loid, your Grace's word shall serve

As well as I had seen and heard him speak:

And do not doubt, right noble Princes both. But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens

With all your just proceedings in this cause. Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here.

T' avoid the censures of the carping world. Buck. Which since you come too late of our intent, Yet witness what you hear we did intend. And so, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell. [Exit Lord Mayor.

Glo. Go, atter, after, cousin Buckingham. The Mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post.

There, at your meet'st advantage of the time.

Infer the bastardy of Edward's children. 75 Tell them how Edward put to death a cıtizen

Heir to the crown-meaning indeed his house,

Which by the sign thereof was termed so. Moreover, urge his hateful luxury And bestial appetite in change of lust, stretch'd unto their servants. Which daughters, wives,

Tell them, when that my mother went with child

Of that insatiate Edward, noble York My princely father then had wars in France And, by true computation of the time, Found that the issue was not his begot; 90 Which well appeared in his lineaments, Being nothing like the noble Duke my father.

Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off: Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator

As if the golden plea for which I plead Were for myself; and so, my lord, adieu.

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's Castle;

Where you shall find me well accompanied With reverend fathers and well learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw.

Scene VI. London. A street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings:

Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's. And mark how well the sequel hangs together:

Eleven hours I have spent to write it over, For vesternight by Catesby was it sent me; At lower end of the hall hurl'd up their The precedent was full as long a-doing; And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd.

Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty. Here's a good world the while! Who is so

That cannot see this palpable device? Yet who so bold but says he sees it not? Bad is the world; and all will come to nought.

When such ill dealing must be seen in thought.

Scene VII. London. Baynard's Castle. Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, at several doors.

citizens?

Buck. Now, by the holy Mother of our Lord,

The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France; Th' insatiate greediness of his desire, And his enforcement of the city wives; His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy, As being got, your father then in France, And his resemblance, being not like the Duke.

Withal I did infer your lineaments, Being the right idea of your father, Both in your form and nobleness of mind; Laid open all your victories in Scotland, 15 Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace, Your bounty, virtue, fair humility; Indeed, left nothing fitter for your purpose

Look for the news that the Guildhall Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse. And when mine oratory drew toward end I bid them that did love their country's good [To Catesby] Go thou to Friar Penker. Bid Cry 'God save Richard, England's royal King!

Glo. And did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word:

But, like dumb statues or breathing stones. Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly

Which when I saw, I reprehended them. And ask'd the Mayor what meant this wilful silence.

His answer was, the people were not used To be spoke to but by the Recorder. Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again.

'Thus saith the Duke, thus hath the Duke ınferr'd '-

But nothing spoke in warrant from himself. When he had done, some followers of mine

And some ten voices cried 'God save King Richard!

And thus I took the vantage of those few-Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,' quoth I

'This general applause and checiful shout Argues your wisdoms and your love to Řichard '.

And even here brake off and came away. Glo. What, tongueless blocks were they? Would they not speak?

Will not the Mayor then and his brethren come?

Buck. The Mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear:

Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit; Glo. How now, how now! What say the And look you get a prayer-book in your hand.

And stand between two churchmen, good my lord;

For on that ground I'll make a holy descant;

And be not easily won to our requests. 50 Play the maid's part: still answer nay, and take it.

Glo. I go; and if you plead as well for them

As I can say may to thee for myself, No doubt we bring it to a happy issue. Buck. Go, go, up to the leads; the Lord Mayor knocks.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord. I dance attendance here: I think the Duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter CATESBY.

[Exit Gloucester.

Now, Catesby, what says your lord to my Lend favourable ear to our requests. request?

Cate. He doth entreat your Grace, my noble lord,

To visit him to-morrow or next day. He is within, with two right reverend fathers.

Divinely bent to meditation;

And in no worldly suits would he be mov'd, To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke;

Tell him, myself, the Mayor and Aldermen, In deep designs, in matter of great moment, No less importing than our general good, Are come to have some conference with his Grace.

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him Exit. straight.

an Edward!

He is not lolling on a lewd love-bed, But on his knees at meditation; Not dallying with a brace of courtezans, But meditating with two deep divines; 75 Not sleeping, to engross his idle body, But praying, to enrich his watchful soul. Happy were England would this virtuous prince

Take on his Grace the sovereignty thereof; But, sure, I fear we shall not win him to it. May. Marry, God defend his Grace should say us nay! Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes again.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his Grace? Cate. My lord, He wonders to what end you have assembled Such troops of citizens to come to him. 85 His Grace not being warn'd thereof before, He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me that I mean no good to him. 89 By heaven, we come to him in perfect love; And so once more return and tell his Grace.

[Exit Catesby. When holy and devout religious men Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence.

So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOUCESTER aloft, between Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See where his Grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian orince.

To stay him from the fall of vanity; And, see, a book of prayer in his hand, True ornaments to know a holy man. Famous Plantagenet, most gracious Prince,

And pardon us the interruption Of thy devotion and right Christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no apology:

I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, 105 Who, earnest in the service of my God, Deferr'd the visitation of my friends. But, leaving this, what is your Grace's pleasure? Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above.

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle. Glo. I do suspect I have done some offence That seems disgracious in the city's eye, And that you come to reprehend my ignorance. Buck. You have, my lord. Would it might please your Grace, Buck. Ah ha, my lord, this prince is not On our entreaties, to amend your fault! 115 Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land ?

Buck. Know then, it is your fault that you resign

The supreme seat, the throne majestical, The scept'red office of your ancestors Your state of fortune and your due of birth. The lineal glory of your royal house, To the corruption of a blemish'd stock; Whiles in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,

Which here we waken to our country's good.

The noble isle doth want her proper limbs; Her face defac'd with scars of infamy, 126 Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants, And almost should'red in the swallowing gulf

Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion. Which to recure, we heartily solicit Your gracious self to take on you the charge And kingly government of this your land-Not as protector, steward, substitute, Or lowly factor for another's gain: But as successively, from blood to blood, Your right of birth, your empery, your own. For this, consorted with the citizens, Your very worshipful and loving friends, And by their vehement instigation, In this just cause come I to move your Grace.

Glo. I cannot tell if to depart in silence Or bitterly to speak in your reproof Best fitteth my degree or your condition. If not to answer, you might haply think Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded

To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty, Which fondly you would here impose on

If to reprove you for this suit of yours, So season'd with your faithful love to me, Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.

Scene 71

Therefore-to speak, and to avoid the first And then, in speaking, not to incur the last-

Definitively thus I answer you: Your love deserves my thanks, but my desert

Unmeritable shuns your high request. 155 First, if all obstacles were cut away, And that my path were even to the crown, As the ripe revenue and due of birth, Yet so much is my poverty of spirit, So mighty and so many my defects, That I would rather hide me from my greatness-

Being a bark to brook no mighty sea-Than in my greatness covet to be hid. And in the vapour of my glory smother'd But, God be thank'd, there is no need of

And much I need to help you, were there need.

The royal tree hath left us royal fruit Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of

Will well become the seat of majesty And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign. On him I lay that you would lay on me-The right and fortune of his happy stars, Which God defend that I should wring from him. Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your Grace;

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial.

All circumstances well considered. You say that Edward is your brother's son. So say we too, but not by Edward's wife; For first was he contract to Lady Lucy-Your mother lives a witness to his vow-180 And afterward by substitute betroth'd To Bona, sister to the King of France. These both put off, a poor petitioner, A care-craz'd mother to a many sons, A beauty-waning and distressed widow, 185 Even in the afternoon of her best days, Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye, Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree To base declension and loath'd bigamy. By her, in his unlawful bed, he got This Edward, whom our manners call the Prince.

More bitterly could I expostulate, Save that, for reverence to some alive, I give a sparing limit to my tongue. Then, good my lord, take to your royal self This proffer'd benefit of dignity; If not to bless us and the land withal, Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry From the corruption of abusing times Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful suit! Glo. Alas, why would you heap this care on me?

I am unfit for state and majesty. I do beseech you, take it not amiss:

I cannot nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. It you refuse it-as, in love and zeal.

Loath to depose the child, your brother's son

As well we know your tenderness of heart And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse, Which we have noted in you to your kindred

And egally indeed to all estates—

Yet know, whe'er you accept our suit or no, Your brother's son shall never reign our king;

But we will plant some other in the throne To the disgrace and downfall of your house; And in this resolution here we leave you. Come, citizens. Zourids, I'll entreat no more.

Glo. O, do not swear, my lord of Buckingham. [Exeunt Buckingham, Mayor, and Citizens.

Cate. Call him again, sweet Prince, accept their suit.

If you deny them, all the land will rue it. Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?

Call them again. I am not made of stones, But penetrable to your kind entreaties. 2 5 Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter Buckingham and the re.t.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage grave men,

Since you will buckle fortune on my back, To bear her burden, whe'er I will or no, I must have patience to endure the load: But if black scandal or foul-fac'd reproach Attend the sequel of your imposition, Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me

From all the impure blots and stains thereof;

For God doth know, and you may partly sec.

How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your Grace! We see it. and will say it. Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth. Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title-Long live King Richard, England's worthy

King! All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd?

Glo. Even when you please, for you will have it so.

Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your Grace;

And so, most joyfully, we take our leave. Glo. [To the Bishops] Come, let us to our holy work again.

Farewell, my cousin; farewell. gentle friends. [Exeunt

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. London. Before the Tower.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUIS OF DORSET, at one door; ANNE DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER. leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET. Clarence's young daughter, at another

Duch. Who meets us here? My niece Plantagenet,

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?

Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,

On pure heart's love, to greet the tender Death and destruction dogs thee at thy Princes.

Daughter, well met.

God give your Graces both 3 A happy and a joyful time of day!

Whither away?

Anne. No tarther than the Tower; and. Go, hie thee, hie thee from this slaughteras I guess.

Upon the like devotion as yourselves, To gratulate the gentle Princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all together.

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And in good time, here the licutenant comes.

Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, How doth the Prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience,

I may not suffer you to visit them. The King hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The King! Who's that?

Brak. I mean the Lord Protector. Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title!

Hath he set bounds between their love and me?

I am their mother: who shall bar me from them?

see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother.

Then bring me to their sights: I'll bear thy

And take thy office from thee on my peril.

Biak. No, madam, no. I may not leave it so:

I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence.

And I'll salute your Grace of York as mother

And reverend looker-on of two fair queens. [To Anne] Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen. Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder

That my pent heart may have some scope to beat.

Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news! Anne. Despiteful tidings! O unpleasing

Dor. Be of good cheet; mother, how tares your Grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone!

heels, Thy mother's name is ominous to children. If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas.

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell.

house.

Lest thou increase the number of the dead. And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,

Nor mother, wite, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam.

Take all the swift advantage of the hours: You shall have letters from me to my son 50 In your behalf, to meet you on the way. Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery! O my accursed womb, the bed of death! A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world. Whose unavoided eye is murderous.

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will

O, would to God that the inclusive verge Of golden metal that must round my brow Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brains! Anomited let me be with deadly venom, 62 Duch. I am their father's mother; I will And die ere men can say 'God save the Queen I

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul; I envy not thy glory.

To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm. Anne. No, why? When he that is my husband now

Scene 11

Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse: When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands

Which issued from my other angel husband, And that dear saint which then I weeping follow'd-

O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face, This was my wish: 'Be thou' quoth I accurs'd

For making me, so young, so old a widow; And when thou wed'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed;

And be thy wife, if any be so mad, More miserable by the life of thee Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death Lo. ere I can repeat this curse again. Within so small a time, my woman's heart Grossly grew captive to his honey words 30 And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's

Which hitherto hath held my eyes from rest;

For never yet one hour in his bed

Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep, But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.

Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick: And will, no doubt, shortly be 1id of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adjeu! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of glory!

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it!

Duch. [To Dorset] Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!

[To Anne] Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!

[To Queen Elizabeth] Go thou to sanctuary. and good thoughts possess thee! I to my grave, where peace and test lie with me! Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen, And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen.

Eliz. Stay, yet look back with me unto the Tower.

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes

Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls.

Rough cradle for such little pretty ones. Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow For tender princes, use my babies well. So foolish sorrows bids your stones farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene II. London. The palace.

Sound a sennet. Enter RICHARD, in pomp, as King; Buckingham, Catesby, Ratcliff, LOVEL, a Page, and Others.

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

K. Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham I

Buck. My gracious sovereign? K. Rich. Give me thy hand.

[Here he ascendeth the throne. Sound. Thus high, by thy advice

And thy assistance, is King Richard seated. But shall we wear these glories for a day; 5 Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play the touch,

To try if thou be current gold indeed.

Young Edward lives-think now what I would speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say I would be King. Buck. Why, so you are, my thricerenowned lord. K. Rich. Ha! am I King? 'Tis so; but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble Prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence: That Edward still should live-true noble Prince!

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull. Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead. And I would have it suddenly perform'd. What say'st thou now? Speak suddenly, be brief.

Buck. Your Grace may do your pleasure. K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice; thy kindness freezes.

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord,

Before I positively speak in this. I will resolve you herein presently. [Exit. Cate. [Aside to another] The King is angry; see, he gnaws his lip. K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools [Descends from the throne.

And unrespective boys; none are for me That look into me with considerate eyes. 30 High-reaching Buckingham grows circum-spect. Boy!

Page. My lord?

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold

Will tempt unto a close exploit of death? 35 Page. I know a discontented gentleman Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit.

Gold were as good as twenty orators,

And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything. K. Rich. What is his name? Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel. 40

K. Rich. I partly know the man. Go, call him hither, boy. [Exit Page. The deep-revolving witty Buckingham

No more shall be the neighbour to my The late request that you did sound me in. counsels.

Hath he so long held out with me, untir'd, And stops he now for breath? Well, be

Enter STANLEY.

How now, Lord Stanley! What's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord.

The Marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled To Richmond, in the parts where he abides. [Stands abart.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby. Rumoui it abroad

That Anne, my wife, is very gnevous sick; I will take order for her keeping close. Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman, Whom I will marry straight to Clarence' daughter-

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him. Look how thou dream'st! I say again, give out

That Anne, my queen, is sick and like to die. About it; for it stands me much upon 60 To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me. [Exit Catesby. I must be married to my brother's daughter, Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass. Murder her brothers, and then marry her! Uncertain way of gain! But I am in So far in blood that sin will pluck on sin. Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with TYRREL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Prove me, my gracious lord. 70 K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine? Tyr. Please you;

But I had rather kill two enemics.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it. Two deep enemies.

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,

Are they that I would have thee deal upon. Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower. Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them. K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music.

Hark, come hither, Tyrrel. Go, by this token. Rise, and lend thine ear. [Whispers.

There is no more but so: say it is done, And I will love thee and prefer thee for it. Tyr. I will dispatch it straight. TExit.

Re-enter Buckingham.

mind

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord. K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son :

well, look unto it. Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise, For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd: Th' earldom of Hereford and the movables Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it. Buck. What says your Highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me: Henry the Sixth

Did prophesy that Richmond should be King, When Richmond was a little peevish boy. A king !-- perhaps-

Buck. My lord-K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom-

K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was at Exeter.

The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle And call'd it Rugemount, at which name I started, Because a bard of Ireland told me once 110 I should not live long after I saw Richmond. Buck. My lord-

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your Grace in mind

Of what you promis'd me. K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock? Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike. Buck. Why let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that like a Jack thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation. I am not in the giving vein to-day. Buck. May it please you to resolve me in my suit. K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein.

[Exeunt all but Buckingham. Buck. And is it thus? Repays he my deep service

With such contempt? Made I him King for this?

O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my To Brecknock while my fearful head is on!

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

Scene III. London. The palace. Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done. The most arch deed of piteous massacre That ever yet this land was guilty of. Dighton and Forrest, who I did suborn To do this piece of ruthful butchery, Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody

Melted with tenderness and mild compassion, Wept like two children in their deaths' sad story. 'O, thus' quoth Dighton 'lay the gentle babes'-'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest 'girdling one another

Within their alabaster innocent arms. Their lips were four red roses on a stalk. And in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.

A book of prayers on their pillow lay; quoth Forrest 'almost Which once,' chang'd my mind;

But, O, the devil '-there the villain stopp'd: thus told When Dighton on:

smothered The most replenished sweet work of nature That from the prime creation e'er she framed'. Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse

They could not speak · and so I left them both, To bear this tidings to the bloody King.

Enter KING RICHARD.

And here he comes. All health, my sovereign lord! K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy news? Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Beget your happiness, be happy then, For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead? Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel? Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower i ath buried them;

But where, to say the truth, I do not know. K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon at after supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their death.

Meantime, but think how I may do thee good

And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till then.

I humbly take my leave. [Exit. Tyr.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close: His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage; The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom, And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night. Now, for I know the Britaine Richmond aıms

At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter. And by that knot looks proudly on the crown,

To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly?

Rat. Bad news, my lord: Morton is fled to Richmond:

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen.

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth. K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength.

Come, I have learn'd that fearful commenting

Is leaden servitor to dull delay; Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary.

Then fiery expedition be my wing, Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king! 55 Go, muster men. My counsel is my shield. We must be brief when traitors brave the field.

Scene IV. London. Before the palace.

Enter old OUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So now prosperity begins to mellow And drop into the rotten mouth of death.

Here in these confines slily have I lurk'd To watch the waning of mine enemies. A dire induction am I witness to, And will to France, hoping the consequence Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical. Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret. Who comes here? [Retires.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS of York.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender babes! My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets! If yet your gentle souls fly in the air And be not fix'd in doom perpetual, Hover about me with your airy wings And hear your mother's lamentation. Q. Mar. Hover about her; say that right for right

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?
Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet.
20

Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?

When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done?

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.

25

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedrous days, Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth, [Sitting down.

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood. 30

Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat!
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them
here.

Ah, who hath any cause to mourn but we? [Sutting down by her.

Q. Mar. [Coming forward] If ancient sorrow be most reveiend,
Give mine the benefit of seniory.

And let my griefs from on the upper hand.

If sorrow can admit society,

[Sitting down with them.
Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine.

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine. I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him: Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him;

I had a Rutland too, thou holp'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death. That dog, that had his teeth before his eves To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood. That foul defacer of God's handiwork, I that excellent grand tyrant of the earth That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls, Thy womb let loose to chase us to our grayes.

O upright, just, and true-disposing God, How do I thank thee that this carnal cur Preys on the issue of his mother's body 57 And makes her pew-fellow with others'

Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes!

God witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge,

And now I cloy me with beholding it.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;

The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;

Young York he is but boot, because both they Match'd not the high perfection of my loss. Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward;

And the beholders of this frantic play, Th' adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,

Grey, Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves. Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer; Only reserv'd their factor to buy souls

Only reserv'd their factor to buy souls
And send them thither. But at hand, at hand.

Ensues his piteous and unpitied end. Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray, 75

To have him suddenly convey'd from hence.
Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,

That I may live and say 'The dog is dead'.

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come

That I should wish for thee to help me
curse 80

That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad!

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune;

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen,

The presentation of but what I was,

The flattering index of a direful pageant, 85 One heav'd a-high to be hurl'd down below,

A mother only mock'd with two fair babes, A dream of what thou wast, a garish flag To be the aim of every dangerous shot,

A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble, A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

Where is thy husband now? Where be thy brothers?
Where be thy two sons? Wherein dost thou joy?

Who sues, and kneels, and says 'God save the Queen'? Where be the bending peers that flattered

thee?
Where be the thronging troops that followed thee?

Decline all this, and see what now thou art: For happy wife, a most distressed widow;

Scene 4]

For joyful mother, one that wails the name; For one being su'd to, one that humbly sues:

For Queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care; For she that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me:

For she being fear'd of all, now fearing one; For she commanding all, obey'd of none. Thus hath the course of justice whir'd about

And left thee but a very prey to time, Having no more but thought of what thou

To torture thee the more, being what thou

Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not

Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?

Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke,

From which even here I slip my weary head

And leave the burden of it all on thee.
Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad
mischance:

These English woes shall make me smile in France.

Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay awhile

And teach me how to curse mine enemies!

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the nights, and fast the days;

Compare dead happiness with living woe; Think that thy babes were sweeter than they were,

And he that slew them fouler than he is.
Bett'ring thy loss makes the bad-causer worse:

Revolving this will teach thee how to curse. Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O, quicken them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp and pierce like mine. [Ext.]. Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,

Airy succeeders of intestate joys,

Poor breathing orators of miseries,

Let them have scope; though what they will impart
Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied. Go with me,

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother

My damned son that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

The trumpet sounds; be copious in exclaims.

Enter King Richard and his Train, marching with drums and trumpets.

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

K. Ruh. Who intercepts me in my expedition?

Duch. O, she that might have intercepted thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb, From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done!

Q. Eliz. Hidest thou that forehead with a golden crown rio.

Where should be branded, if that right were right,

The slaughter of the Prince that ow'd that crown,

And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers?

Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children?

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?
Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers,

Vaughan, Grey?
Duch. Where is kind Hastings?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! Strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women

Rail on the Lord's anointed. Strike, I say!
[Flourish. Alarums.
Either be patient and entreat me fair.

Or with the clamorous report of war Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, and yourself. 155 Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition

That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak!
K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear.
Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for thee,

God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well 165 Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burden was thy birth to me;

A grievous burden was thy birth to me; Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;

Thy school-days frightful, desp'rate, wild, and furious;

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and venturous;
Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody, More mild, but yet more harmful-kind in hatred.

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

What comfortable hour canst thou name That ever grac'd me with thy company?

K. Rich. Faith, none but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your Grace 175 To breakfast once forth of my company.

If I be so disgracious in your eye,

Let me march on and not offend you,

Strike up the drum.

Duch. I prithee hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word: 180

Duch. Hear me a word; refer I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordinance

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror; Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish

And never more behold thy face again. Therefore take with thee my most grievous curse,

Which in the day of battle tire thee more Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight; 190 And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies And promise them success and victory. Bloody thou art; bloody will be thy end. Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend. [Exit. Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me; I say amen to her.

K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must talk a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no moe sons of the royal blood

For thee to slaughter. For my daughters, Richard, 200

They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;

And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd
Elizabeth,

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live,

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty,

Slander myself as false to Edward's bed, Throw over her the veil of infamy; So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,

I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is a royal Princess.

Q. Eliz. To save her life I'll say she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their birth good stars were opposite.

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny.

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death, If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.

Whose hand soever lanc'd their tender hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction. 225 No doubt the murd'rous knife was dull and blunt

Not my deserts, but what I will deserve. 415 And meet me suddenly at Salisbury. Urge the necessity and state or times, And be not peevish-tond in great designs.

O. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus?

K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt you to do good.

O. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself?

K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself.

Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children. K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them;

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your hege,

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.

Thou wilt revolt and fly to him, I fear. Stan. No, my good lord; therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power then, to beat him back?

Where be thy tenants and thy followers? Are they not now upon the western shore, Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships? Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north. K. Rich. Cold friends to me. What do they in the north, When they should serve their sovereign in the west? Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty King.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.

This is the day which in King Edward's time I wish'd might fall on me when I was found False to his children and his wife's allies; This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall 10 By the talse faith of him whom most I trusted:

This, this All-Soul 'day to my fearful soul Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs; That high All-Seer which I deflied with to Hath turn'd my leigned player on my head And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest. Thus doth He force the swords of wicked Scene III. Bosworth Field.

Enter KING RICHARD in arms, with Nor-FOLK, RATCLIFF, the EARL OF SURREY, and Others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.

My Lord of Suriey, why look you so sad? Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk!

No. Here, most gracious liege. K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; ha! must we not? Nor. We must both give and take, my loving loid.

K. Ruh. Up with my tent! Here will I he to-night;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent. But where to-morrow? Well, all's one for that.

Wuo hath descried the number of the traitors?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trables that account;

Besides, the King's name is a tower of strength,

Which they upon the adverse faction want. Up with the tent! Come, noble gentlemen.

Let us survey the vantage of the ground. 15 Call for some men of sound direction. Let's lack no discipline, make no delay;

[Exeunt.

Enter, on the other side of the Field, RICH-MOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, PORSET, and Others. Some pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,

And by the bight tract of his fiery car concerns token of a goodly day to-morrow. Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.

Give me some ink and paper in my tent. I'll draw the form and model of our battle, Limit each leader to his several charge, s And part in just proportion our small Richm. Good night, good Captain Blunt.

Come, gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business. In to my tent; the dew is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.

Enter, to his tent, KING RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper-time, my lord; It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.

Give me some ink and paper. What, is my beaver easier than it was? And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge;

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

55

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Ext. K. Rich. Catesby!

Cale. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant-at-arms To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power 60

Before suntising, lest his son George fall Into the blind cave of eternal night.

[Exit Catesby. Fill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch. Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow. Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy
Lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey and himself, Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop 70

Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So. I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine.

I have not that alacrity of spirit Nor cheer of mind that I was wont to have. Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.

Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent.

And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.
[Exit Ratcliff. Richard sleeps.

Enter DERBY to RICHMOND in his tent; LORDS attending.

Der. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford 80

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law! Tell me, how fares our loving mother? Der. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother, Who prays continually for Richmond's good.

So much for that. The silent hours steal on, And flaky darkness breaks within the east. In brief, for so the season bids us be,

Prepare thy battle early in the morning, And put thy fortune to the arbitrement 89 Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war. I, as I may—that which I would I cannot— With best advantage will deceive the time And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms; But on thy side I may not be too forward, Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender

George, 95
Be executed in his father's sight.
Farewell; the leisure and the fearful time
Cuts off the ceremonious yows of love

And ample interchange of sweet discourse Which so-long-sund'red friends should dwell upon.

God give us leisure for these rites of love!
Once more, adicu; be valiant, and speed
well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment.

I'll strive with troubled thoughts to take a nap,

Lest leaden slumber peise me down tomorrow 105

When I should mount with wings of victory.
Once more, good night, kind lords and gentlemen.

[Exeunt all but Richmond.
O Thou, whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye;
Put in their hands Thy bruising irons of wrath,

That they may crush down with a heavy fall

The usurping helmets of our adversaries! Make us Thy ministers of chastisement, That we may praise Thee in the victory! To Thee I do commend my watchful soul Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes. Sleeping and waking, O, defend me still! [Sleeps.

Enter the Ghost of young PRINCE EDWARD, son to Henry the Sixth.

Ghost. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!

Think how thou stabh'dst me in my prime of youth

At Tewksbury; despair, therefore, and die! [To Richmond] Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls

Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf.
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts
thee.

Enter the Ghost of HENRY THE SIXTH.

Ghost. [To Richard] When I was mortal, my anointed body

By thee was punched full of deadly holes. Think on the Tower and me. Despair, and die.

Harry the Sixth bids thee despair and die. [To Richmond] Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be King,

Doth comfort thee in thy sleep. Live and flourish! 1230

Enter the Ghost of CLARENCE.

Ghost. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy in thy soul to-morrow! that was wash'd to death with fulsome

I that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,

Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!

To-morrow in the battle think on me, And fall thy edgeless sword. Despair and die!

[To Richmond] Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee. Good angels guard thy battle! Live and flourish!

Enter the Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN.

Riv. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy in thy soul to-morrow,

Rivers that died at Pomfret! Despair and die!

Grey. [To Richard] Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair!

Vaugh. [To Richard] Think upor Vaughan, and with guilty fear

Let fall thy lance. Despair and die!

All. [To Richmond] Awake, and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom

144

The usurping helmets of our adversaries! Will conquer him. Awake and win the day.

Enter the Ghost of Hastings.

Ghost. [To Richard] Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake,

And in a bloody battle end thy days!
Think on Lord Hastings. Despair and die.
[To Richmond] Quiet untroubled soul,
awake, awake!

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake! 150

Enter the Ghosts of the two young Princes.

Ghosts. [To Richard] Dream on thy cousins smothered in the Tower.

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard, And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!

Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair and die.

[To Richmond] Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;

155

Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!

Live, and beget a happy race of kings! Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

Enter the Ghost of LADY ANNE, his wife.

Ghost. [To Richard] Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife

That never slept a quiet hour with thee 160 Now fills thy sleep with perturbations. To-morrow in the battle think on me,

And fall thy edgeless sword. Despair and die.

[To Richmond] Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

Dream of success and happy victory. 165 Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghost of BUCKINGHAM.

Ghost. [To Richard] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

The last was I that felt thy tyranny. O, in the battle think on Buckingham, And die in terror of thy guiltiness! Dream on, dream on of bloody deeds and Your friends are up and buckle on their death;

Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath!

[To Richmond] I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid;

But cheer thy heart and be thou not dismay'd:

God and good angels fight on Richmond's side;

And Richard falls in neight of all his pinle. [The Ghosts varish. Richard starts out of his dream.

Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I. Is there a murderer here? No-yes, I am. What, from myself? reason why-

Lest I revenge. What, myself upon myself! Alack, I love myself. Wherefore ? For any

That I myself have done unto myself? O, no! Alas, I rather hate myself For hateful deeds committed by myself! I am a villain; yet I he, I am not. Fool, of thyself speak well. Fool, do not Methought then souls whose bodies Richard flatter.

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues, 193

And every tongue brings in a several tale, And every tale condemns me for a villain. Perjuly, perjury, in the high'st degree; Murder, stern murder, in the dir'st degree; All several sins, all us'd in each degree, Thiong to the bar, crying all 'Guilty! guilty!

I shall despair. There is no creature loves

And if I die no soul will pity me: And wherefore should they, since that I myself

Find in myself no pity to myself? Methought the souls of all that I had Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our murder'd

Came to my tent, and every one did threat Io-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord! K. Rich. Zounds, who is there? Rat. Ratchil, my loru; 'tis I. The early village-cock 170 Hath twice done saturation to the morn: dilliour.

K. Rich. O Raicust, I have dream'd a fearful di som l What think'st shou-will our friends prove all true :

Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. O Ratchil, I fear, I fear. Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.

K. Rich. By tre apostle Paul, shadows te-night

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard

Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers

Armed in proof and led by shallow Richmond. 'Tis not yet near day. Come, go with me;

Under our tents I'll play the caves-dropper, To see if any mean to shimk from me. Exeunt.

Enier the Lords to RICHMOND sitting in his tent.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond! Richm. Cry mercy, lords and watchful gentlemen,

That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here. Lords. How have you slept, my lord? Richm. The sweetest sleep and fairestboding dreams

That ever ent'red in a drowsy head Have I since your departure had, my lords. murder'd

Came to my tent and cried on victory. I promise you my soul is very jocund In the remembrance of so fan a dream. How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four. Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His Oration to his Soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen, The leisure and enforcement of the time Forbids to dwell upon; yet remember this: God and our good cause fight upon our side; The prayers of holy samts and wronged souls, taces;

Richard except, those whom we fight against

Had rather have us win than him they follow.

For what is he they follow? Truly, gentle-

A bloody tyrant and a homicide;

One rais'd in blood, and one m blood Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me establish'd:

One that made means to come by what he hath.

And slaughtered those that were the means? to help nim:

A base foul stone, made precious by the koil

Of England's chair, where he is falsely set: One that hath ever been God's enemy. Then if you fight against God's enemy. God will in justice ward you as his soldiers; If you do sweat to put a tyrant down, 255 You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slair . If you do fight against your country's foes Your country's fat shall pay your pains all hire:

If you do fight in safeguard of your wries, Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;

If you do free your children from the sword, Your children's children quits it in your

Then, in the name of God and all these rights.

Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt 265 Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face:

But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt The least of you shall share his part thereof. Sound drums and trumpets boldly and cheerfully;

God and Saint George! Richmond and victory! En unt.

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF. Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond? Rat. That he was never trained up in K. Rich. He said the truth; and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smil'd, and said 'The better for our purpose'.

K. Rich. He was in the right; and so [Clock strikes. indeed it is. Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar. Who saw the sun to-day?

Not I, my lord. K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for by the book

He should have brav'd the east an hour

A black day will it be to somebody. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day; The sky doth frown and lour upon our armv.

I would these dewy tears were from the

More than to Richmond? For the selfsame heaven

That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.

Enter Norfoli.

Not. A in. arm, my laid; the fae vaunes un the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; caparison my horse:

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power.

I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain, And thus my battle shall be ordered: My toreward shall be urawn out all in length. Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the midst. 205 John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey.

Shall have the leading of this foot and horse. They thus directed, we will follow

In the main battle, whose puissance on either side Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.

This, and Saint George to boot! think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign. This found I on my tent this morning. [He sheweth him a paper.

K. Rich. [Reads] Jockey to Norfolk, be not so bold.

For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.' A thing devised by the enemy.

Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge. Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls:

Conscience is but a word that cowards use, Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe. Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to it pell-mell; If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

His Oration to his Army.

What sha'l I say more than I have inferr'd? Remember whom you are to cope withal-A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and runaways, A scum of Britaines, and base lackey peasants. 317

Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth desperate adventures and assur'd To destruction.

You sleeping safe, they bring to you unrest; You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous wives.

They would restrain the one, distain the other. And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow. Long kept in Britaine at our mother's cost?

745

KING RICHARD THE THIRD

A milk-sop, one that never in his life Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow? Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;

Lash hence these over-weening rags of France.

These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives:

Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit, For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves.

If we be conquered, let men conquer us, And not these bastard Britaines, whom our fathers

Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd, And, in record, left them the heirs of shame. Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives. 336 Ravish our daughters? [Drum afar off] Hark! I hear their drum.

Fight, gentlemen of England! Fight, bold veomen!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!

Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood:

Amaze the welkin with your broken staves! Enter a Messenger.

What says Lord Stanley? Will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come. K. Rich. Off with his son George's head! Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh.

After the battle let George Stanley die. K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom.

Advance our standards, set upon our foes; Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George.

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons! Upon them! Victory sits on our helms. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Another part of the field.

Alarum; excursions. Enter Norfolk and Forces; to him CATESBY.

Cate. Rescue. my Lord of Norfolk, rescue. rescue!

The King enacts more wonders than a man, Daring an opposite to every danger. His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights, Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death. Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost.

Alarums. Enter King Richard.

for a horse!

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast

And I will stand the hazard of the die. 10 I think there be six Richmonds in the field: Five have I slain to-day instead of him. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse! [Exeunt.

Scene V. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter RICHARD and RICHMOND: they fight; Richard is slain. Retreat and Enter RICHMOND, DERBY Flourish. bearing the crown, with other Lords.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd. victorious friends;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead. Der. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee!

Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty From the dead temples of this bloody wretch

Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal.

Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it. Richm. Great God of heaven, say Amen to all!

But, tell me is young George Stanley living. Der. He is, my loid, and safe in Leicester town.

Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferrers, Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William

Brandon. Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births. Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled That in submission will return to us.

And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament, We will unite the white rose and the red. Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction. 20 That long have frown'd upon their enmity! What traitor hears me, and says not amen? England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself:

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood.

The father rashly slaughter'd his own son, 25 The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire:

All this divided York and Lancaster. Divided in their dire division. O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true succeeders of each royal house, 30 By God's fair ordinance conjoin together! And let their heirs, God, if thy will be so, K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd peace, Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord, That would with treason wound this fair That would reduce these bloody days again land's peace!

And make poor England weep in streams Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again—increase

Let them not live to taste this land's That she may long live here, God say amen! (Exeunt.

THE PROLOGUE

CROMWELL, servant to Wolsev.

I come no more to make you laugh: things

That bear a weighty and a serious brow. Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe. Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow, We now present. Those that can pity here 5 May, if they think it well, let tall a tear: The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe May here find truth too. Those that come to see

Only a show or two, and so agree The play may pass, if they be still and willing,

I'll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they That come to hear a merry bawdy play, A noise of targets, or to see a fellow In a long motley coat guarded with yellow, Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know, To rank our chosen truth with such a show As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring To make that only true we now intend, Will leave us never an understanding friend. Therefore, for goodness sake, and as you I was then present, saw them salute on are known

Be sad, as we would make ye. Think ye see

The very persons of our noble story As they were living; think you see them great.

And follow'd with the general throng and sweat

Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see

How soon this mightiness meets misery, 30 And if you can be merry then, I'll say A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT ONE

Scene I. London. The palace.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK at one door: at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERGAVENNY.

Buck, Good morrow, and well met. How have ye done

Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your Grace. Healthful: and ever since a fresh admirer Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague 4 Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber when Those suns of glory, those two lights of men, Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Ardehorseback;

The first and happiest hearers of the town, Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung

748

In their embracement, as they grew together:

Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one?

All the whole time Buck. I was my chamber's prisoner.

Then you lost Nor. The view of earthly glory; men might say, Till this time pomp was single, but now married

To one above itself. Each following day Became the next day's master, till the last Made former wonders its. To-day the French,

All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen gods, Shone down the English; and to-morrow thev

Made Britain India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were

As cherubins, all gilt; the madams too, Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear The pride upon them, that their very labour Was to them as a painting. Now this masque

Was cried incomparable; and th' ensuing night

Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings, Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst, As presence did present them: him in eye Still him in praise; and being present both, 'Twas said they saw but one, and no discerner

Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns-

For so they phrase 'em-by their heralds challeng'd

The noble spirits to arms, they did perform Beyond thought's compass, that former fabulous story,

Being now seen possible enough, got credit, That Bevis was believ'd.

O, you go far! Buck. Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect In honour honesty, the tract of ev'rything Would by a good discourser lose some life Which action's self was tongue to. All was roval:

To the disposing of it nought rebell'd; Order gave each thing view. The office did Distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide— 45 I mean, who set the body and the limbs Of this great sport together, as you guess? One, certes, that promises no element

In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord? Nor. All this was ord'red by the good discretion

Of the right reverend Cardinal of York. Buck. The devil speed him! No man's pie is freed

From his ambitious finger. What had ne To do in these fierce vanities? I wonde. That such a keech can with his very built 55 Take up the rays o' th' beneficial sun. And keep it from the earth.

Surely, s: Nov. There's in him stuff that puts him to these enus:

For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace

Chalks successors their way, not call'd upon For high feats done to the crown, neither allied

To eminent assistants, but spider-like. Out of his self-drawing web, 'a gives us note The force of his own merit makes his way-A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys

A place next to the King.

Aber. I cannot tell What heaven hath given him-let some graver eve

Pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him. Whence has he that ?

If not from hell, the devil is a niggard 70 Or has given all before, and he begins A new hell in himself.

Why the devil, Upon this French going out, took he upon hım-

Without the privity o' th' King-t' appoint

Who should attend on him? He makes up

Of all the gentry; for the most part such To whom as great a charge as little honour He meant to lay upon; and his own letter, The honourable board of council out, Must tetch him in he papers.

Aher. I do know 80 Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have By this so sicken'd their estates that never They shall abound as tormerly

Buck. O. many Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em

For this great journey. What did this vanity

But minister communication of

A most poor issue? Grievingly I think Nor.

The peace between the French and us not values

The cost that did conclude it.

Every man, 89 Buck. After the hideous storm that follow'd, was A thing inspir'd, and, not consulting, broke Into a general prophecy—that this tempest, Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded The sudden breach on't.

Which is budded out: Nor.

For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd

Our merchants' goods at Bordeaux. Is it therefore Aber.

Th' ambassador is silenc'd? Nor. Marry, 15't. Aber. A proper title of a peace, and purchas'd

At a superfluous race! Why, all this business Buck.

Our reverend Cardinal carried. Nor.

Like it your Grace, 100 The state takes notice of the private difference

Betwixt you and the Cardinal. I advise you-And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honour and plenteous safety-that you

The Cardinal's malice and his potency 105 Together; to consider further, that

What his high hatred would effect wants not

A minister in his power. You know his nature.

That he's revengeful; and I know his sword

Hath a sharp edge—it's long and't may be

It reaches far, and where 'twill not extend, Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock

That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, the purse borne before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's survevor? Ha! Where's his examination?

 Secr. Here, so please you. Wol. Is he in person ready?

1 Secr. Ay, please your Grace. Wol. Well, we shall then know more, and Buckingham Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt Wolsey and his Train. Buck. This butcher's cur is venommouth'd, and I

Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best

Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book

Outworths a noble's blood.

What, are you chaf'd? Nor. Ask God for temp'rance; that's th' appliance only

Which your disease requires.

Buck.

Matter against me, and his eye revil'd 126 Me as his abject object. At this instant He bores me with some trick. He's gone to th' King;

I'll follow, and outstare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord. And let your reason with your choler question 130

What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills

Requires slow pace at first. Anger is like A full hot horse, who being allow'd his way, Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England

Can advise me like you; be to yourself 135 As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the King, And from a mouth of honour quite cry down

This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim There's difference in no persons.

Be advis'd: Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot 140 That it do singe yourself. We may outrun By violent swiftness that which we run at, And lose by over-running. Know you not The fire that mounts the liquor till't run

In seeming to augment it wastes it? advis'd.

I say again there is no English soul More stronger to direct you than yourself. If with the sap of reason you would quench Or but allay the fire of passion.

Sir.

I am thankful to you, and I'll go along 150 By your prescription; but this top-proud fellow-

Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but From sincere motions, by intelligence, And proofs as clear as founts in July when We see each grain of gravel—I do know 155 To be corrupt and treasonous.

Say not treasonous. Nor. Buck. To th' King I'll say't, and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend: this holy fox, Or wolf, or both—for he is equal rav'nous As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief 160 As able to perform't, his mind and place Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally-Only to show his pomp as well in France As here at home, suggests the King our master

To this last costly treaty, th' interview 165 That swallowed so much treasure and like a glass

Did break i' th' wrenching.

Faith, and so it aid. Nor. Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir: this cunning cardinal

The articles o' th' combination drew es. As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified I read in's looks As he cried 'Thus let be' to as much end As give a crutch to th' dead. But our O my Lord Aberga'ny, fare you well! Count-Cardinal

Has done this, and 'tis well: for worthy Wolsey,

Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,

Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy 175 To th' old dam treason: Charles the Emperor,

Under pretence to see the Queen his auni-For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came To whisper Wolsey-here makes visitation-

His fears were that the interview betwixt England and France might through their amity

Breed him some prejudice; for from this league

Peep'd haims that menac'd him-privily Deals with our Cardinal; and, as I frow-Which I do well, for I am sure the Emperor Paid eie he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted

Ere it was ask'd—but when the way was made.

And pav'd with gold, the Emperor thus desir'd.

That he would please to alter the King's course,

And break the foresaid peace. Let the King kaow,

As soon he shall by me, that thus the Cardinal

Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases. And for his own advantage.

I am sorry To hear this of him, and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.

No, not a syllable: 195 Buck. I do pronounce him in that very shape He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon, a Sergeant-at-Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant: execute it My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I

Arrest thee of high treason, in the name Of our most sovereign King. Buck. Lo you, my lord, The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish

Under device and practice. I am sorry To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on 201 The business present; 'tis his Highness' pleasure

You shall to th' Tower.

It will help me nothing To plead mine innocence; for that dye is on me

Which makes my whit'st part black. The Never name to us: you have half our will of heav'n

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company.

[To Abergavenny] The King Is pleas'd you shall to th' Tower, till you know

How he determines further.

Aber. As the Duke said. The will of heaven be done, and the King's pleasure

By me obey'd.

Bran. Here is warrant from The King t' attach Lord Montacute and the bodies

Of the Duke's confessor, John de la Car, One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor-

Buck.

These are the limbs o' th' plot; no more, I hope.

Bran. A monk o' th' Chartreux. Buck. O. Nicholas Hopkins? Bran. He. Buck. My surveyor is false. The o'er-great Cardinal Hath show'd him gold; my life is spann'd already.

I am the shadow of poor Buckingham, 224 Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on By dark'ning my clear sun. My lord, [Exeunt. farewell.

Scene II. London. The Council Chamber.

Cornets. Enter King Henry, leaning on the CARDINAL's shoulder, the Nobles, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL, with Others. Cardinal places himself under the King's feet on his right side.

King. My life itself, and the best heart ot it,

Thanks you for this great care; I stood i' th' level

Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks

To you that chok'd it. Let be call'd before

That gentleman of Buckingham's. person

I'll hear him his confessions justify; And point by point the treasons of his master

He shall again relate.

A roise within, crying 'Room for the Queen!' Enter the QUEEN, usher'd by the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK; she kneels. The King riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

King. Arise, and take place by us. Half your suit power. Be done in this and all things! I obey. 210 The other moiety ere you ask is given;

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

Repeat your will, and take it.

Thank your Majesty. Q. Kath. That you would love yourself, and in that love

Not unconsidered leave your honour nor The dignity of your office, is the point 16 Of my petition.

Lady mine, proceed. King. Q. Kath I am solicited, not by a few. And those of true condition, that your subtects Are in great grievance: there have been commissions 20

Sent down among 'em which hath flaw'd the heart

Of all their loyalties; wherein, although, My good Lord Caidinal, they vent reproaches

21 Most bitterly on you as putter-on Of these exactions, yet the King our Whose honour Heaven shield from soil !even he escapes not

Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks

The sides of loyalty, and almost appears In loud rebellion.

Not almost appears-Nor. It doth appear; for, upon these tavations, The clothiers all, not able to maintain The many to them 'longing, have put off The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,

Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger And lack of other means, in desperate manner

Daring th' event to th' teeth, are all in uproar.

And danger serves among them.

Taxation! Wherein? and what taxation? My Lord Cardinal.

You that are blam'd for it alike with us, Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, I know but of a single part in aught Pertains to th' state, and front but in that file Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord! You know no more than others! But you frame Things that are known alike, which are not wholesome

To those which would not know them, and y, t must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions,

Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are

Most pestilent to th' hearing; and to bear The back is sacrifice to th' load. They say

They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer

Too hard an exclamation,

King. Still exaction! The nature of it? in what kind, let's know. Is this exaction ?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous In tempting of your patience, but am bold'ned

Under you, promis'd pardon. The subjects' guet

Comes through commissions, which compels from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam'd your wats in France. This makes bold mouths;

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze

Allegiance in them; their curses now I ive where their prayers did; and it's come to pass

This tractable obedience is a slave To each incensed will. I would your Highness

Would give it quick consideration, for There is no primer has ness.

King. By my life, This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me. I ha e no further gone in this than by A single voice; and that not pass'd me but By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Itaduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know

My faculties nor person, yet will be The chronicles of my doing, let me say 'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake

That virtue must go through. We must not stint

Our necessary actions in the tear To core malicious consurers, which ever As rav'nous fishes do a vessel follow That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best, By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up For our best act. If we shall stand still, 85 In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at.

We should take root here where we sit. or sit

State-statues only.

Things done well King. And with a care exempt themselves from Things done without example, in their issue Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent Of this commission? I believe, not any. We must not rend our subjects from our laws,

And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each ?

A trembling contribution! Why, we take: It would infect his speech—that if the King From every tree lop, bark, and part o' th' Should without issue die, be'll carry it so to make the scentre his. There yery words

And though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd.

The air will drink the sap. To every county Where this is question'd send our letters with Free pardon to each man that has denied The force of this commission. Pray, look to't:

I put it to your care.

Wol. [Aside to the Secretary] A word with you.

Let there be letters writ to every shire Of the King's grace and paidon. The grieved commons

Hardly conceive of me—let it be nois'd 105 That through our intercession this revokement

And pardon comes. I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham

Is run in your displeasure.

King. It grieves many. The gentleman is learn'd and a most rare speaker;

To nature none more bound; his training such

That he may furnish and instruct great teachers

And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see,

When these so noble beneats shall prove us. Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly

Than ever they were fair. This man so complete.

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,

Almost with ravish'd list'ning, could not find

His hour of speech a minute—he, my lady, Hath into monstrous habits put the graces That once were his, and is become as black As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear—

This was his gentleman in trust—of him 127. Things to stuke honour sad. Bid him recount

The fore-recited practices, whereof We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you,

Most like a careful subject, have collected Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

King. Speak freely ... Surv. First, it was usual with him—every

It would infect his speech—that if the King Should without issue die, he'll carry it so To make the sceptre his. There very words I've heard him utter to his son-in-law, 12th Lord Aberga'ny, to whom by oath he menac'd Revenge upon the Cardinal.

Wol. Please your Highness, note This dangerous conception in this point: Not friended by his wish, to your high person 140

His will is most malignant, and it stretches Beyond you to your friends.

Q. Kaih. My learn'd Lord Cardinal, Deliver all with charity.

King. Speak on. How grounded he his title to the crown

Upon our fail? To this point hast thou heard him

At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was

Surv. He was brought to this By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Herton. King. What was that Henton?

Sin v. Sir, a Chartreux triar, His contessor, who fed him every minute

With words of sovereignty.

King. How know'st thou this?

Sur. Not long betore your Highness sped to France, 151 The Duke being at the Rose, within the parish

Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me

What was the speech among the Londoners Concerning the French journey. I replied Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious.

To the King's danger. Presently the Duke Said 'twas the fear indeed and that he doubted

'Twould prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk 'that oft' says he 'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit ror John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour

To hear from him a matter of some moment; Whom after under the confession's seal. He solemnly had sworn that what he spoke My chaplain to no creature living but 116 To me should utter, with denure confidence This pausingly ensu'd: "Neither the King nor's heirs.

Tell you the Duke, shall prosper; bid him strive

To gain the love o' th' commonalty; the Dike

Shall govern England "'.

Q. Kath.

If I know you well,
You were the Duke's surveyor, and lost your office

On the complaint o' th' tenants. Take good
-heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble person

And spoil your nobler soul. I say, take Call him to present trial. If he may heed;

The find mercy in the law, 'tis his: 'Find mercy in the law, 'tis his: 'Find mercy in the law,' the his is the may heed;

Yes, heartily beseech you.

King. Let him on. Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth:
I told my lord the Duke, by th' devil'
illusions

The monk might be deceiv'd, and that 'twas dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until

It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,

It was much like to do. He answer'd 'Tush,

It can do me no damage': adding further That, had the King in his last sicknes fail'd,

The Cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads

Should have gone off.

King. Ha! what, so rank? Ah ha! There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

King. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich, After your Highness had reprov'd the Duke About Sir William Bulmer—

King. I remember 190
Of such a time: being my sworn servant
The Duke retain'd him his. But on: what hence?

Surv. 'If' quoth he 'I for this had been committed—

As to the Tower I thought—I would have play'd

The part my father meant to act upon 195 Th' usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury,

Made suit to come in's presence, which if granted,

As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him.'

King. A giant traitor!

Wol. Now, madam, may his Highness live in freedom,

And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!

King. There's something more would out of thee: what say'st?

Surv. After 'the Duke his father' with the 'knife',

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,

Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,

He did discharge a horrible oath, whose tenour

Was, were he evil us'd, he would outgo His father by as much as a performance Does an irresolute purpose.

King. There's his period, To sheath his knife in us. He is attach'd;

Call him to present trial. If he may are find mercy in the law, 'tis his: 'none, Let him not seek't of us. By day and night! He's traitor to th' height.

Scene III. London. The pulace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and Lord Sandys.

Cham. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries?

Sandys. New customs, Though they be never so ridiculous,

Nay, let 'em be unmanly, vet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our

English

Have got by the late voyage is but merely A fit or two o' th' tace; but they are shrewd ones;

For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly

Their very noses had been counsellors 9
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.
Sandys. They have all new legs, and lame ones. One would take it.

That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.

Cham. Death! my lord, Their clothes are after such a pagan cut to't, That sure th' have worn out Christendom.

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

How now? 15

What news, Sir Tnomas Lovell?

Lov. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none but the new proclamation

That's clapp'd upon the court gate.

Cham. What is't for?

Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants, That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors. 20 Cham. I am glad 'tis there. Now I would pray our monsieurs

To think an English courtier may be wise,

And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either,

For so run the conditions, leave those remnants

Of fool and feather that they got in France, With all their honourable points of ignorance

Pertaining thereunto—as fights and fireworks;

Abusing better men than they can be, Out of a foreign wisdom—ienouncing clean The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings,

Short blist'red breeches, and those types of travel,

And understand again like honest men, Or pack to their old playfellows. There, I take it, They may, cum privilegio, wear away The lag end of their lewdness and be laugh'd at.

'Tis time to give 'em physic, Sandys. their diseases

Are grown so catching.

What a loss our ladies Cham. Will have of these trim vanities!

T.OV. Av. marry. There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whoresons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies.

A French song and a fiddle has no fellow. Sandys. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they are going,

For sure there's no converting of 'em. Now An honest country lord, as I am, beaten A long time out of play, may bring his plainsong

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r Lady.

Held current music too.

Well said, Lord Sandys; Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

No, my lord, Sandvs.Nor shall not while I have a stump.

Sir Thomas, Whither were you a-going?

To the Cardinal's: 50 Your lordship is a guest too.

O, 'tis true; This night he makes a supper, and a great

To many lords and ladies: there will be The beauty of this kingdom. I'll assure you. Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed.

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us; His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble: He had a black mouth that said other of him. Sandys. He may, my lord; has where- Place you that side; I'll take the charge of withal. In him

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:

Men of his way should be most liberal, They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so; But few now give so great ones. My barge stays; Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir

Thomas, We shall be late else; which I would not be, For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford, This night to be comptrollers.

Sandys. I am your lordship's. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. The Presence Chamber in York Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests.

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

Then enter ANNE BULLEN, and divers other Ladies and Gentlemen, as guests, at one door; at another door enter SIR HENRY GUILDFORD.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his Grace

Salutes ve all; this night he dedicates To fair content and you. None here, he

In all this noble bevy, has brought with her One care abroad; he would have all as merry As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome,

Can make good people.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, LORD SANDYS, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

O. my lord, v'are tardy, The very thought of this fair company

Clapp'd wings to me. Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guild-ford. Sandys. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the Cardinal But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested

I think would better please 'em. By my life, They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O that your lordship were but now confessor To one or two of these!

Sandvs. I would I were:

They should find easy penance.

Faith, how easy? Lov. Sandys. As easy as a down bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry this. His Grace is ent'ring. Nay, you must not freeze: Two women plac'd together makes cold weather. My Lord Sandys, you are one will keep 'em waking:

Pray sit between these ladies.

Sandvs. By my faith.

And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies. [Seats himself between Anne Bullen and another lady.

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me; I had it from my father.

Was he mad, sir? Anne. Sandys. O, very mad, exceeding mad. in love too.

But he would bite none: just as I do now, He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her. Cham. Well said, my lord.

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

So, now y'are fairly seated. Gentlemen, 31 The penance hes on you if these fair ladies Pass away frowning.

Sandys. For my little cure. Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended: and takes his state.

Wol. Y'are welcome, my fair guests. That noble lady

Or gentleman that is not freely merry This, to confirm my Is not my friend. welcome-

And to you all, good health! [Drinks. Your Grace is noble. Sandys. Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Loid Sandys. 10 I am beholding to you. Cheer your neighbours.

Ladies, you are not merry. Gentlemen, Whose fault is this?

The red wine first must ris Sandys. In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'ein Talk us to stlence. You are a merry gamester,

My Lord Sandys. Yes, if I make my play. Sandys. Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madain. For 'tis to such a thing-

You cannot show me. Sandys. I told your Grace they would talk anon. [Drum and trumpet. Chambers discharg'd. What's that? Wol. Cham. Look out there, some of ve.

[Exit a Servant. What warlike voice.

And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear By all the laws of war y'are privileg'd.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now! what is't? Serv. A noble troop of strangers-For so they seem. Th' have left their barge and landed,

And hither make, as great ambassadors 55 By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here From foreign princes.

Good Lord Chamberlain, My royal choice. Wol. Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;

And pray receive 'em nobly and conduct You hold a fair assembly; you do well, 'em

Into our presence, where this heaven of You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend I should judge now unhappily.

60 [Exit Chamberlain attended. All rise, and tables remov'd.

You have now a broken banquet, but we'll mend it.

A good digestion to you all; and once more I show'r a welcome on ye: welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King, and Others, as maskers, habited like shepherds, usher'd by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

noble company! What are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English. thus they pray'd To tell your Grace, that, having heard by fame

Of this so noble and so fair assembly This night to meet here, they could do no less, Out of the great respect they bear to beauty. But leave their flocks and, under your fair conduct, Crave leave to view these ladies and entreat

An hour of revels with 'em. Wol. Say, Lord Chamberlain.

They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures. [They choose ladies. The King chooses Anne Bullen. King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd!

O beauty, Till now I never knew thee! [Music. Dance.

Wol. My lord! Your Grace? Chain.

Wol. Pray tell 'em thus much from me: There should be one amongst 'em, by his person.

More worthy this place than myself; to whom.

If I but knew him, with my love and duty I would surrender it. Cham. I will, my lord.

[He whispers to the Maskers. Wol. What say they? Cham. Such a one, they all confess,

There is indeed; which they would have your Grace

Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see, then. [Comes from his state.

I'll make

King. [Unmasking] Ye have found him. Cardinal.

lord.

Cardinal,

Wol.

I am glad Your Grace is grown so pleasant. King. My Lord Chamberlain, 90

Prithee come hither: what fair lady's that? Cham. An't please your Grace, Thomas Bullen's daughter-

Viscount Rochford-one of her The Highness' women.

King. By heaven, she is a dainty one. Sweet heart,

I were unmannerly to take you out And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen! Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready

I' th' privy chamber?

Yes, my lord. Lov.Your Grace. Wol. I fear, with dancing is a little heated. 100

King. I fear, too much. There's fresher air, my lord,

In the next chamber.

King. Lead in your ladies, ev'ry one.

Sweet partner, I must not vet forsake you. Let's be merry: Good my Loid Cardinal, I have half a dozen healths

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure To lead 'em once again; and then let's dream best in favour. Let the music Who's knock it. [Exeunt, with trumpets.

ACT TWO

Scene I. Westminster. A street.

Enter two Gentlemen, at several doors.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?

O. God save ye! 2 Gent. Ev'n to the Hall, to hear what shall become Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

I'll save you 1 Gent. That labour, sir. All's now done but the ceremony

Of bringing back the prisoner.

Were you there? 5 2 Gent.

1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

Pray, speak what has happen'd. 2 Gent. 1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

Is he found guilty? 2 Gent.

1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon't.

2 Gent. I am sorry for't.

So are a number more. 2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great Duke

Came to the bar; where to his accusations He pleaded still not guilty, and alleged Many sharp reasons to defeat the law. The King's attorney, on the contrary, Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions,

Of divers witnesses; which the Duke desir'd To have brought, viva voce, to his face; At which appear'd against him his surveyor, |

Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor, and John Car,

Confessor to him, with that devil-mont. Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent. That was he That fed him with his prophecies?

The same.

All these accus'd him strongly, which he Would have flung from him; but indeed he could not;

And so his peers, upon this evidence, Have found him guilty of high treason.

He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all

Was either pitied in him or forgotten. 2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?

1 Gent. When he was brought again to th' bar to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd

With such an agony he sweat extremely. And something spoke in choler, ill and hasty; But he fell to himself again, and sweetly 35 In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

2 Gent. I do not think he fears death. 1 Gent. Sure, he does not:

He never was so womanish: the cause He may a little grieve at.

2 Gent. Certainly The Cardinal is the end of this.

1 Gent. Tis likely, 40 By all conjectures: first, Kıldare's attainder. Then deputy of Ireland, who remov'd,

Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too.

Lest he should help his father. 2 Gent. That trick of state

Was a deep envious one.

1 Gent. At his return 45 No doubt he will requite it. This is noted. And generally: whoever the King favours The Cardinal instantly will find employment.

And far enough from court too.

2 Gent. All the commons Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience,

Wish him ten fathom deep: this Duke as much

They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham,

The mirror of all courtesy-

Enter Buckingham from his arraignment; Tip-staves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side; accompanied with SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX, SIR WILLIAM Sandys, and common people, etc.

1 Gent. Stay there, sir,

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of. 2 Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him. Buck. All good people,

You that thus far have come to pity me, 56 Hear what I say, and then go home and The greatness of his person. lose me.

I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment.

And by that name must die; yet, heaven bear witness.

And if I have a conscience, let it sink me 60 Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful! The law I bear no malice for my death: 'T has done, upon the premises, but justice. But those that sought it I could wish more Christians.

Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em; Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief Nor build their evils on the graves of great men.

For then my guiltless blood must cry against 'em.

For further life in this world I ne'er hope Nor will I sue, although the King have mercies 70

More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me

And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham, His noble friends and fellows, whom to

Is only bitter to him, only dying,

Go with me like good angels to my end; 75 And as the long divorce of steel falls on me Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice, Lead on, a And lift my soul to heaven.

God's name. Lov. I do beseech your Grace, for charity, If ever any malice in your heart Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly. Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you

As I would be forgiven. I forgive all. There cannot be those numberless offences 'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with. No black envy Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his Grace:

And if he speak of Buckingham, pray tell him

You met him half in heaven. My vows and Be sure you be not loose; for those you prayers

Yet are the King's, and, till my soul forsake.

Shall cry for blessings on him. May he live Longer than I have time to tell his years; Ever belov'd and loving may his rule be; And when old time shall lead him to his end, Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To th' water side I must conduct your Grace;

Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas

Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there: The Duke is coming; see the baige be ready:

And fit it with such furniture as suits

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas, 100 Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.

When I came hither I was Lord High Constable

And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun.

Yet I am nicher than my base accusers That never knew what truth meant; I now seal it;

And with that blood will make 'em one day groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham. Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard.

Flying for succour to his servant Banister. Being distress'd, was by that wietch betray'd

And without trial fell; God's peace be with him!

Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying

My father's loss, like a most royal prince. Restor'd me to my honours, and out of

Made my name once more noble. Now his son. Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and

That made me happy, at one stroke has taken For ever from the world. I had my trial.

And must needs say a noble one; which makes me A little happier than my wretched father:

Yet thus far we are one in fortunes: both

Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most-

A most unnatural and faithless service. Heaven has an end in all. Yet, you that hear me.

This from a dying man receive as certain: Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels, make friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away Like water from ye, never found again 30 But where they mean to sink ye. All good people,

Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last hour

Of my long weary life is come upon me. Farewell;

And when you would say something that

Speak how ! fell. I have done and God in the north. When they were ready to set forgive me: out for London, a man of my Lord Car-[Exeunt Buckingham and Train. 1 Gent. O, this is full of pity! Sir, it calls, I fear, too many curses on their heads. That were the authors.

2 Gent. If the Duke be guiltiess, 'Tis full of woe; yet I can give you inkling Of an ensuing evil, if it fall, 111 Greater than this.

1 Gent. Good angels keep it from us!
What may it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir?

2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require

A strong faith to conceal it.

1 Gent. Let me have it; 145

I do not talk much.

2 Gent.

I am confident.

You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear A buzzing of a separation Between the King and Katharine?

1 Gent. Yes, but it held not; For when the King once heard it, out of anger

He sent command to the Lord Mayor straight

To stop the rumour and allay those tongues That durst disperse it.

2 Gent. But that slander, sir, Is found a truth now; for it grows again Fresher than e'er it was, and held for certain

The King will venture at it. Either the

Or some about him near have, out of malice To the good Queen, possess'd him with a scruple

That will undo her. To confirm this too, Cardinal Campeius is aniv'd and lately; As all think, for this business.

1 Gent.

'Tis the Cardinal; And merely to revenge him on the Emperor For not bestowing on him at his asking. The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

2 Gent. I think you have hit the mark; but is't not cruel

That she should feel the smart of this? The Cardmal

Will have his will, and she must fall.

1 Gent. 'Tis woeful.

We are too open here to argue this; Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.

Scene II. London. The palace. Enter the Lord Chamberlain reading this letter.

Cham. 'My lord,

The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnish'd. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by commission, and main power, took 'em from me, with this leason: his master would be serv'd before a subject, it not before the King; which stopp'd our mouths, sir.'

I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them.

He will have all, I think.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlain the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain. 19

Cham. Good day to both your Graces.
Suf. How is the King employ'd?
Cham. I left him private,

Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause? Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife

Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience 13 Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Is so;
This is the Cardinal's doing; the King-Cardinal.

That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune.

Turns what he list. The King will know him one day.

Suf. Pray God he do! He'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holdy he works in all his business!

And with what zeal! For, now he has crack'd the league

Between us and the Emperor, the Queen's great nephew.

He dives into the King's soul and there scatters

Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, 25

Fears, and despairs—and all these for his marriage;

And out of all these to restore the King, He counsels a divorce, a loss of her

That like a jewel has hung twenty years About his neck, yet never lost her lustre; Of her that loves him with that excellence That angels love good men with; even of her

That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,

Will bless the King—and is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true 35
These news are everywhere; every tongue speaks 'em, And every true heart weeps for't. All that Look into these affairs see this main end-

81

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

The French King's sister. Heaven will one day open

The King's eyes, that so long have slept upon 40

This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray, and heartily, for our deliverance:

Or this imperious man will work us all From princes into pages. All men's honours

Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd

Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords, I love him not, nor fear him—there's my creed:

As I am made without him, so I'll stand, If the King please; his curses and his blessings 50

Touch me alike; th'are breath I not believe in.

I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him

To him that made him proud—the Pope.

Nor.

Let's in;

And with some other business put the King

From these sad thoughts that work too much upon him.

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me, 56
The King has sent me otherwhere; besides,
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him.
Health to your lordships!

Nor. Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain; and the King draws the curtain and sits reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks; sure, he is much afflicted. King. Who's there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.
K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves

Into my private meditations?

Who am I, ha?

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences 65

Malice ne'er meant. Our breach of duty this way

Is business of estate, in which we come
To know your royal pleasure.

King.
Ye are too bold.

King. Ye are too bold. Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business.

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha? 70 Enter Wolsey and CAMPEIUS with a commission.

Who's there? My good Lord Cardinal? O my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience, Thou art a cure fit for a King. [To Campeius] You're welcome, Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom.
Use us and it. [To Wolsey] My good loid, have great care

I be not found a talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot. 76
I would your Grace would give us but an hour

Of private conference.

King. [To Norfolk and Suffolk] We are busy; go.

Nor. [Aside to Suffolk] This priest has no pride in him!

Suf. [Aside to Norfolk] Not to speak of! I would not be so sick though for his place. But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to Suffolk] If it do, I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. [Aside to Norfolk] I another.

[Exeunt Norfolk and Suffolk. Wol. Your Grace has given a precedent of wisdom

Above all princes, in committing freely 84 Your scruple to the voice of Christendom, Who can be angry now? What envy reach you?

The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,

Must now confess, if they have any goodness,

The trial just and noble. All the clerks, I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms

Have their free voices. Rome the nurse of judgment.

Invited by your noble self, hath sent One general tongue unto us, this good man, This just and learned priest, Cardinal

Campeius,
Whom once more I present unto your Highness.

King. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome,

And thank the holy conclave for their loves. They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.

Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,

You are so noble. To your Highness' hand

You are so noble. To your Highness' hand I tender my commission; by whose virtue—

The court of Rome commanding—you, my Lord

Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant

In the unpartial judging of this business.

King. Two equal men. The Queen shall be acquainted

Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know your Majesty has always lov'd her

So dear in heart not to deny her that A woman of less place might ask by law— Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her. 120 and my favour

To him that does best. God forbid else. Cardinal,

Prithee call Gardiner to me, my new secretary: I find him a fit fellow. Exit Wolsev.

Re-enter WOLSEY with GARDINER.

Wol. [Aside to Gardiner] Give me your hand: much joy and favour to you; You are the King's now.

Gard. [Aside to Wolsey] But to be commanded

For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me.

King, Come hither, Gardiner.

[Walks and whispers. Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace

In this man's place before him?

Yes, he was, 120 Cam. Was he not held a learned man? Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then,

Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal.

How! Of me? Wol. Cam. They will not stick to say you envied

And, fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous. Kept him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him

That he ran mad and died.

Heav'n's peace be with him! Wol. That's Christian care enough. For living murmurers

There's places of rebuke. He was a fool. For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow.

If I command him, follows my appointment.

I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,

We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons. King. Deliver this with modesty to th' [Exit Gardiner.

The most convenient place that I can think of For such receipt of learning is Blackfriars;

There ye shall meet about this weighty business

My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O, my lord, Would it not grieve an able man to leave So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!

O, 'tis a tender place! and I must leave her. [Exeunt.

Scene III. London. The palace. Enter Anne Bullen and an old Lady.

pang that pinches:

King. Ay, and the best she shall have; Had a Garatta having liv'd so long with her, Liel she

So good a lady that no tongue could ever Pronounce dishonour of her-by my life. She never knew harm-doing-O, now, after So many courses of the sun enthroned. Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which

To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than 'Tis sweet at first t' acquire-after this process.

To give her the avaunt, it is a pity

Would move a monster. Old L. Hearts of most hard temper

Melt and lament for her. O, God's will! much better Anne. She ne'er had known pomp; though't be temporal, Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce 14 It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging

As soul and body's severing. Old L. Alas, poor lady!

She's a stranger now again.

So much the more Anne. Must pity-drop upon her. Verily,

I swear 'tis better to be lowly born And range with humble livers in content 20 Than to be perk'd up in a glist'ring grief

And wear a golden sorrow. Our contest Old L.

Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenhead. I would not be a queen. Old L. Beshrew me, I would,

And venture maidenhead for't; and so would you.

For all this spice of your hypocrisy. You that have so fair parts of woman on

Have too a woman's heart, which ever yet Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty; Which, to say sooth, are blessings; and which gifts,

Saving your mincing, the capacity Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth. Old L. Yes, troth and troth. You would not be a queen ! Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old L. 'Tis strange: a threepence bow'd would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you, What think you of a duchess? Have you iimbs

To bear that load of title?

No, in truth. Anne. Old L. Then you are weakly made. Pluck off a little :

I would not be a young count in your way Anne. Not for that neither. Here's the For more than blushing comes to. If your back Connot vouchsafe this builden, 'tis too weak' Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!

I swear again I would not be a queen For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England You'd venture an embelling. I myself Would for Carnarvonshire, although there long'd

No more to th' crown but that. Lo, who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham Good morrow, ladies. What were't worth to know

The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord, Not your demand; it values not your asking.

Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business and becoming

54

The action of good women; there is hope All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!
Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heav'nly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair

Perceive I speak sincerely and high note's Ta'en of your many virtues, the King's Majesry

Commends his good opinion of you to you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which

A thousand pound a year, annual support, Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know 65
What kind of my obedience I should tender:

More than my all is nothing, nor my players Are not words duly hallowed, nor my wishes More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,

As from a blushing handmaid, to his Highness;

Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady, I shall not fail t'approve the fair conceit The King hath of you. [Aside] I have perus'd her well:

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled 76

That they have caught the King: and who

That they have caught the King; and who knows yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem To lighten all this isle?—I'll to the King And say I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord! 80 [Exit Lord Chamberlain.

Old L. Why, this it is: see, see!

I have been begging sixteen years in court—
Am yet a courtier beggarly—nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here—fie, fie, fie upon %6
This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd up

Before you open it.

Anné. This is strange to me.
Old L. How tastes it? Is it bitter?
Forty pence, no.

89
There was a lady once—'tis an old story—

There was a lady once—'tis an old story— That would not be a queen, that would she not.

For all the mud in Egypt. Have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme I could O'ermount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembioke!

A thousand pounds a year for pure respect! No other obligation! By my life, That promises moe thousands: honour's train

Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time I know your back will bear a duchess. Sav, Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady, 100

Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,

And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,

If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me To think what follows.

The Queen is comfortless, and we forgetful In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver What here y' have heard to her.

Old L. What do you think me? [Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. A hall in Blackfriars.

Trumbets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors; after them, the Archbishop of Canter-BURY alone; after him, the BISHOPS OF LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman hearing the purse, with the great seal, and a Cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman Usher bareheaded, accompanied with a Sergeantat-Arms bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals, WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the KING and QUEEN and their Trains. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place some distance from the King. on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read.

Let silence be commanded.

King. What's the need? It hath already publicly been read, And on all sides th' authority allow'd;

You may then spare that time.

Wol. Be't so; proceed. 5 Scribe. Say 'Henry King of England, come into the court'.

Crier. Henry King of England, &c.

King. Here.

Scribe. Say 'Katharine Queen of England.

come into the court '.

Crier. Kathaune Oueen of England, &c. [The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and iustice.

And to bestow your pity on me; for I am a most poor woman and a stranger, 19 Born out of your dominions, having here No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance Of singular integrity and learning, Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas.

In what have I offended you? What cause Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure

That thus you should proceed to put me off

And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,

I have been to you a true and humble wife. At all times to vour will conformable,

Ever in fear to kindle your dislike, Yea, subject to your countenance—glad or sorry As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour I ever contradicted your desire

Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends Have I not strove to love, although I knew

He were mine enemy? What friend of mine

That had to him deriv'd your anger did I Continue in my liking? Nay, gave notice He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind

That I have been your wife in this obedi-

Upward of twenty years, and have been You are mine enemy, and make my blest

With many children by you. If, in the You shall not be my judge; for it is you

And process of this time, you can report,

The Bishops place themselves And prove it too against mine honoul, aught.

My bond to wedlock or my love and duty.

Against your sacred person, in God's name. Turn me away and let the foul'st contempt Shut door upon me, and so give me up To the sharp'st kind of justice. Piease you,

SIF, The King, your father, was reputed for 15 A prince most prudent, of an excellent

And unmatch'd wit and judgment. Ferdinand,

My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many

A year before. It is not to be question'd 50 That they had gather'd a wise council to them

Of every realm, that did dehate this business,

Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly

Beseech you, sir, to spare me till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel

I will implore. If not, i' th' name of God, Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

You have here, lady, Wol. And of your choice, these reverend fathers-

Yea, the elect o' th' land, who are assembled To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless

That longer you desire the court, as well For your own quiet as to rectify

What is unsettled in the King. Cam.

His Grace Hath spoken well and justly; therefore, madam.

It's fit this royal session do proceed And that, without delay, their arguments Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord Cardinal.

To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?

Sir, I am about to weep; but, thinking that 7. We are a queen, or long have dream'd so. certain

The daughter of a king, my drops of touts I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Be patient yet. Wol. Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble: nay, before,

Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induc'd by potent circumstances, that challenge

Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me-

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say again, 80

I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul Refuse you for my judge, whom yet once

I hold my most malicious foe and think not At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess 84
You speak not like yourself, who ever yet
Have stood to charity and display'd th' effects

Of disposition gentle and of wisdom O'ertopping woman's pow'r. Madam, you do me wrong:

I have no spleen against you, nor injustice
For you or any; how far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted or
By a commission from the Consistory, Yea, the whole Consistory of Rome. You charge me

That I have blown this coal: I do deny it.
The King is present; if it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how ma he wound,

And worthily, my falsehood! Yea, as much As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him It lies to cuie me, and the cure is to ror Remove these thoughts from you; the which before

His Highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking

And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, 12 am a simple woman, much too weak T' oppose your cunning. Y'are meek and humble-mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,

With meekness and humility; but your heart

Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride.

You have, by fortune and his Highness' favours, Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted Where pow'rs are your retainers, and your

words,

Domestics to you, serve your will as't please

Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you
You tender more your person's honour

You tender more your person's honour than

Your high profession spiritual; that again I do refuse you for my judge and here, Before you all, appeal unto the Pope, 179 To bring my whole cause 'fore his Holiness And to be judg'd by him. IShe curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.

Cam. The Queen is obstinate, Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't; 'tis not well. She's going away.

King. Call her again. Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

Gent. Usher. Madam, you are call'd back. Q. Kath. What need you note it? Pray you keep your way;

When you are call'd, return. Now the Lord help!

They yex me past my patience. Provent

They vex me past my patience. Pray you pass on.

I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts. [Exeunt Queen and her Allendants.]

King. Go thy ways, Kate.
That man i' th' world who shall report he

A better wife, let him in nought be trusted Forspeaking false in that. Thou art, alone—If the rare qualities, sweet gentleness, Thy meckness saint-like, wife-like government,

Obeying in commanding, and thy parts Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out-

The queen of earthly queens. She's noble born;

And like her true nobility she has Carried heiself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir, In humblest manner I require your High-

That it shall please you to declare in hearing of all these ears—for where I am robb'd and bound,

There must I be unloos'd, although not there

At once and fully satisfied—whether ever I Did broach this business to your Highness, or Laid any scruple in your way which might Induce you to the question on't, or ever Have to you, but with thanks to God for such

A royal lady, spake one the least word that might 153

Be to the projudice of her present state, Or touch of her good person?

King. My Lord Cardinal, I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour, I free you from't. You are not to be taught That you have many enemies that know not

Why they are so, but, like to village curs, Bark when their fellows do. By some of these

The Queen is put in anger. Y'are excus'd. But will you be more justified? You ever

Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never desir'd

It to be stirr'd; but oft have hind'red, With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you oft.

The passages made toward it. On my honour. I speak my good Lord Cardinal to this point. And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't. I will be bold with time and your attention.

Then mark th' inducement. Thus it camegive heed to't:

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness. Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd

By th' Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador.

Who had been hither sent on the debating A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary. I' th' progress of this business,

Ere a determinate resolution, he-I mean the Bishop—did require a respite Wherein he might the King his lord advertise

Whether our daughter were legitimate, Respecting this our marriage with the dowager. Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook

The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble

The region of my breast, which forc'd such

That many maz'd considerings did throng And press'd in with this caution. First, methought

I stood not in the smile of heaven, who had Commanded nature that my lady's womb, If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't than The grave does to the dead; for her male issue

Or died where they were made, or shortly after

This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought

This was a judgment on me, that my kingdom.

Well worthy the best heir o' th' world, should not

Be gladded in't by me. Then follows that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in

By this my issue's fail, and that gave to me Many a groaning three. Thus hulling in The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are 201 Now present here together; that's to say I meant to rectify my conscience, which I then did feel full sick, and yet not well, By all the reverend fathers of the land 205 And doctors learn'd. First, I began in Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave private remember

How under my oppression I did reek, When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege. King. I have spoke long; be pleas'd vourself to sav

How fai you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your Highness. The question did at first so stagger me-Bearing a state of mighty moment in't And consequence of dread-that I committed

The daring'st counsel which I had to doubt. And did entreat your Highness to this course

Which you are running here.

I then mov'd von. King. My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave To make this present summons. solicited

I left no reverend person in this court, 220 But by particular consent proceeded Under your hands and seals; therefore, go on.

For no dislike i' th' world against the

Of the good Queen, but the sharp tho " y points

Of my alleged reasons, drives this forward. Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life And kingly dignity, we are contented To wear our mortal state to come with her,

Katharine our queen, before the primest creature

That's paragon'd o' th' world. Cam. So please your Highness, The Queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness

That we adjourn this court till further day: Meanwhile must be an earnest motion Made to the Queen to call back her appeal She intends unto his Holiness.

King [Aside] I may perceive 235 These cardinals trifle with me. I abhor This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome. learn'd and well-beloved servant. My Cranmer, With thy approach I know Prithee return. My comfort comes along.—Break up the court: I say, set on.

[Exeunt in manner as they enter'd.

ACT THREE

Scene I. London. The Queen's apartments. Enter the QUEEN and her Women, as at work.

O. Kath. Take thy lute, wench. My soul grows sad with troubles; working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees, And the mountain tops that freeze, Bow themselves when he did sing; To his music plants and flowers Ever sprung, as sun and showers There had made a lasting spring.

Every thing that heard him play, Even the billows of the sea. Hung their heads and then lay by. In sweet music is such art, Killing care and grief of heart

Fall asleep or hearing die.

O. Kath. How now?

Enter a Gentleman. Gent. An't please your Grace, the two great Cardinals Wait in the presence.

Would they speak with me? O. Kath. Gent. They will'd me say so, madam. Pray their Graces Q. Kath.

To come near. [Exit Gentleman] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour ?

I do not like their coming. Now I think on't, They should be good men, their affairs as righteous:

But all hoods make not monks.

Enter the tovo Cardinals, Wolsey and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your Highness! Q. Kath. Your Graces find me here part of a housewife; I would be all, against the worst may happen. What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give you

The full cause of our coming

Q. Katlı. Speak it here; There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience, Deserves a corner. Would all other women Could speak this with as free a soul as I do! My lords, I care not—so much I am happy Above a number—if my actions

Were tried by ev'ry tongue, ev'ry eye saw

Envy and base opinion set against 'em, I know my life so even. If your business Seek me out, and that way I am wife in, Out with it boldly; truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina screnissima-

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin! I am not such a truant since my coming, 766

As not to know the language I have liv'd in: A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious:

Pray speak in English. Here are some will thank you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake :

Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord Cardinal.

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady, 50 I am sorry my integrity should breed, And service to his Majesty and you, So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.

We come not by the way of accusation To taint that honour every good tongue blesses.

Nor to betray you any way to sorrow-You have too much, good lady; but to

How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the King and you, and to deliver, Like free and honest men, our just opinions And comforts to your cause.

Most honour'd madam, My Lord of York, out of his noble nature, Zeal and obedience he still bore your Grace, Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure

Both of his truth and him-which was too far-

Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace, His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. [Aside] To betray me .--My lords, I thank you both for your good wills;

Ye speak like honest men-pray God ye prove so!

But how to make ye suddenly an answer, 70 In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,

More near my life, I fear, with my weak wit. And to such men of gravity and learning, In truth I know not. I was set at work Among my maids, full little, God knows, looking Either for such men or such business. For her sake that I have been-for I feel The last fit of my greatness-good your Graces.

Let me have time and counsel for my cause. Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless! Wol. Madam, you wrong the King's love with these fears; Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England But little for my profit; can you think, lords.

That any Englishman dare give me counsel? Or be a known friend, 'gainst his Highness' pleasureThough he be grown so desperate to he

And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends.

They that must weigh out my afflictions, They that my trust must grow to, live not here:

They are, as all my other comforts, far hence.

In mine own country, lords.

Would leave your griefs, and take my And am I thus rewarded? 'Tis not well, counsel.

O. Kath. protection;

much

95 cause:

For if the trial of the law o'ertake ve You'll part away disgrac'd.

He tells you rightly. Wol.

O. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both-my ruin. Is this your Christian counsel? Out upon ve!

Heaven is above all yet: there sits a Judge That no king can conjupt. Your rage mistakes us.

Cam. Q. Kath. The more shame for ye; holy men I thought ye, virtues:

But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear I am the most unhappy weman living.

Mend 'em, for shame, my loids. Is this your coinfort?

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady-A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?

I will not wish ye half my miseries:

I have more charity; but say I wain'd ve. Take heed, for heaven's sake take heed, lest at once

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye. Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;

You turn the good we ofter into envy. Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye, And all such false professors! Would you have me-

If you have any justice, any pity,

If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits-Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?

Alas! has banish'd me his bed already, His love too long ago! I am old, my lords, And all the fellowship I hold now with him Is only my obedience. What can happen To me above this wretchedness? All your studies

Make me a curse like this.

Cam.

O. Kath. Have I in d thus long-le me speak myseli, Since virtue finds no inend ,-- a wife, a che one?

A woman, I date say without vain-cler, is ever yet branded when sesticion?

Have I with all my fine adoctions Still met the King, load hun next hear in.

obev'd him. Been, out of fondress, superstitious to him. I would your Grace Almost forgot my prayers to content him, loids.

How, sir? Bung me a constant woman to her husband. Cam. Put your main cause into the King's One that ne'er dieam'd a joy beyond his pleasure, He's loving and most gracious. 'Twill be And to that woman, when she has done most.

Both for your honour better and your Yet will I add an honour—a great patience Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

O. Kath. My lord. I dare not make myself so guilty,

To give up willingly that noble title Your master wed me to: nothing but death Shall e'er divoice inv dignities.

Pray hear me. Wol. O. Kaih. Would I had never trod this English earth,

Or felt the flattenes that grow upon it! Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal What will become of me now, wietched lady?

[To her Women] Alas, poor vienches, where are now your fortunes? Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity, No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me; Almost no grave allow'd nie. Like the lilv. That once was mistress of the field, and flourish'd, I'll hang my head and perich.

If your Grace Wol. Could but be brought to know our ends are honest.

You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady.

Upon what cause, wrong you? Alas, our places.

The way of our profession is against it: We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em. For goodness' sake, consider what you do; How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly 100 Grow from the King's acquaintance, by this carriage.

The hearts of princes kiss obedience, So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits

They swell and grow as terrible as storms I know you have a gentle, noble temper, 103 Your fears are worse. A soul as even as a calm. Pray think us

Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, His spell in that is out; the King hath and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues

With these weak women's fears. A noble

As yours was put into you, ever casts Such doubts as false coin from it. The King loves you;

Beware you lose it not. For us, if you please To trust us in your business, we are ready To use our utmost studies in your service.

O. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords; and prav forgive me

If I have us'd myself unmannerly; You know I am a woman, lacking wit To make a seemly answer to such persons. Pray do my service to his Majesty; He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers.

Bestow your counsels on me; she now begs That little thought, when she set footing

She should have bought her dignities so dear. [Exeunt.

Scene II. London. The palace.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints

And force them with a constancy, the Cardinal

Cannot stand under them: it you omit The offer of this time, I cannot promise But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces

With these you bear already.

I am joyful Sur. To meet the least occasion that may give me

Remembrance of my father-in-law, the Duke.

To be reveng'd on him.

Which of the peers Suf. Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected? When did he regard The stamp of nobleness in any person Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your plea-

What he deserves of you and me I know; What we can do to him-though now the time

Gives way to us-I much fear. If you cannot

Bar his access to th' King, never attempt Anything on him; for he hath a witchcraft Over the King in's tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not! found

Matter against him that for ever mars The honey of his language. No, he's settled,

Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sw. I should be glad to hear such news as this Ome every hour.

Believe it, this is true: 25 Nor. In the divorce his contrary proceedings Are all unfolded; wherein he appears As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely

Sur. O, how, how? Suf. The Cardinal's letter, to the Pope miscarried.

And came to th' eye o' th' King; wherein was read

How that the Cardinal did entreat his Holiness

To stay the judgment o' th' divorce; for if It did take place, 'I do' quoth he 'perceive My king is tangled in affection to A creature of the Queen's, Lady Anne Bullen'.

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

The Cardinal!

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody. Wol. The packet, Cromwell, Gave't you the King?

Crom. To his own hand, in's bedchamber. Wol. Look'd he o' th' inside of the paper? Presently

He did unseal them; and the first he view'd,

He did it with a serious mind; a heed 80 Was in his contenance. You he bade Attend him here this morning. Is he ready Does he rake this together ?-Now, my lords. Saw you the Cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion Is in his brain: he bites his lip and starts. Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground, Then lays his finger on his temple; straight Springs out into fast gait; then stops again, Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts His eye against the moon. In most strange postures We have seen him set himself.

And from that full metidian of my glory I haste now to my setting. I shall fall 225 Like a bright exhalation in the evening, And no man see me more.

Re-enter to Wolsey the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the King's pleasure, Cardinal, who commands you

To render up the great seal presently Into our hands, and to confine yourself 230 To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's. Till you hear further from his Highness. Stay:

Where's your commission, loids? Words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Who dare cross 'em, Suf. Bearing the King's will from his mouth expressly?

Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it-

I mean your malice—know, officious lords, I dare and must deny it. Now I feel Of what coarse metal ye are moulded--

Follow your envious courses, men of malice; You have Christian warrant for 'em, and no doubt

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal You ask with such a violence, the King-Mine and your master-with his own hand gave me;

Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours.

During my life; and, to confirm his goodness.

Tied it by letters-patents. Now, who'll take it?

Sur. The King, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then. Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest. Proud lord, thou liest. Wol.

Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Wol. All goodness Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one, Into your own hands, Cardinal, by extortion; The goodness of your intercepted packets You writ to th' Pope against the King;

your goodness, Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious. My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble, As you respect the common good, the Sur. This cannot save you. I thank my memory I yet remember Some of these articles; and out they shall. Now, if you can blush and cry guilty, Cardinal, You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir; I dare your worst objections. If I blush. It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those than my head. Have at you!

First, that without the King's assent or 310 knowledge You wrought to be a legate; by which Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatpower

To be your servant.

Suf. Then, that without the knowledge Either of King or Council, when you went Ambassador to the Emperor, you made bold

To carry into Flanders the great seal. Sur. Item, you sent a large commission To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude, Without the King's will or the state's allowance.

A league between his Highness and Ferrara. Suf. That out of mere ambition you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the King's

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,

By what means got I leave to your own conscience,

To furnish Rome and to prepare the ways

You have for dignities, to the mere undoing Of all the kingdom. Many more there are, Which, since they are of you, and odious, I will not taint my mouth with.

O my lord, Cham. Press not a falling man too far! 'Tis virtue. His faults lie open to the laws; let them, Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him

So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him. Suf. Lord Cardinal, the King's further pleasure islate,

This is the state of man: to-day he puts

The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms

And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost. And when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root, And then he talls, as I do. I have ventur'd, Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,

This many summers in a sea of glory: 360 But far beyond my depth. My high-blown pride

At length broke under me, and now has left me,

Weary and old with service, to the mercy Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide

Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye; 365 I feel my heart new open'd. O, how wretched Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!

There is betwixt that smile we would aspire to.

That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin More pangs and fears than wars or women have:

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer. Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, standing amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell! Crom. I have no power to speak, sir. What, amaz'd At my misfortunes? Can thy spirit wonder A great man should decline? Nay, an you What and how true thou art. weep, 375

I am fall'n indeed.

How does your Grace? Crom. Why, well: Wol. Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell. I know myself now, and I feel within me A peace above all earthly dignities,

A still and quiet conscience. The King has cur'd me, I humbly thank his Grace; and from these shoulders, These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken A load would sink a navy-too much honour.

O. 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven! Crom. I am glad your Grace has made that right use of it. 386

Wol. I hope I have. I am able now, methinks,

Out of a fortitude of soul I feel.

To endure more miseries and greater far Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer. What news abroad?

Crom. Is your displeasure with the King.

God bless him! Wol. Crom. The next is that Sir Thomas More is chosen

Lord Chancellor in your place.

That's somewhat sudden. But he's a learned man. May he continue Long in his Highness' favour, and do justice For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones.

May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on him!

What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome.

Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Wol. That's news indeed.

Last, that the Lady Anne, Whom the King hath in secrecy long married. This day was view'd in open as his queen, Going to chapel; and the voice is now 405 Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell,

The King has gone beyond me. All my glories

In that one woman I have lost for ever. No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours, Or gild again the noble troops that waited Upon my smiles. Go get thee from me, Cromwell:

I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now To be thy lord and master. Seek the King; That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him 4x5

His will advance thee:

Some little memory of me will stir him-I know his noble nature—not to let Thy hopeful service perish too. Gacd Cromwell.

Neglect him nor; make use now, and provide

For thine own future safety. O my lord.

Must I then leave you? Must I needs forgo So good, so noble, and so true a master ? Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,

With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.

The King shall have my service: but my prayers

For ever and for ever shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a

In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me. Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman. Let's dry our eyes; and thus far hear me, Cromwell.

The heaviest and the worst And when I am forgotten, as I shall be, And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention

Of me more must be heard of, say I taught thee-

Say Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour, Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in-

When he has run his course and sleeps in A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.

Mark but my fall and that that ruin'd me. Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition: 440

By that sin fell the angels. How can man

The image of his Maker, hope to win by it? Love thyself last; cherish those hearts that hate thee;

Corruption wins not more than honesty. Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not:

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's.

Thy God's, and truth's; then, if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr!

Serve the King, and-prithee lead me 450

There take an inventory of all I have To the last penny; 'tis the King's. 10be.

And my integrity to heaven, is all I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell! 415 Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

I serv'd my King, he would not in mine age Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.

So I have. Farewell Wol. The hopes of court! My hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. A street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1 Gent. Y'are well met once again.

So are you. 2 Gent. 1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold The Lady Anne pass from her coronation? 2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial. But that time 1 Gent. 'Tis very true.

This, general joy.

This well. The citizens, I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds-

As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever

In celebration of this day with shows, 10 Pageants, and sights of honour.

Never greater.

Nor. I'll assure you, better taken, sir. 2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand?

1 Gent. Yes; 'tis the list Of those that claim their offices this day. 15 By custom of the coronation.

The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims To be High Steward; next, the Duke of Norfolk.

He to be Earl Marshal. You may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,

I should have been beholding to your paper. But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The Princess Dowager? How goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. Archbishop

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other 25 Learned and reverend fathers of his order, Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off From Ampthill, where the Princess lay; to which

10. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

[Exeunt, first passing over the stage in order and state, and then a great flourish of trumpets.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me. These I know.

Who's that that bears the sceptre? 1 Gent. Marquis Dorset:

And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod. 2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be

The Duke of Sufiolk?

1 Gent. 'Tis the same-High Steward. 41 2 Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk?

2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all are near her.

I take it she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk 1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed.

And sometimes falling ones.

1 Gent. No more of that. 55 [Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumbets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?

3 Gent. Among the crowd i' th' Abbey, where a finger

Could not be wedg'd in more; I am stifled With the mere rankness of their joy.

You saw 2 Gent.

The ceremony?

That I did. 3 Gent. How was it? 1 Gent.

3 Gent. Well worth the secing.

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us. 3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich

Of lords and ladies, having brought the Queen

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off A distance from her, while her Grace sai

To rest awhile, some half an hour or so, In a rich chair of state, opposing freely The beauty of her person to the people. Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman That ever lay by man; which when the people

Had the full view of, such a noise arose As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,

As loud, and to as many tunes; hats, cloaks-

Doublets, I think-flew up, and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy

I never saw before. Great-bellied women. That had not half a week to go, like

In the old time of war, would shake the press,

And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living

Could say 'This is my wife 'there, all were woven

So strangely in one piece. But what follow'd? 2 Gent.

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

3 Gent. At length her Grace rose, and with modest paces saintlike

Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly.

Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people ;

When by the Archbishop of Canterbury She had all the royal makings of a queen:

As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown, The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir. With all the choicest music of the kingdom,

Together sung 'Te Deum'. So she parted, And with the same full state pac'd back again

To York Place, where the feast is held. 1 Gent.

You must no more call it York Place:

that's past;
For since the Cardinal fell that title's lost. 'Tis now the King's, and call'd Whitehall. 3 Gent. I know it:

But 'tis so lately alter'd that the old name Is fresh about me. 2 Gent. What two reverend bishops

Were those that went on each side of the Queen?

3 Cent. Stokesly and Cardiner the one of Winchester.

Newly preferr'd from the King's secretary; The other, London.

2 Gent. He of Winchester Is held no great good lover of the Archbishop's,

The virtuous Cranmer.

3 Gent. All the land knows that; 105 However. vet there is no great breach When it comes,

Cranmer will find a triend will not shrink from him.

2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you? 3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell, A man in much esteem with th' King, and truly

A worthy friend. The King has made him Master O' th' Jewel House.

And one, already, of the Privy Council.

2 Gent. He will deserve more.

3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt. Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which

Is to th' court, and there ye shall be my guests:

Something I can command. As I walk thither, I'll tell ve more.

Both. You may command us, sir. [Exeunt. SCENE II. Kumbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH, her Gentleman Usher, and PATIENCE, her woman.

Grif. How does your Grace?

O Griffith, sick to death! Kath. My legs like loaden branches bow to th' earth.

Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair.

So-now, methinks, I feel a little ease. Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,

That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey,

Was dead?

Yes, madam: but I think your Grif. Grace,

Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear

Kath. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died.

If well, he stepp'd before me, happily, 10 For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam; For after the stout Earl Northumberland Arrested him at York and brought him

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer, He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill He could not sit his mule.

Alas, poor man! Kath. Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester.

Lodg'd in the abbey; where the reverend abbot.

With all his covent, honourably receiv'd him:

Abbot,

An old man, broken with the storms of state,

Is come to lay his weary bones among ye; Give him a little earth for charity!' So went to bed; where eagerly his sickness Pursu'd him still. And three nights after

About the hour of eight—which he himself Foretold should be his last-full of repent-

Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows, He gave his honours to the world again, His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to Patience, be near me still, and set me speak him,

And yet with charity. He was a man Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes; one that, suggestion.

Tied all the kingdom. Simony was fair play;

His own opinion was his law. I' th' presence He would say untruths, and be ever double Both in his words and meaning. He was never.

But where he meant to ruin, pitiful. His promises were, as he then was, mighty: But his performance, as he is now, nothing, Of his own body he was ill, and gave The clergy ill example.

Noble madam, Grif.

Men's evil manners live in brass: their virtues We write in water. May it please your Highness To hear me speak his good now?

Kath.Yes, good Griffith: I were malicious else.

Grif. This Cardinal.

Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.

He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one: Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuad-

Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not. But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting-Which was a sin-yet in bestowing, madam. He was most princely: ever witness for him Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you, Ipswich and Oxford! One of which fell with him.

Unwilling to outlive the good that did it: other, though unfinish'd, yet so tamous,

So excellent in art, and still so rising, To whom he gave these words: 'O father That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.

> His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him: For then, and not till then, he felt himself, And found the blessedness of being little. 66 And, to add greater honours to his age Than man could give him, he died fearing God. Kath. After my death I wish no other herald.

No other speaker of my living actions, To keep mine honour from corruption, But such an honest chronicler as Griffith. Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me.

With thy religious truth and modesty, Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!

lower: I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,

Cause the musicians play me that sad note 35 I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and solenn music. Grif. She is asleep. Good wench, let's sit down quet,

For fear we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

THE VISION.

Enter, soleninly tripping one after another. six Personages clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden orzards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hards. They first congee unto her, then dance, and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head. as which the other jour make reverent cur s es. Then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head; which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order; at which, as it were by inspiration, she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so in their dancing vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye?

Are ye all gone?

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here. Kath. It is not

It is not you I call for.

Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif.

None, madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces

Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?

They promis'd me eternal happiness, 96 And brought me garlands, Guilith, which I feel

I am not worthy yet to wear. I shall, assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams

Possess your fancy.

Kath.

Bid the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me.

Pat. [Music ceases. Do you note 95

How much her Grace is alter'd on the sudden?

How long her face is drawn! How pale she looks,

And of an earthy cold! Mark her eyes.

Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat.

Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your Grace-

Kath. You are a saucy tellow. Deserve we no more reverence?

Git. You are to blame, not Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness,

To use so muce behaviour. Go to, kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' paraon;

My haste made me unmannedy. There is staying,
A gentleman sent from the King to the

A gentleman, sent from the King, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith; but this fellow

Let me ne'er see again. [Exit Messenger.

Enter LORD CAPUCIUS.

You should be Lord Ambassador from the Emperor,

My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.
Cap. Madam, the same—your servant.
Kath.
O, my Lord,

The times and titles now are alter'd strangely

With me since first you knew me. But, I pray you,

What is your pleasure with me?
Cap. Noble lady,

First, mine own service to your Grace; the next,

The King's request that I would visit you,

Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me

Sends you his princely commendations
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late.

'Tis like a pardon after execution: 121
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me;

But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.

How does his Highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.
Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name Banish'd the kingdom! Patience, is that letter

I caus'd you write yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam.

[Giving it to Katharme.

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver

This to my lord the King.

Cap. Most willing, madam. 110 Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness

The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter—

The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her !-

Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding-She is young, and of a noble modest nature; I hope she will deserve well-and a little To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him. Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition Is that his noble Grace would have some pity Upon my wretched women that so long 140 Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully; Of which there is not one, I dare avow-And now I should not lie-but will deserve.

For virtue and true beauty of the soul, For honesty and decent carriage, A right good husband, let him be a noble; And sure those men are happy that shall have 'em.

The last is for my men-they are the poorest,

But poverty could never draw 'em from me-

That they may have their wages duly paid

And something over to remember me by. If heaven had pleas'd to have given me In them a wilder nature than the business longer life

And able means, we had not parted thus. These are the whole contents; and, good my lord.

By that you love the dearest in this world, As you wish Christian peace to souls departed,

Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the King

To do me this last right.

By heaven, I will, Cap. Or let me lose the fashion of a man!

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me In all humility unto his Highness;

Say his long trouble now is passing Out of this world. Tell him in death I bless'd him, For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell, My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience, You must not leave me vet. I must to bed: Call in more women. When I am dead. good wench,

Let me be us'd with honour; strew me over With maiden flowers, that all the world may know

I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm

Then lay me forth; although unqueen'd, Beside that of the Jewel House, is made yet like

A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me. I can no more. [Excunt, leading Katharine.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. London. A gallery in the palace.

Enter GARDINER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER. a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Bov. It hath struck. Gar. These should be hours for necessities. Not for delights; times to repair our nature With comforting repose, and not for us To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas I

Whither so late?

Low. Came you from the King, my lord? 6 Gar. I did, Sir Thomas, and left him at primero

With the Duke of Suffolk.

I must to him too. Lov. Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave. Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter? It seems you are in haste. An if there be No great offence belongs to't, give your friend

Some touch of your late business. Affairs that walk-

As they say spirits do—at midnight, have That seeks despatch by day.

My lord, I love you: And durst commend a secret to your ear 17 Much weightier than this work. The Queen's in labour,

They say in great extremity, and fear'd She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with 20 I pray for heartily, that it may find Good time, and live; but for the stock, Sir Thomas, I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could Cry thee amen: and yet my conscience savs

She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

But, sir, sir-Gar. Hear me, Sir Thomas. Y'are a gentleman Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious:

And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well-Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me-Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,

Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two The most remark'd i' th' kingdom. As for Cromwell.

Master

Rolls, and the King's secretary; O' th' further, sir,

Stands in the gap and trade of moe prefer- With gentle travail, to the gladding of ments.

With which the time will load him. Archbishop

Is the King's hand and tongue, and who dare speak

One syllable against him?

Yes, yes, Sir Thomas, Gar. There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd

To speak my mind of him; and indeed this day,

Sir-I may tell it you-I think I have Incens'd the lords o' th' Council, that he is

For so I know he is, they know he is-A most arch heretic, a pestilence That does infect the land; with which they moved

Have broken with the King, who hath so As you commanded me. far

Given ear to our complaint-of his great grace

And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs

Our reasons laid before him-hath commanded

To-morrow morning to the Council board He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir I am happily come hither. Thomas.

And we must root him out. From your affairs

I hinder you too long-good night, Sir Thomas.

Lov. Many good nights, my lord; I rest your servant.

[Exeunt Gardiner and Page.

Enter the KING and the DUKE OF SUFFOLK. King, Charles, I will play no more tonight:

My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before. King. But little, Charles;

Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play. Now, Lovell, from the Queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her What you commanded me, but by her woman

I sent your message; who return'd her thanks In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your Highness

Most heartily to pray for her.

What say'st thou, ha? 66 To pray for her? What, is she crying out? Lov. So said her woman; and that her suff'rance made Almost each pang a death.

Alas, good lady! Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and Your Highness with an heir !

King. 'Tis midnight, Charles: Prithee to bed; and in thy pray'rs remember

Th' estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone.

For I must think of that which company 75 Will not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your Highness A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

King. Charles, good night. IEx.t Suffolk.

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the Archbishop.

King. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord. King. 'Tis true. Where is he, Denny? Den. He attends your Highness' pleasure. King. Bring him to us.

Exit Denny. Lov. [Aside] This is about that which the bishop spake.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

King. Avoid the gallery.

Lovell seems to stay. Ha! I have said. Be gone.

What! Exeunt Lovell and Denny. Cran. [Aside] I am fearful—wherefore frowns he thus?

'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well. King. How now, my lord? You do desire to know

Wherefore I sent for you.

Cr.in. [Kneeling] It is my duty 90 T' attend your Highness' pleasure.

Kmg. Pray you, arise, My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury. Come, you and I must walk a turn together; I have news to tell you; come, come, give me your hand.

Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak, And am right sorry to repeat what follows. I have, and most unwillingly, of late

Heard many grievous-I do say, my lord, Grievous—complaints of you; which, being consider'd,

Have mov'd us and our Council that you shall

This morning come before us; where I know

You cannot with such freedom purge yourself

But that, till further trial in those charges Which will require your answer, you must Your patience to you and be well contented

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

To make your house our Tow'r. brother of us,

It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness Would come against you.

I humbly thank your Highness, And am right glad to catch this good occasion

Most throughly to be winnowed where my chaff

And corn shall fly asunder; for I know There's none stands under more calamnious tongues

Than I myself, poor man.

Stand up. good Canterbury; Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand

Prithee let's walk. Now, by my holidame, What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd

You would have given me your petition He has strangled his language in his tears. that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together

Yourself and your accusers, and to have heard you

Without indurance further.

Most dread liege. The good I stand on is my truth and honesty:

If they shall fail, I with mine enemies Will triumph o'er my person: which I weigh not, Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing What can be said against me.

Know you not How your state stands i' th' world, with the whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices

Must bear the same proportion; and not AVAT

The justice and the truth o' th' question carries

The due o' th' verdict with it; at what ease Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt

To swear against you? Such things have been done.

You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice

Of as great size. Ween you of better luck, I mean in perjur'd witness, than your Master,

Whose minister you are, whiles here He liv'd

Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to; You take a precipice for no leap of danger, And woo your own destruction.

God and your Majesty Protect mine innocence, or I fall into 141 The trap is laid for me!

King. Be of good cheer:

Mother ! I swear he is true-hearted, and a soul 154 None better in my kingdom. Get you gone, And do as I have bid you. [Exit Cranmer.

Enter Old Lady.

Gent. [Within] Come back; what mean you?

Old L. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring

Will make my boldness manners. good angels

Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person

Under their blessed wings! King. Now, by thy looks I guess thy message. Is the Queen deliver'd? Say ay, and of a boy.

Old L. Ay, ay, my liege ; And of a lovely boy. The God of Heaven Both now and ever bless her! 'Tis a girl, Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you As cherry is to cherry.

King. Lovell 1

Enter LOVELL.

Sir? King. Give her an hundred marks. 1'11 to the Queen. [Exit.

Old L. An hundred marks? By this light, I'll ha' more!

An ordinary groom is for such payment. I will have more, or scold it out of him. Said I for this the girl was like to him? I'll Have more, or else unsay't; and now, while 'tis hot,

I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Lobby before the Council Chamber. Enter Cranmer, Archbishop of Canter-BURY. Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman

Scene 21

That was sent to me from the Council Let 'em mone, and draw the curtain close: pray'd me To make great haste. All fast? What means this? Ho!

Who waits there? Sure you know me?

Enia Keeper.

Yes, my lord . Keep. But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

Keep. Your Grace must wait till you be call'u for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

So. Cran. Butts. [Aside] This is a piece of malice. I am glad

I came this way so happily; the King Shall anderstand it presently. 1Exit Tis Butts, Cran [Aside]

The King's physician; as he pass'd along, How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me! Pray heaven he sound not my disgrace! For certain,

This is of purpose laid by some that hate me--

God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice-

To quench mine honour; they would shame to make me

Wait else at door, a fellow councillor, 'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But then pleasures

Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience. Enter the King and Butts at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your Grace the strangest sight-

King. What's that, Butts? Butts. I think your Highness saw this many a day.

King. Body a me, where is it?

Butts. There my lord: The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury;

Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants,

Pages, and footboys.

Ha, 'tis he indeed. 23 King. Is this the honour they do one another? 'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought

They had parted so much honesty among 'em-

At least good manners-as not thus to suffer

A man of his place, and so near our favour,

To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures. And at the door too, like a post with packets. By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery! We shall hear more anon.

SCENE III. The Council Chamber.

A Council lable prought m, with chairs and stools, and placed under the state. Enter Lord Concept a, places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand, a seat being left void above him, as for Canterbury's seat. DUKE OF SUFFOLK, DUKE OF MORFOLK, SURRLY, LORD CHAMBERLAIN, GARDINER, seat themselves in order on each side; CROMWELL at lower end, as secretary. Keeper at the door.

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary:

Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours. The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it? Crom.

Nor. Who waits there? Keep. Without, my noble loids?

Gar. Yes.

Keep. My Loid Archbishop; And has done half an hour, to know your pleasure ..

Chan. Let him come in.

Keeb. Your Grace may enter now. CRANMER approaches the Council table.

Chan, My good Lord Archbishop, I ain very somy

To sit here at this present, and behold That chair stand empty; but we all are

In our own natures frail and capable Of our flesh; few are angels; out of which tradity

And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,

Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little,

Toward the King first, then his laws, in filling The whole realm by your teaching and your chaplains-

For so we are into in'd-with new opinions, Divers and dangerous; which are heresies, And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious. Gar. Which reformation must be sudden tou. My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle.

But stop their mouths with stubborn bits and spur 'em

Till they obey the manage. If we suffer, Out of our easiness and childish pity To one man's honour, this contagious sickness.

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

Farewell all physic; and what follows then?

Commotions, uproars, with a general taint Of the whole state: as of late days our neighbours.

The upper Germany, can dearly witness, 30 Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto in all the progress Both of my life and office, I have labour'd, And with no little study, that my teaching And the strong course of my authority 35 Might go one way, and safely; and the end Was ever to do well. Nor is there living-I speak it with a single heart, my lords-A man that more detests, more stirs against, Both in his private conscience and his place.

Defacers of a public peace than I do. Pray heaven the King may never find a heart

With less allegiance in it! Men that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships That, in this case of justice, my accusers, Be what they will, may stand forth face to face And freely urge against me.

Nay, my lord, That cannot be; you are a councillor, 49 And by that virtue no man dare accuse you. Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment, We will be short with you. 'Tis his Highness' pleasure

And our consent, for better trial of you, From hence you be committed to the Tower: Where, being but a private man again, 55 You shall know many dare accuse you boldly.

More than, I fear, you are provided for. Cran. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester,

I thank you; You are always my good friend; if your will pass,

I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,

You are so merciful. I see your end-'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, lord, Become a churchman better than ambition; Win straying souls with modesty again, Cast none away. That I shall clear myself, Lay all the weight ve can upon my patience, I make as little doubt as you do conscience In doing daily wrongs. I could say more, But reverence to your calling makes me modest. Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary; That's the plain truth. Your painted gloss discovers,

To men that understand you, words and weakness.

Crom. My Lord of Winchester, v' little.

By your good favour, too sharp; me'n so noble.

However faulty, yet should find respect 23 For what they have been; 'tis a cruelt'y To load a falling man.

Good Master Secretary, Gar. your honour mercy; you may, I cry worst

Of all this table, say so.

Why, my lord? Crom. Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer 80 Of this new sect? Ye are not sound. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest! 40 Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

> Gar. I shall remember this bold language. Crom.

Remember your bold life too. This is too much; 85 Chan.

Forbear, for shame, my lords. Gar. I have done.

Crom. Chan. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed.

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith You be convey'd to th' Tower a prisoner: There to remain till the King's further pleasure Be known unto us. Are you all agreed. tords?

All. We are.

Is there no other way of mercy, Cran. But I must needs to th' Tower, my lords? Gar. What other Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.

Let some o' th' guard be ready there.

Enter the Guard.

Cran. For me? 95 Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him, And see him safe i' th' Tower.

Cran.

Stay, good my lords, I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords :

By virtue of that ring I take my cause 99 Out of the gripes of cruel men and give it To a most noble judge, the King my master.

Cham. This is the King's ring. 'Tis no counterfeit. Sur. Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heav'n. I told ye all, When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,

'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Do you think, my lords, 105 The King will suffer but the little finger Of this man to be vex'd? 'Tis now too certain;' How much more is his life in value with My most dread sovereign, may it like your hım!

Would I were fairly out on't!

My mind gave me. Crom. In seeking tales and informations Against this man—whose honesty the devil And his disciples only envy at-Ye blow the fire that burns ye. Now have And fair purgation to the world, than at ve!

Enter the KING frowning on them: he takes his ceat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince : Not only good and wise but most religious; One that in all obedience makes the church The chief aim of his honour and, to strengthen

That holy duty, out of dear respect,

His royal self in judgment comes to hear 120 The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

King. You were ever good at sudden commendations,

Bishop of Winchester. But know I come

To hear such flattery now, and in my presence

They are too thin and bare to hide offences. To me you cannot reach you play the spaniel,

And think with wagging of your tongue to win me:

But whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody. [To Cranmer] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest He that dares most but wag his finger at

By all that's holy, he had better starve Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your Grace-

thee.

No, sir, it does not please me. I had thought I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my Council; but I find

Was it discretion, lords, to let this man, This good man-few of you deserve that title-

This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy At chamber door? and one as great as you are? 140

Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a courcillor to try him, Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see, More out of malice than integrity, Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean; Which ye shall never have while I live. Chan.

Grace

To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd Concerning his imprisonment was rather-

If there be faith in men-meant for his trial malice. I'm sure, in me.

King. Well, well, my lords, respect him; Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it. I will say thus much for him: if a prince 153

May be beholding to a subject. I Am for his love and service so to him,

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him: Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me: That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism:

You must be godfather, and answer for her. Cran. The greatest monaich now alive may glory

In such an honour; how may I deserve it, That am a poor and humble subject to you?

King. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons. You shall have
Two noble partners with you: the old

Duchess of Norfolk

And Lady Marques Dorset. Will these please you? Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge you, 170 Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart

And brother-love I do it. Cran. And let heaven

Witness how dear I hold this confirmation. King. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart.

The common voice, I see, is verified Of thee, which says thus: 'Do my Lord of Canterbury

A shrewd turn and he's your friend for ever '.

Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long To have this young one made a Christian. As I have made ye one, lords, one remain; So I grow stronger, you more honour gain. Exeunt.

Scene IV. The palace yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals. Do you take the court for Paris garden? Ye rude slaves, leave your gaping. [Within: Good master porter, I belong to th' larder.

Port. Belong to th' gallows, and be Thus far, hang'd, ye rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads. You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, sir, be patient; 'tis as much impossible.

Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons.

To scatter 'em as 'tis to make 'em sleep On May-day morning; which will never be. We may as well push against Paul's as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd? 15 Man. Alas, I know not: how gets the tide in ?

As much as one sound cudgel of four footpoor remainder-could You see the distribute.

I made no spare, sir.

You did nothing, sir. Port. Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,

To mow 'em down before me; but if I spar'd any

That had a head to hit, either young or old, He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again; And that I would not for a cow, God save [Within: Do you hear, master porter? Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy. Keep the door close, surah.

Man. What would you have me do? 29 Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by th' dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? Or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me: he stands there like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that rail'd upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o' th' Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place. At length they came to th' broomstaff to me; I defied 'em still;

when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em. loose shot, deliver'd such a show'r of pebbles that I was fain to draw mine honour in and let 'em win the work: the devil was amongst 'em. I think surely. 56

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse and fight for bitten apples: that no audience but the tribulation of Tower-hill or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days: besides the running banquet of two beadles that is to come.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here !

They grow still too; from all parts they are coming, As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters, These lazy knaves? Y'have made a fine hand, fellows.

There's a trim rabble let in: are all these Your faithful friends o' th' suburbs? We shall have

Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts: then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c., train borne by a Lady; then follows the MARCHIONESS DORSET, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

THE EPILOGUE

"Tis ten to one this play can never please All that are here. Some come to take their ease

And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear, W'have frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,

They'll say 'tis nought; others to hear the city
Abus'd extremely, and to cry 'That's Abus'd extremely, and to cry 'That's witty!'

Which we have not done neither; that,

I fear,
All the expected good ware like to hear
For this play at this time is only in

The merciful construction of good women; For such a one we show'd 'em. If they smile

And say 'twill do, I know within a while All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

PROLOGUE

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece The princes orgillous, their high blood chaf'd.

Have to the port of Athens sent their ships Fraught with the ministers and instruments Of cruel war. Sixty and nine that wore 5 Their crownels regal from th' Athenian bay Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made

To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures

The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen, With wanton Paris sleeps-and that's the quarrel. To Tenedos they come,

And the deep drawing barks do there disgorge

Their war-like fraughtage. Now on Dardan plains

The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch

Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,

Dardan, and Tymbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,

And Antenorides, with massy staples And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts, Sperr up the sons of Troy.

ACT ONE

SCLNE I. Troy. Before Priam's palace. Enter Troilus armed, and Pandarus.

Tro. Call here my varlet: I'll unaim again.

Why should I war without the walls of Trov That find such cruel battle here within?

Each Troyan that is master of his heart, Let him to field; Troilus, alas, hath nonel

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended? 6 Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength, Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant:

But I am weaker than a woman's tear, Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance, Less valuant than the virgin in the night, And skilless as unpractis'd infancy.

Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited the wheat must needs tarry the grinding. 16

Tro. Have I not tarried?

tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tairied.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn vour lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er

Doth lesser blench at suff'rance than I do. At Priam's royal table do I sit;

And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts-

So, traitor, then she comes when she is thence.

Pan. Well, she look'd yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman

Tro. I was about to tell thee: when my heart,

As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain, Lest Hector or my father should perceive

I have, as when the sun doth light a storm, Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile. But sorrow that is couch'd in seeming gladness Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's-well, go to-there were no more comparison between the women. But, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her, but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit; but-

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee. Pandarus-

When I do tell thee there my hopes lie drown'd,

Reply not in how many fathoms deep They lie indrench'd. I tell thee I am mad In Cressid's love. Thou answer'st 'She is fair '-

Pourest in the open ulcer of my heart-Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice,

Handlest in thy discourse. O, that her nand, In whose comparison all whites are ink 55 Writing their own reproach; to whose soft Ourself the merchant, and this sailing seizure

As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her;

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm, 60 Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me

The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much. Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in it. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus! How now, Pandarus!

Pan. I have had my labour for my travail, ill thought on of her and ill thought on of you; gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus?

What, with me?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen. An she were not kin to me, she would be as fair a Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not an she were a blackamoor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father. Let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' th' matter. 82

Tro. Pandarus!

Pan. Not I. Tro. Sweet Pandarus!

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. [Exit. Sound alarum.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! Peace, rude sounds! Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair. When with your blood you daily paint her

I cannot fight upon this argument; It is too starv'd a subject for my sword. But Pandarus-O gods, how do you plague

I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar: And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit. Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love, What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what

For womanish it is to be from thence. What news, Æneas, from the field to-day? Æne. That Paris is returned home, and Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Troilus, by Menelaus. Æne. Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn: Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn.

[Alarum. Æne. Hark what good sport is out of town to-day!

Tro. Better at home, if 'would I might' were 'may'.

But to the sport abroad. Are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Come, go we then together. Tro. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Trov. A street.

Enter CRESSIDA and her man ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by? Queen Hecuba and Helen. Alex.Cres. And whither go they?

Up to the eastern tower, Alex. Whose height commands as subject all the vale.

To see the battle. Hector, whose patience Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd. He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer: And, like as there were husbandry in war, Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, And to the field goes he; where every flower Did as a prophet weep what it foresaw 10 In Hector's wrath.

What was his cause of anger? Cres. Alex. The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks A lord of Troyan blood, nephew to Hector;

They call him Ajax. Good: and what of him? Alex. They say he is a very man per se 15

And stands alone. Cres. So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robb'd many beasts of their particular additions: he is as valiant as the hon, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant—a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crush'd into folly, his folly sauced with discretion. There is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attaint but he carries some stain of it; he is melancholy without cause and merry against the hair; he hath the joints of every thing; but everything so out of joint that he is a gouty Briarcus, all eyes and no sight.

Cies. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex They say he yesterday cop'd Hector in the battle and struck him down, the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter PANDARUS.

35

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady. Pan. What's that? What's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus. Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of?-Good morrow. Alexander.-How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector arm'd and gone ere you came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was

Pan. E'en so. Hector was stirring early. Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that. And there's Troilus will not come far behind him: let them take heed of Troilus. I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too? Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison. Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see Cres. Av. if I ever saw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say, for I am sure he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees.

'Tis just to each of them: he is Cres. himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! would he were!

Cres. So he is. Pan. Condition I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself. Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; time must triend or end. Well, Troilus, well! I would my heart were in her body! No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale when th' other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty. Cres. 'Twould not become him: his own's-better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece. Helen herself swore th' other day that Troilus, for a brown favour, for so 'tis, I must confess-not brown neither-

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true. Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough. 95

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much. If she prais'd him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as hef Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek indeed. Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compass'd window—and you know he has not past three or four hairs on his chin-

Cres. Indeed a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin-

Cres. Juno have mercy! How came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled. think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly!

Pan. Boes he not?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn! Pan. Why, go to, then! But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus-you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus! Why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' th' shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh to think how she tickled his chin. Indeed, she has a marvell's white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack. Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! Many a wart is richer.

Pan. But there was such laughing! Oueen Hecuba laugh'd that her eyes ran Cres. With millstones.

Pan. And Cassandra laugh'd.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes. Did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laugh'd.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair I should have laugh'd too.

Pan. They laugh'd not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer? Pan. Quoth she 'Here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white'.

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of 'Two and fifty hairs,' quoth he 'and one white. That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she 'which of these hairs is Par's my husband?' 'The forked one;' quoth he 'pluck't out and give it him.' there was such laughing! and Helen so blush'd, and Paris so chaf'd; and all the rest so laugh'd that it pass'd. Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by. Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't. Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true; he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May [Sound a retreat. Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here and see them as they pass toward Ilium? Good niece, do, sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names as they Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

ÆNEAS passes.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Æneas. Is not that a bravman? He's one of the flowers of Troy, can tell you. But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

ANTENOR basses.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Antenor. He has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough; he's one o' th' soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a prope man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon. If he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod? Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more

HECTOR passes.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, Go thy way, that; there's a fellow! Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks. There's a countenance! Is't not a brave man?

Cres. O, a brave man!

Pan. Is 'a not? It does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! Look you yonder, do you see? Look you there. There's no jesting; there's laving on; take't off who will, as they say. There be hacks.

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords! anything, he cares not: an the devil come to him, it's all one. By God's lid. it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, vonder comes Paris.

PARIS passes.

Look ye yonder, niece; is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day? He's not hurt. Why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha! Would I could see Troius now! You shall see Troilus anon.

HELENUS passes.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle? Pan. Helenus! no. Yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is.

Hark! do you not hear the people cry 'Troilus'? Helenus is a priest. What sneaking fellow Cres. comes vonder? 218

TROILUS passes.

Pan. Where? yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus. There's a man, niece. Hem! Brave Troilus, the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him. O brave

Troilus! Look well upon him, niece; look you how his sword is bloodled, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he never saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way. Had I a sister were a grace or a daughter a goddess. he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I wairant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Cres. Here comes more.

Common Soldiers bass.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran. chaff and bran! porridge after meat! could live and die in the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone. Crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is amongst the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus. 240 Pan. Achilles? A drayman, a porter, a very camel!

Cres. Well, well. Pan. Well, well! Why, have you any discretion? Have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a Cres. Ay, a minc'd man; and then to be bak'd with no date in the pie, for then the man's date is out.

Pan. You are such a woman! A man knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly ; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these; and at all these wards I lie at, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too. If I cannot ward what I would not have hit. I can watch you for telling how I took the blow: unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come.

[Exit Bov. I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well, good Scene III. The Grecian camp. Before Agamemnon's tent.

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYS-SES. DIOMEDES, MENELAUS, and Others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set these jaundies o'er your cheeks?

The ample proposition that hope makes In all designs begun on earth below Fails in the promis'd largeness; checks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd, As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap, Infects the sound pine, and diverts his grain

Tortive and errant from his course of growth.

Nor, princes, is it matter new to us That we come short of our suppose so far That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand;

Sith every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have record, trial did draw Bias and thwart, not answering the aim, 15 And that unbodied figure of the thought That gave't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works

And call them shames, which are, indeed, nought else

But the protractive trials of great Jove 20 To find persistive constancy in men; The fineness of which metal is not found In fortune's love? For then the bold and On which heaven rides, knit all the Greekish coward.

The wise and fool, the artist and unread, 24 The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin. But in the wind and tempest of her frown Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan. Puffing at all, winnows the light away : And what hath mass or matter by itself Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat.

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth.

How many shallow bauble boats dare sail Upon her patient breast, making their way With those of nobler bulk!

But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage

The gentle Thetis, and anon behold The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,

Bounding between the two moist elements Like Perseus' horse. Where's then the saucy boat,

Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now Co-rivall'd greatness? Either to harbour

Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so 45 Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide

In storms of fortune; for in her ray and brightness

The herd hath more annoyance by the breese

Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind

Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, so And flies fled under shade—why, then the thing of courage, rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathise,

And with an accent tun'd in self-same key Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon, Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit In whom the tempers and the minds of all Should be shut up-hear what Ulysses speaks.

Besides the applause and approbation The which, [To Agamemnon] most mighty, for thy place and sway,

[To Nestor] And, thou most reverend, for thy stretch'd-out life.

I give to both your speeches-which were

As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece Should hold up high in brass; and such again

As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver, 63 Should with a bond of air, strong as the axle-tree

To his experienc'd tongue—yet let it please Strength should be lord of imbecility. both.

Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulvsses speak.

Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect

That matter needless, of importless burden, Divide thy lips than we are confident, When rank Thersites opes his mastic jaws, We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down.

And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master.

But for these instances:

The specialty of rule hath been neglected; And look how many Grecian tents do stand Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.

When that the general is not like the hive, To whom the foragers shall all repair, What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded.

Th' unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask. The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre.

Observe degree, priority, and place, Insisture, course, proportion, season, form, Office, and custom, in all line of order; And therefore is the glorious planet Sol In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd 90 Amidst the other, whose med'cinable eye Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil, And posts, like the commandment of a king.

Sans check, to good and bad. But when the planets

In evil mixture to disorder wander. What plagues and what portents, what mutiny,

What raging of the sea, shaking of earth, Commotion in the winds! Frights, changes, horrors.

Divert and crack, rend and deracinate, The unity and married calm of states Quite from their fixture! O, when degree is shak'd.

Which is the ladder of all high designs, The enterprise is sick! How could communities,

Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,

Peaceful commerce from dividable shores. The primogenity and due of birth, Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres.

laurels, But by degree, stand in authentic place?

Take but degree away, untune that string, And hark what discord follows! Each thing melts . TIC

In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,

And make a sop of all this solid globe:

And the rude son should strike his father dead:

Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong-

Between whose endless jar justice resides--Should lose their names, and so should justice too.

Then everything includes itself in power. Power into will, will into appetite; And appetite, an universal wolf. So doubly seconded with will and power, Must make perforce an universal prey,

And last eat up himself. Great Agamem-

This chaos, when degree is suffocate, 125 Follows the choking.

And this neglection of degree it is That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose

It hath to climb. The general 's disdain'd By him one step below, he by the next, 130 That next by him beneath; so every step, Exampl'd by the first pace that is sick Of his superior, grows to an envious fever

Of pale and bloodless emulation. And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot, Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length. 136 Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength. Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd

The fever whereof all our power is sick. Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulvsses.

What is the remedy? Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns

The sinew and the forehand of our host, Having his ear full of his airy fame, Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent Lies mocking our designs; with him

Patroclus Upon a lazy bed the livelong day Breaks scurril jests;

And with ridiculous and awkward action— Which, slanderer, he imitation calls— 150 Sometime, great Aga-He pageants us. memnon.

Thy topless deputation he puts on; And like a strutting player whose conceit Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich To hear the wooden dialogue and sound 155 'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage-

Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming He acts thy greatness in; and when he speaks

'Tis like a chime a-mending; with terms unsquar'd,

Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd. Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,

From his deep chest laughs out a loud

applause;
Cries 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard.

165

As he being drest to some oration'.
That's done—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife;
Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me,

Patroclus, 170
Arming to answer in a night alarm'.
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age Must be the scene of mirth: to cough and spit

And, with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget, Snake in and out the rivet. And at this sport

Sir Valour dies; cries 'O, enough,
Patroclus;

Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all In pleasure of my spleen'. And in this fashion

All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes, Severals and generals of grace exact, 180 Achievements, plots, orders, preventions, Excitements to the field or speech for fruce, Success or loss, what is or is not, serves As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain—

Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice—many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place 189
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him; Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war

Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites,
A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint.

To match us in comparisons with dirt, To weaken and discredit our exposure, 195 How rank soever rounded in with danger. Ulyss. They tax our policy and call it

Of their observant toll the commiss

Of their observant toil, the enemies weight—

Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this bed-work, mapp'ry, closetwar;

So that the ram that batters down the wall, For the great swinge and rudeness of his poise,

Enter ÆNEAS.

Agam. What would you fore our tent? Ene. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?

Agam. Even this.

Ene. May one that is a herald and a prince

Do a fair message to his kingly eyes?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm

Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice

Call Agamemnon head and general.

Ene. Fair leave and large security. How

A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?
Agam.

Eine. Ay; 1

And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as Morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phœbus.
Which is that god in office, guiding men?

Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Troyan scorns us, or the men of Troy

Are ceremonious courtiers.

Ane. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd,

As bending angels; that's their fame in peace.

But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,

Good arms, strong Joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord, 238 Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas, Peace, Troyan; lay thy finger on thy lips. The worthiness of praise distains his worth, If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth;

But what the repining enemy commends, That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Æneas?

Ene. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Ene. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.

Enc. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper with him; I bring a trumpet to awake his ear, To set his sense on the attentive bent.

And then to speak.

Speak frankly as the wind: Agam. It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour. 254 That thou shalt know, Troyan, he is awake, He tells thee so himself.

Trumpet, blow loud. Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents:

Ene. Now heavens forfend such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Asam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me touch your hand:

To our payilion shall I lead you, first. Achilles shall have word of this intent: So shall each load of Greece, from tent to tent.

Yourself shall feast with us before you go, And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor. Ulyss. Nestor! 310

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain:

Be you my time to bring it to some shape. Nest. What is't?

Ulvss. This 'tis: Blunt wedges rive hard knots. The seeded pride

That hath to this maturity blown up In rank Achilles must or now be cropp'd Oi, shedding, breed a nuisery of like evil To overbulk us all.

Well, and how? Nest. Ulyss This challenge that the gallant Hector sends.

However it is spread in general name, Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. True. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance

Whose grossness little characters sum up; And, in the publication, make no strain But that Achilles, were his brain as barren As banks of Libya—though, Apollo knows, 'Tis div enough-will with great speed of judement. Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose 330 Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. Why, 'tis most meet. Who may vou else oppose

That can from Hector bring those honours

It not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat.

Yet in this trial much opinion dwells; For here the Troyans taste our dear'st repute

With their fin'st palate; and trust to me, Ulysses,

Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd In this vile action; for the success, Although particular, shall give a scantling Of good or bad unto the general: And in such indexes, although small pricks To their subsequent volumes, there is seen The baby figure of the giant mass Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd He that meets Hector issues from our choice:

And choice, being mutual act of all our souls.

Makes merit her election, and doth boil As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd Out of our virtues; who miscarrying, 351 What heart receives from hence a conquering part,

To steel a strong opinion to themselves? Which entertain'd, limbs are his instru-

In no less working than are swords and bows

Directive by the limbs.

Give pardon to my speech. Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.

Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares

And think perchance they'll sell; if not, the lustre

Of the better yet to show shall show the better,

By showing the worst first. Do not consent That ever Hector and Achilles meet; For both our honour and our shame in this Are dogg'd with two strange followers. 365

Nast. I see them not with my old eyes. What are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,

Were he not proud, we all should wear with thou strikest me thus? him;

But he already is too insolent;

And it were better parch in Afric sun Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes, Should he scape Hector fair. If he were foil'd.

Why, then we do our main opinion crush In taint of our best man. No. make a lott'ry;

And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw 375 The sort to fight with Hector. Among ourselves

Give him allowance for the better man; For that will physic the great Myrmidon, Who broils in loud applause, and make him

His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends. If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off, 381 We'll dress him up in voices; if he fail,

Yet go we under our opinion still That we have better men. But, hit or miss. Our project's life this shape of sense assumes-385 Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Now, Ulysses, I begin to relish thy advice:

And I will give a taste thereof forthwith To Agamemnon. Go we to lum straight, 300 Two curs shall tame each other: pride Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone. [Exeunt.

ACT TWO

Scene I. The Grecian camb.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Aiax. Thersites!

Ther. Agamemnon-how if he had boils full, all over, generally?

Aiax. Thersites !

Ther. And those boils did run—say so. Did not the general run then? Were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog!

Ther. Then there would come some matter from him; I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel, then. [Strikes him. Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord! Ajax. Speak, then, thou whinid'st leaven.

speak. I will beat thee into handsomeness. Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness; but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer Thou canst strike, canst without book. thou? A red murrain o' thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclama-

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense.

Ajax. The proclamation!

Ther. Thou art proclaim'd a fool, I think. Alax. Do not, porpentine, do not: my fingers itch.

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation. Ther. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Prosperpina's beauty—ay, that thou bark'st at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites I

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him. Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Aiax. You whoreson cur! [Strikes him. Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! Thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinico may tutor thee. You scurvy valiant ass! Thou art here but to thrash Troyans, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Alax. You cur! IStrikes him. Ther. Mars his idiot! Do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! Wherefore do you thus?

How now, Thersites! What's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?
Ther. Nay, look upon him.
Achil. So I do. What's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well! why, so I do.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him; for who some ever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee. Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! His evasions have ears thus long. I have bobb'd his brain more than he has beat my bones. I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax—who wears his wit in his belly and his guts in his head-I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say this Ajax-

[Ajax offers to strike him. Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit-

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not—he there; that he; look you there.

Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall— Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's? Ther. No. I warrant you; the fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words. Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not. Ajax. Well, go to, go to. Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was suff'rance: 'twas not voluntary. No man is beaten voluntary. Ajax was here the voluntary. and you as under an impress.

Ther. E'en so; a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch an he knock out either of your brains: 'a were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites? 100 Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestorwhose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes-yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the wars. Achil. What, what?

55

Ther. Yes, good sooth. To Achilles, to Alax, to-Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace! Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus. Ther. I will see you hang'd like clotpoles ere I come any more to your tents. I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools. Exit. Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host.

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the

Will with a trumpet 'twixt our tents and Trov.

To-morrow morning, call some knight to arms That hath a stomach; and such a one that dare

Maintain I know not what; 'tis trash. Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him? Achil. I know not; 'tis put to lott'ry. Otherwise

He knew his man. Ajax. O, meaning you! I will go learn Exeunt. more of it.

Scene II. Troy. Priam's palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches, spent,

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:

' Deliver Helen, and all damage else-As honour, loss of time, travail, expense, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd 90 In hot digestion of this cormorant war— Shall be struck off'. Hector, what say you to't?

Because your speech hath none that tells him so Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers. brother priest; You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons: You know an enemy intends you harm; You know a sword employ'd is perilous, 40 And reason flies the object of all harm. Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds A Grecian and his sword, if he do set The very wings of reason to his heels And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, 45 Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason, Let's shut our gates and sleep. Manhood and honour Should have hare hearts, would they but fat

What's aught but as 'tis valued ? Tro. Hect. But value dwells not in particular will: It holds his estimate and dignity As well wherein 'tis precious of itself As in the prizer. 'Tis mad idolatry To make the service greater than the god: And the will dotes that is attributive To what infectiously itself affects, Without some image of th' affected merit. 60 Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election Is led on in the conduct of my will: My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears. Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores Although my will distaste what it elected, The wife I chose? There can be no evasion To blench from this and to stand firm by honour. We turn not back the silks upon the merchant When we have soil'd them; nor the remaınder viands We do not throw in unrespective sieve. Because we now are full. It was thought meet Will you with Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks: Your breath with full consent bellied his sails: The seas and winds, old wranglers, took a And did him service. He touch'd the ports desir'd; And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and treshness Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning. Why keep we her? The Grecians keep our aunt. Is she worth keeping? Why, she is a pearl Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships, And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants. If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went-As you must needs, for you all cried 'Go, go '-If you'll confess he brought home worthy prize-As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands, And cried 'Inestimable!'-why do you The issue of your proper wisdoms rate. Pri. What noise, what shriek is this?

Pro. 'Tis our mad sister; I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within] Cry, Troyans. Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Troyans, ciy. Lend me ten thousand eyes,

And I will fill them with prophetic tears. Hect. Peace, sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled eld.

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry, Add to my clamours. Let us pay betimes A moiety of that mass of mean to come. Cry, Troyans, cry. Practise your eyes with tears.

Troy must not be, nor goodly Hion stand; Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all. Cry, Troyans, cry, A Helen and a woe! It Cry, cry. Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work

Some touches of remorse, or is your blood So madly hot that no discourse of reason, Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause, 127 Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector, We may not think the justness of each act Such and no other than event doth form it, Nor once deject the courage of oai minds Because Cassandra's mad. Her brain-sick

raptures 122
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Pilam's sons;
And Jove forbid there should be done

As well my undertakings as your counsels; But I attest the gods, your full consent Gave wings to my propension, and cut off All fears attending on so dire a project. For what, alas, can these my single arms? What propugnation is in one man's valour To stand the push and enmity of those This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest, Were I alone to pass the difficulties, And lada as ample power as I have will, 140 Paris should ne'er retract what he hath Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me.

Now to deliver her possession up

On terms of base compulsion! Can it be That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?

There's not the meanest spirit on our party Without a heart to dare or sword to draw When Hulen is defended; nor none so

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well;

And on the cause and question now in hand Have gloz'd, but superficially; not much Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought Unit to hear moral philosophy.

The reasons you allege do more conduce To the hot passion of distemp'red blood Than to make up a free determination 170 'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenue

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice

Of any true decision. Nature craves All dues be rend'red to their owners. Now, What nearer debt in all humanity 175 Than wife is to the huband? If this law Of nature be corrupted through affection; And that great minds, of partial indulgence To their benumbed wills, resist the same; There is a law in each well-order'd nation To curb those raging appetites that are 187 Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen, then, be wife to Sparta's king—As it is known she is—these moral laws of nature and of nations speak aloud 185 To have her back return'd. Thus to persist In doing wrong extenuates not wrong, But makes it much more heavy. Hector's

But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion

Is this, in way of truth. Yet, ne'er the less, My spritely brethren, I propend to you 190 In resolution to keep Helen still; For 'tis a cause that hath no mean depend-Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design.

Were it not glory that we more affected 195 Than the performance of our heaving spleens.

I would not wish a drop of Troyan blood Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,

She is a theme of honour and renown, A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, Whose present courage may beat down our

And fame in time to come canonize us; For I presume brave Hector would not in prayer?

So rich advantage of a promis'd glory 204 As smiles upon the foreliead of this action For the wide world's revenue.

I am yours. Hect. You valiant offspring of great Priamus. I have a roisting challenge sent amongst The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits. I was advertis'd their great general slept, Whilst emulation in the army crept. This, I presume, will wake him.

Scene III. The Grecian camp. Before the I pray thee, what's Thersites? tent of Achilles.

Enter THERSITES, solus.

Ther. How now, Thersites! What, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? He beats me, and I rail at him. O worthy satisfaction! Would it were otherwise: that I could beat him, whilst he rail'd at me! 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer! If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of them-O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods, and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, ye take not that little little less-thanlittle wit from them that they have! which short-arm'd ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver а fly from a spider without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the Neapolitan bone-ache! for that, methinks, is the curse depending on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers; and devil Envy say 'Amen'. What ho! my Lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could 'a rememb'red a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipp'd out of my contemplation; but it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! Heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death. Then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where s Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? Wast thou

Ther. Ay, the heavens hear me! Patr. Amen.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord. Achil. Where, where? O, where? thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

t. Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then [Exeunt. tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then tell me,

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou must tell that knowest. Achil. O, tell, tell!

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agememnon commands Achilles: Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal! Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done. Achil. He is a privileg'd man. Proceed.

Thersites. Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and this Patroclus is a fool positive. Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the Creator. It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Achil. Come, Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. Come in with me, Thersites.

Ther. Here is such patchery, juggling, and such knavery. All the argument is a whore and a cuckold—a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpigo on the Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good subject, and war and lechery confound all! Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR. DIOMEDES, AJAX, and CALCAS.

Agam. Where is Achilles? Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd. my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent our messengers; and we lay by 75 Our appertainings, visiting of him. Let him be told so; lest, perchance, he think We dare not move the question of our place

Or know not what we are.

I shall say so to him. [Exit. Illuss. We saw him at the opening of his tent.

He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, hon-sick, sick of proud heart. You may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride. But why, why? Let him show us a cause. A word, my lord.

[Takes Agamemnon aside. Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulvss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who, Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No; you see he is his argument that has his argument-Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish than their faction. But it was a strong composure a fool could disunite!

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy; his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say he is much sorry

If any thing more than your sport and pleasure

Did move your greatness and this noble state

To call upon him; he hopes it is no other But for your health and your digestion sake.

An after-dinner's breath.

Hear you, Patroclus. We are too well acquainted with these answers:

But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,

Cannot outfly our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath, and much the reason

Why we ascribe it to him. Yet all his virtues,

Not virtuously on his own part beheld, 114 Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss: Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish. Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin

If you do say we think him over-proud under-honest, in And self-assumption greater 120 Than in the note of judgment: and worthier than himself Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on.

Disguise the holy strength of their command.

And underwrite in an observing kind 124 His humorous predominance; yea, watch His pettish lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action

Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add That if he overhold his price so much We'll none of him, but let him, like an engine

Not portable, lie under this report: Bring action hither; this cannot go to war. A stirring dwarf we do allowance give Before a sleeping giant. Tell him so.
Patr. I shall, and bring his answer presently. [Exit.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied:

We come to speak with him. Ulvsses. enter you. [Exit Ulysses.

Ajax. What is he more than another? Agam. No more than what he thinks he is. Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question. 142 Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable. 146

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself. Pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle: and whatever praises itself but in the deed devours the deed in the praise.

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man as I do hate the engend'ring of toads. Nest. [Aside] And yet he loves himself:

is't not strange?

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-DIGEROUS.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely or none; But carries on the stream of his dispose. Without observance or respect of any. 160 In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request.

Untent his person and share the air with us?
Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only.

He makes important; possess'd he is with greatness.

And speaks not to himself but with a pride That quarrels at self-breath. Imagin'd worth

Holds in his blood such swol'n and hot discourse

That 'twixt his mental and his active parts Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages, 170 And batters down himself. What should I say?

He is so plaguy proud that the death tokens of it

Cry 'No recovery'.

Agam. Let Ajax go to him. Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent. 'Tis said he holds you well; and will be led At your request a little from himself. 176 Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so! We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord

That bastes his arrogance with his own

And never suffers matter of the world Enter his thoughts, save such as doth revolve

And ruminate himself-shall he be worshipp'd Of that we hold an idol more than he? No, this thrice-worthy and right valiant lord Shall not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd, Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit, As amply titled as Achilles is.

By going to Achilles.

That were to enlard his fat-already pride, And add more coals to Cancer when he burns

With entertaining great Hyperion. This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid,

And say in thunder 'Achilles go to him'. Nest. [Aside] O, this is well! He rubs the To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy vein of him.

Dio. [Aside] And how his silence drinks up this applause! 106

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist I'll pash him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An 'a be proud with me I'll pheeze his pride. Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hanks upon our quar.el.

And . A palery, resolent ichow! Nest. [Aside] How he describes himself! Alax. Can he not be sociable? Ulyss. [Aside] The raven chides blackness.

Ajax. I'll ler his humours blood. Agam. [Aside] He will be the physician that should be the patient. Ajax. An all men were a my mind-Ulyss. [Aside] Wit would be out of Ajax. 'A should not bear it so, 'a should eat's words first. Shall pride carry it?

fashion.

Nest. [Aside] An 'twould, you'd carry half.

Ulyss. [Aside] 'A would have ten shares. Aiax. I will knead him, I'll make him supple.

Nest. [Aside] He's not yet through warm. Force him with praises; pour in, pour in: his ambition is dry.

Ulyss. [To Agamemnon] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so. Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man-but 'tis before his face: I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so? He is not emulous, as Achilles is. Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter with us thus! Would he were a Troyan! Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now-

Ulyss. If he were proud. Dio. Or covetous of praise.

Ulyss. Ay, or surly horne. Dio. Or strange, or self-affected.

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure:

Praise him that gat thee, she that gave thee suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature

Thrice-fam'd beyond, beyond all erudition: But he that disciplin'd thine arms to fight-Let Mars divide eternity in twain

And give him half; and, for thy vigour, 240 Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield wisdom.

Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts. Nestor,

Instructed by the antiquary times-He must, he is, he cannot but be wise; 200 But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax' and your brain so temper'd.

You should not have the eminence of him. But be as Ajax. Shall I call you tather?

Ajax. Nest. Ay, my good son.

Be sul'd by him, Lord Ajax. Dio. Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hait Achilles Keeps thicket. Please it our great general To call together all his state of war;

Fresh kings are come to Troy. To-morrow We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here's a lord-come knights from east to west

And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep.

Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep [Exeunt.

ACT THREE

Scene I. Troy. Priam's palace.

Music sounds within. Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you-pray you, a word. Do you not follow the young Lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sii, when he goes before me. Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord. Pan. You depend upon a notable gentleman; I must needs praise him.

Szrv. The lord be praised! Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better: I am the Lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honous better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace.

Pan. Grace! Not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles. What music is this? Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend. Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is very sweet queen?

there in person; with him the moital Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul-

Pan. Who, my cousin, Cressida?

Serv. No, su. Helen. Could not you find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Tioilu-. I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business seethes. Serv. Sodden business! There's a stew'd phiase indeed!

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! Fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them-especially to you, fair queen! Fair thoughts be your fair pillow.

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair

words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.

Helen. He is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O. sir-Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very

Par. Well said, my lord. Well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen. My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out. We'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my loid: my dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus-

Helen. My Loid Pandarus, honey-sweet Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to-commends himself most affectionately to you-Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody. It you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen, i' faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence. Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay L care not for such words; no, no. - And, my lord, he desires you that, if the King call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My Lord Pandarus! Pan. What says my sweet queen, my very

Par. What exploit's in hand? Where tenor, and all the gallantry of Troy. sups he to-night?

Helen. Nay, but, my lord-

Pan. What says my sweet queen ?-My cousin will fall out with you.

Helen. You must not know where he

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide. Come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make's excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? No, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy Pan. You spy! What do you spy?-Come, give me an instrument. Now, sweet Helen. Why, this is kindly done. Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris. Pan. He! No. she'll none of him; they two are twain. Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come. I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now. Helen. Ay, ay, prithee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead. Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love. This love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid! Pan. Love! Ay, that it shall, i' faith. 105

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so. [Sings] Love, love, nothing but love, still love, still more!

TTO

For, oh, love's bow Shoots buck and doe: The sh-ft confounds

Not that it wounds, But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry, O ho, they die!

Yet that which seems the wound to kill Doth turn O ho! to ha! ha! he! So dving love lives still.

O ho! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

O ho! groans out for ha! ha! ha!—hey ho!

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love. 124 would fain have arm'd to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Pan. Is this the generation of love: hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers. Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field today? Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, An- her straight.

Helen. He hangs the lip at something. You know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair. Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece. 139 Pan. I will, sweet queen.

Sound a retreat. Par. They're come from the field. Let us to Priam's hall

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you

To help unarm our Hector. His stubborn buckles,

With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel 145 Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do

Than all the island kings-disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant. Paris:

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty Gives us more palm in beauty than we have.

Yea, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Troy. Pandarus' orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and Troilus' Boy, meeting. Pan. How now! Where's thy master?

At my cousin Cressida's? Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O, here he comes. How now, how now!

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy. Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus. I stalk about her door

Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon,

And give me swift transportance to these fields

Where I may wallow in the lily beds Propos'd for the deserver!

Pandar, From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,

And fly with me to Cressid! Pan. Walk here i' th' orchard, I'll bring [Exit. Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.

Th' imaginary relish is so sweet

That it enchants my sense; what will

When that the wat'ry palate tastes indeed Love's thrice-repured nectar? Death, I fear me;

Swooning destruction; or some joy too fine.

Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness,

For the capacity of my ruder powers. I fear it much; and I do fear besides That I shall lose distinction in my joys: As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps

The enemy flying.

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight; you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were fray'd with a sprite. It is the prettiest villain; I'll fetch her. she fetches her breath as short as a newta'en sparrow. Exit.

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace mv bosom.

My heart beats thicker than a feverous

And all my powers do their bestowing lose, Like vassalage at unawares encount'ling The eye of majesty.

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? Shame's a baby.—Here she is now; swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me.-What, are you gone again? You must be watch'd ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you i' th' fills.--Why do you not speak to her?—Come, draw this curtain and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath vou are to offend daylight! An 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now, a kiss in fee-farm! Build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' th' river. Go to, go to. 5

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds; but she'll bereave you o' th' deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'. Come in, come in; I'll go get a fire. Cres. Will you walk in, my lord? [Exit.

Tro. O Cressid, how often have I wish'd me thus !

Cres. Wish'd, my lord! The gods grant-O my loid!

Tro. What should they grant? What makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the tountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eves.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear. To fear the worst oft cures the worse.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear! In all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither? Tio. Nothing, but our undertakings when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say all lovers swear more per-formance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? Such are not we. Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare till ment crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present. We will not name desert before his birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest not truer than Tioilus. 95

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What, blushing still? Have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that; if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord; if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages: your uncle's word and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too: our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won; they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

brings me heart. TIO

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day

For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord.

With the first glance that ever-pardon

If I confess much, you will play the tyrant. I love you now; but till now not so much But I might master it. In faith, I lie;

My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown

Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools! Why have I blabb'd? Who shall be true to us. When we are so unsecret to ourselves? But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you

And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man.

Or that we women had men's privilege 125 Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue.

For in this rapture I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence.

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness

My very soul of counsel. Stop my mouth. Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, i' faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon

'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss. I am asham'd. O heavens! what have I done?

For this time will I take my leave, my lord. Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid!

Pan. Leave! An you take leave till tomorrow morning-Cres. Pray you, content you. Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company. Tro. You cannot shun yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try.

I have a kind of self resides with you; But an unkind self, that it self will leave 145 To be another's fool. I would be gone.

Where is my wit? I know not what I speak. Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love:

And fell so roundly to a large confession 150 To angle for your thoughts; but you are wise-

Or else you love not; for to be wise and love

Cres. Boldness comes to me now and Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O that I thought it could be in a woman-

As, if it can, I will presume in you-To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love : To keep her constancy in plight and youth. Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind That doth renew swifter than blood decays! Or that persuasion could but thus convince îne

That my integrity and truth to you Might be affronted with the match and weight

Of such a winnowed purity in love. How were I then uplifted! but, alas, I am as true as truth's simplicity. 165 And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you. Tro.

O virtuous fight, When right with right wars who shall be most right!

True swains in love shall in the world to come

Approve their truth by Troilus, when their rhymes. Full of protest, of oath, and big compare, Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration-As true as steel, as plantage to the moon. As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant, as earth to th' centre Yet, after all comparisons of truth.

As truth's authentic author to be cited, As true as Troilus' shall crown up the verse

And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be! If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth, 180 When time is old and hath forgot itself, When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up, And mighty states characterless are grated To dusty nothing—yet let memory From false to false, among false maids in love.

Upbraid my falsehood when th' have said
'As false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth, As fox to lamb, or wolf to heifer's calf, Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son '-Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood.

'As false as Cressid'.

140

Pan. Go to, a bargain made; seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand; here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be call'd to the world's end after my name-call them all Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers between Pandars. Say 'Amen'.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

Tro. Amen. Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death. Away And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens

Make demand. Cal. You have a Troyan prisoner call'd Antenor, Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear. Oft have you-often have you thanks therefore-Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange, Whom Troy hath still denied; but this Antenor.

I know, is such a wrest in their affairs That their negotiations all must slack Wanting his manage; and they will almost Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam, In change of him. Let him be sent, great Princes, Agam. What says Achilles? Would he augnt with us?

Nest. Would you, my loid, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord. Agam. The better.

(Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.

Achil. Good day, good day. Men. How do you? How do you? [Exit. Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus? Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit. Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely. They were us'd to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles, To come as humbly as they us'd to creep To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late? 'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune, Must fall out with men too. declin'd is.

Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out

Something not worth in me such rich beholding

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses. I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses!

Now, great Thetis' son! Ulyss. Achil. What are you reading?

A strange fellow here Writes me that man-how dearly ever parted.

How much in having, or without or in-Cannot make boast to have that which he hath.

Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;

As when his virtues shining upon others 100 Heat them, and they retort that heat again To the first giver.

This is not strange, Ulysses. The beauty that is borne here in the face The bearer knows not, but commends itself To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself-That most pure spirit of sense-behold itself,

Not going from itself; but eye to eye opposed

Salutes each other with each other's form: For speculation turns not to itself

Till it hath travell'd, and is mirror'd there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position-It is familiar-but at the author's drift; Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves That no man is the lord of anything, Though in and of him there be much consisting,

Till he communicate his parts to others; Nor doth he of himself know them for Though less than yours in past, must

They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder. As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast, And great Troy shrinking. Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by

As misers do by beggars-neither gave to Good word nor look. What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,

Wherein he puts alms for oblivion, A great-siz'd monster of ingratitudes.

Those scraps are good deeds past, which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon As done. Perseverance, dear my tord, 138 Keeps honour bright. To have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mill In monumental mock'ry. Take the instant way;

For honour travels in a strait so narrow Where one but goes abreast. Keep then the path,

For emulation hath a thousand sons That one by one pursue; if you give way, Or hedge aside from the direct forthright, Like to an ent'red tide they all rush by And leave you hindmost: Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank,

Of this my privacy 190 Achıl. I have strong reasons.

Ulvss. But 'gainst your privacy The reasons are more potent and heroical. 'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known! Ulyss. Is that a wonder?

They think my little stomach to the war 220 And your great love to me restrains you thus.

Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,

And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane, Be shook to airy air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector? Patr. Ay, and pethaps receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake; My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O, then, beware: Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves:

Omission to do what is necessary Seals a commission to a blank of danger: And danger, like an ague, subtly taints Even then when they sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus.

I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him invite the Troyan loids, after the combat.

To see us here unarm'd. I have a woman's longing,

An appetite that I am sick withal, To see great Hector in his weeds of peace; To talk with him, and to behold his visage,

Enter THERSITES.

A labour sav'd!

Ther. A wonder ! Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field asking for himself. Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be? Ther. Why, 'a stalks up and down like a peacock—a stride and a stand; ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning, bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out'; and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' th' combat, he'll break't himself in vain-I said 'Good glory. He knows not me. I said 'Good morrow, Ajax'; and he replies 'Thanks, Aganiemnon'. What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! A man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. Achil. Theu must be my ambassador to him, Thersites. Ther. Who, 1? Why, he'll auswer nobody; he professes not answering. Speaking is for beggais: he wears his tengue in's arms. I will but on his presente. Let Patroclus make his demands to hie, you 259 shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon!

Pair. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Pair. What say you to't?

Ther. God buy you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven of the clock it will go one way or other. Howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare ye well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out a tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knock'd out his brains I know not: but. I am sure, none; unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make cathings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me carry another to his horse: for that's the more capable creature.

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it. I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. Troy. A street.

Enter, at one sule, ÆNEAS, and Servant with a torch; at another, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS. ANTENOR, DIOMEDES the Grecian, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! Who is that there? Dei. It is the Lord Æneas.

.Lue. Is the Prince there in person? Ifad I so good occasion to lie long As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly DUSINCSS Should rob my bed-male of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too. Good morrow. Lord Ænens.

Par A validad Greek, Æneas-take his James :

Did haunt you in the field.

With his face backward. In humane gentleness,

Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome indeed! By Venus' hand I swear No man alive can love in such a sort The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Dio. We sympathise. Jove let Æneas live.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despiteful'st gentle greeting,

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

What business, lord, so early?

Ene. I was sent for to the King; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you: 'twas to bring this Greek

To Calchas' house, and there to render him, For the enfreed Antenor, the fair Cressid. Let's have your company; or, if you please, Haste there before us. I constantly helieve-

Or rather call my thought a certain knowledge-

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night. Rouse him and give him note of our approach.

With the whole quality wherefore; I fear We shall be much unwelcome.

That I assure you: Æne. Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece

Than Cressid borne from Troy.

There is no help: Par. The bitter disposition of the time Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you. Æne. Good morrow, all.

Exit with servant. Par. And tell me, noble Diomed-faith, tell me true, Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship-Who in your thoughts deserves fair Helen best, Myself or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike:

He merits well to have her that doth seek

Not making any scruple of her soilure With such a hell of pain and world of charge;

And you as well to keep her that defend

Not palating the taste of her dishonour, With such a costly loss of wealth and And then you would have tarried. Hark! friends.

He like a puling cuckold would drink up The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece; You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins 65 Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors. Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more;

But he as he, the heavier for a whore. Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman. Dio. She's bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris: For every false drop in her bawdy veins A Grecian's life hath sunk: for every scruple Of her contaminated carrion weight

A Troyan hath been slain; since she could speak.

She hath not given so many good words breath

As for her Greeks and Troyans suff'red Nor suffer others. death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do. Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy: But we in silence hold this virtue well: 79 We'll not commend what we intend to sell. Here lies our way.

Scene II. Troy. The court of Pandarus' house.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down:

He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not: To bed, to bed! Sleep kill those pretty eves.

And give as soft attachment to thy senses 5 As infants' empty of all thought!

Good morrow, then.

Tro. I prithee now, to bed. Cres. Are you aweary of me?

Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day. Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,

And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,

I would not from thee.

Night hath been too brief. Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stavs

As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love

With wings more momentary-swift than thought.

You will catch cold, and curse me.

Prithee tarry. 15 You men will never tarry.

O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off.

there's one up.

Pan. [Within] What's all the doors open here?

Tro. It is your uncle.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. A pestilence on him! Now will he be mocking.

shall have such a life!

Pan. How now, how now! maidenheads? Here, you maid! Where's my cousin Cressid?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle.

You bring me to do, and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what? Let her say what. What have I brought you to do? Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart!

You'll ne'er be good.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? Would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? bugbear take him!

Cres. Did not I tell you? Would he were knock'd i' th' head! [One knocks. Who's that at door? Good uncle, go and

My lord, come you again into my chamber You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha! ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing. [Knock. How earnestly they knock! Pray you come in:

I would not for half Troy have you seen here. [Exeunt Troilus and Cressida. Pan. Who's there? What's the matter?

Will you beat down the door? How now? What's the matter?

Enter ÆNEAS.

Ene. Good morrow, lord, good morrow. Pan. Who's there? My lord Æneas? By my troth,

I knew you not. What news with you so early?

Ene. Is not Prince Troilus here? Pan. Here! What should he do here? Ene. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him.

It doth import him much to speak with me. Pan. Is he here, say you? It's more than I know, I'll be sworn. For my own part, I came in late. What should he do here? 53

Ene. Who !--nay, then. Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you are ware; you'll be so true to him to be false to him. Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro. How now! What's the matter? Ene. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash. There is at hand 60 Paris your brother, and Deiphobus, The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith, Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Diomedes' hand The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded? Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy.

They are at hand and ready to effect it. Tro. How my achievements mock me! I will go meet them; and, my lord Æneas, We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Enc. Good, good, my lord, the secrets of neighbour Pandar

Have not more gift in taciturnity.

Pan. Is't possible? No sooner got but lost? The devil take Antenor! The young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke's neck.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! What's the matter? Who was here?

Pan. Ah, ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? Where's my lord? Gone? Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!

Cres. O the gods! What's the matter? Pan. Pray thee, get thee in. Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death! O, poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, v hat's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, 'hou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Antenor; thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus. 'Twill be his deat 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it. 'Twill be his death;

Cres. O you immortal gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle. I have forgot my father:

I know no touch of consanguinity, No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near

As the sweet Troilus. O you gods divine, Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood.

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death. Do to this body what extremes you can,

But the strong base and building of my love Is as the very centre of the earth, Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep-Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks,

Crack my clear voice with sobs and break my heart,

With sounding 'Troilus'. I will not go from Troy. [Exeunt.

Scene III. Troy. A street before Pandarus' house.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Æneas, Deiphobus. ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour prefix'd

For her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus, Tell you the lady what she is to do, [Exeunt Troilus and Eneas. And haste her to the purpose.

Walk into her house Tro. I'll bring her to the Grecian presently: And to his hand when I deliver her, Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilu-A priest, there off'ring to it his own heart

[Exi Par. I know what 'tis to love, And would, as I shall pity, I could help! Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt Scene IV. Trov. Pandarus' house.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate. Cres. Why tell you me of moderation? The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste And violenteth in a sense as strong -As that which causeth it. How can moderate it?

If I could temporize with my affections Or brew it to a weak and colder palate, The like allayment could I give my grief. My love admits no qualifying dross; No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus!

[Embracing him. Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here 'O heart,' as the When shall we see again? Let me embrace too. goodly saying is,

O heart, heavy heart,

Why sigh'st thou without breaking? where he answers again

Because thou canst not ease thy smart By friendship nor by speaking.

There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse. We see it, we see it. How now, lambs!

Tro. Cressid. I love thee in so strain'd a purity

That the bless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,

More bright in zeal than the devotion which

Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case. Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too? 30 Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Is't possible? Cres. Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents

Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows

Even in the birth of our own labouring breath.

We two, that with so many thousand sighs Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves

With the rude brevity and discharge of one. Injurious time now with a robber's haste Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how.

As many farewells as be stars in heaven, With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them.

He fumbles up into a loose adieu, And scants us with a single famish'd kiss, Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Æne. [Within] My lord, is the lady ready? Tro. Hark! you are call'd. Some say the Genius so Cries 'Come' to him that instantly must die.

Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? Rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by th' root? Exit.

Cres. I must then to the Grecians? Tro.

No remedy. Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!

Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart-

Cres. I true! how now! What wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,

For it is parting from us. I speak not 'Be thou true 'as fearing thee, For I will throw my glove to Death himself That there's no maculation in thy heart; But 'Be thou true' say I to fashion in My sequent protestation: be thou true, 65 And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers

As infinite as imminent! But I'll be true. Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see vou?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet be true. O heavens! 'Be true' again! Cres.

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love. The Grecian youths are full of quality; 75 They're loving, well compos'd with gifts of nature,

And flowing o'er with arts and exercise. How novelties may move, and parts with person.

Alas, a kind of godly jealousy,

[Exeunt.

Which I beseech you call a virtuous sin, Makes me afeard.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then!
In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainly as my merit. I cannot sing, 84

Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk. Nor play at subile games—fair virtues all To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant;

But I can tell that in each grace of these There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive devil

That tempts most cunningly. But be not tempted. 90

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No.

But something may be done that we will not;
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,

When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,

Presuming on their changeful potency.

*Ene. [Within] Nay, good my lord!

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither; And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you. Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? Alas, it is my vice, my fault!

Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,

I with great truth catch mere simplicity; Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns.

With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, DEI-PHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit Is 'plain and true'; there's all the reach of it.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! Here is the lady Which for Antenor we deliver you; when the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand, And by the way possess thee what she is. Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek.

If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword, Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, 115 So please you, save the thanks this prince expects.

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,

Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously 120 To shame the zeal of my petition to thee 814

In praising her. I tell thee, lord of Greece, She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant. I charge thee use her well, even for my charge;

For, by the dicactful Pluto, if thou dost not, Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard.

I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. Ó, be not mov'd, Prince Troilus. Let me be privileg'd by my place and message

To be a speaker free: when I am hence 130 I'll answer to my lust. And know you, lord, I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth

She shall be priz'd. But that you say 'Be't so',

I speak it in my spirit and honour, 'No'.
Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee.

Diomed, 135
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.

Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk, To our own selves bend we our needful talk. [Exeunt Troilus, Cressida, and Diomedes. [Sound trumpet.

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet. Æne. How have we spent this morning! The Prince must think me tardy and remiss, That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come to field with him.

Dei. Let us make ready straight.

Æne. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity

Let us address to tend on Hector's heels. 145
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivairy.

Scene V. The Grecian Camp. Lists set out. Enter Ajax, armed; Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor. and Others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,

Anticipating time with starting courage. Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy, Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appalled air May pierce the head of the great combatant,

And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse. Now crack thy lungs and split thy brazen pipe;

Blow, villain, till thy sphered bias cheek Out-swell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood:

Thou blowest for Hector. [Trumpet sounds. Ulyss. No trumpet answers. Achil. 'Tis but early days.

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA. Agam. Is not youd Diomed, with Calchas daughter? Hivss. 'Tis he, I hen the manner of his gait: He rises on the toe. That spirit of his In aspiration lifts him from the earth. Agam. Is this the lady Cressid? Even she. Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady. Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; 'Twere better she were kiss'd in general. 21 Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.

So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady.

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now;

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment. And parted thus you and your argument. Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss; this, [Kisses her again. mine-

Patroclus kisses you.

O, this is trim! Patr. Paris and I kiss evermore for him. Men. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave.

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive? Patr. Both take and give.

I'll make my match to live, The kiss you take is better than you give; Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot; I'll give you three for one.

Cres. You are an odd man; give even or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady? Every man is odd. Cres. No. Paris is not: for you know 'tis true That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o' th' head. No. I'll be sworn. 45 Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you? Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it. Cres. Why, beg then. Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake give me a kiss Lady, a non. A Ling you to your But with Const' waner. A MARKET OF C ich sense.

Wirst. Fle, fie upou ker k There's language in her eye, her cheek, her Nay, her foot speaks: her wanton spirits look out At every joint and motive of her body.

O these encounterers so glib of tongue That give a coasting welcome ere it comes, And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts To every ticklish reader! Set them down For sluttish spoils of opportunity,

And daughters of the game. [Trumbet within.

All. The Troyans' trumpet.

Enter HECTOR, armed; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, PARIS, HELENUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop. .Ene. Hail, all the state of Greece! What shall be done To him that victory commands? Or do you purpose

A victor shall be known? Will you the knights

Shall to the edge of all extremity Pursue each other, or shall they be divided By any voice or order of the field? Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it? Æne. He cares not: he'll obey conditions. 'Tis done like Hector; securely done, A little proudly, and great deal misprizing The knight oppos'd.

If not Achilles, sir, 75 Æne. What is your name?

If not Achilles, nothing. Achil.Ane. Therefore Achilles. But whate'er, know this:

In the extremity of great and little Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector ;

The one almost as infinite as all, The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well.

And that which looks like pride is courtesy. This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood; In love whereof half Hector stays at home: Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek This blended knight, half Troyan and half Greek.

Achil, A maiden battle then? perceive you!

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle knight,

Stand by our Ajax. As you and Lord Æneas Consent upon the order of their fight, 90 So be it; either to the uttermost, Or else a breath. The combatants being kin

Or else a breath. The combatants being kin Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists. Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Troyan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight;

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word;

Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue;

Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd soon calm'd;
His heart and hand both open and both free; For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows,

Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath;

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous: For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes To tender objects, but he in heat of action Is more vindicative than jealous love. 107 They call him Troilus, and on him erect A second hope as fairly built as Hector. Thus says Æneas, one that knows the youth 110 Even to his inches, and, with private soul,

Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!
Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st;

Awake thee.

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd. There,

Ajax! [Trumpets cease. Dio. You must no more.

Ene. Princes, enough, so please you. Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why, then will I no more. Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,

A cousin-german to great Priam's seed; The obligation of our blood forbids A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:

Were thy commixtion Greek and Troyan so That thou could'st say 'This hand is Grecian all, 125 And this is Troyan; the sinews of this leg All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister Bounds in my father's'; by Jove multipotent,

Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member

Wherein my sword had not impressure made

Of our rank feud; but the just gods gainsay That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,

My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword

Be drained! Let me embrace thee, Ajax. 135 By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms:

Hector would have them fall upon him thus.

Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector. Thou art too gentle and too free a man. I came to kill thee, cousin, and hear hence

A great addition earned in thy death. 141

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,

On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st Oyes

Cries 'This is he 'could promise to himself A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Enc. There is expectance here from both the sides

What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it: The issue is embracement. Ajax, farewell. Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success, As seld I have the chance, I would desire My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish; and great Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me,

And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Troyan part; Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin;

I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.
Agamemnon and the rest of the Greeks come forward.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name by name; 160

But for Achilles, my own searching eyes Shall find him by his large and portly size. Agam. Worthy all arms! as welcome as to one That would be rid of such an enemy. But that's no welcome. Understand more clear, 165 What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion;

But in this extant moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow biasdrawing.

Bids thee with most divine integrity. From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agam. [To Troilus] My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting.

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Who must we answer?

The noble Menelaus. Hect. O you, my lord? By Mars his gauntlet, thanks!

Mock not that I affect the untraded oath: Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove.

She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. O, pardon; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Troyan, seen thee oft,

Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth; and I have seen thee,

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed, Despising many fortests and subduements, When thou hast hung thy advanced sword

i' th' air. Not letting it decline on the declined: That I have said to some my standers-by 'Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!' 191 And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath.

When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in.

Like an Olympian wrestling. This have I seen:

But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel. I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,

And once fought with him. He was a soldier good,

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all, Never like thee. O, let an old man embrace As I would buy thee, view thee limb by thee:

And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents. Ene. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle.

That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time.

Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha!

By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow.

Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time. Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands. When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses. well.

Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Troyan dead,

Since first I saw yourself and Diomed In Ilion on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you tren what would ensue.

My prophecy is but half his journey yet. For vonder walls, that pertly front your town,

Youd towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds.

Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you. There they stand yet; and modestly I think

The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost A drop of Grecian blood, 'the end crowns all:

And that old common arbitrator, Time, Will one day end it.

So to him we leave it Ulvss. Most gentle and most valiant Hecker welcome.

After the General, I beseech you next To feast with me and see me at my tent Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Utymes. thou!

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee; I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,

And quoted joint by joint.

Is this Achilles? Hect. Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee; let me look on thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill. Nay, I have done already. Hect. Achil. Thou art too brief. I will the second time.

limb. Hect. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er; But there's more in me than thou understand'st.

Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye? Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body

Whether there, or Shall I destroy him? there, or there?

That I may give the local wound a name.

And make distinct the very breach whereout 245

Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens.

Hect. It would discredit the blest gods, proud man.

To answer such a question. Stand again. Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly As to prenominate in nice conjecture 250 Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee yea.

Achil. I tell thee yea.

Hact. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well:

For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;

But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,

1'll kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag.
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words, Or may I never-

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin; 260 And you, Achilles, let these threats alone Till accident or purpose bring you to't. You may have every day enough of Hector, If you have stomach. The general state, I fear.

Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you let us see you in the field:

We have had pelting wars since you refus'd The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector? To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death; To-night all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match. 270

Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;

There in the full convive we; afterwards, As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall concur together, severally entreat him. Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow. 275

That this great soldier may his welcome know.

[Excunt all but Trollus and Ulysses.
Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech
you,

In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus.

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night, Who neither looks upon the heaven nor earth.

But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent, 285 To bring me thither? Ulyss. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me of what honour was This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there

That wails her absence?

Tro. O, sir, to such as boasting show their scars

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?

She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:

But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. The Grecian camp. Before the tent of Achilles.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,

Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow. Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy!
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?
Ther. The surgeon's box or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said Adversity! and what needs these tricks?

Ther. Prithee, be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk; thou art said to be Achilles' male variet.

Pair. Male varlet, you rogue! What's that?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now, the rotten diseases of the south, the gutsgriping ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel in the back, lethangies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, limekilns i' th' palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt; you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No! Why art thou, then, exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleid slik, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse.

thou? Ah, how the poor world is pest'ret with such water-flies—diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall! Ther, Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted That go or tarry.

Quite Agam. Good n

From my great purpose in to-morrow' battle.

Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba, A token from her daughter, my fair love, Both taxing me and gaging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break

Fall Greeks; fail fame; honour or go o stay;

My major vow lies here, this I'll obey. Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;

This night in banqueting must all be spent Away, Patroclus! [Exit with Patroclus.

Ther. With too much blood and too little brain these two may run mad; but, if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails, but he has not so much brain as ear-wax; and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds, a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg-to what form but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox. To an ox, were nothing: he is both cx and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus, I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hey-day! sprites and fires!

Enter Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Menelaus, and Diomedes, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;
There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you. 05

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Re-enter ACHILLES.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome

Princes all.

Agam. So now, fair Prince of Troy, I bid good night;

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus. Ther. Sweet draught! 'Sweet 'quoth 'a? Sweet sink, sweet sewer!

Achil. Good night and welcome, both at once, to those

That go or tarry.

Agam. Good night.
[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too,
Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business,

The tide whereof is now. Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. [Aside to Troilus] Follow his torch; he goes to Calchas' tent;

I'll keep you company.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me. Hect. And so, good night. [Ext Diomedes; Ulysses and Troilus following. Achil. Come, come, enter my tent. 55

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses. He will spend his mouth and promise, like Brabbler the hound; but when he performs, astronomers toretell it: it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector than not to dog him. They say he keeps a Troyan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent. I'll after. Nothing but lechery! All incontinent varlets!

[Exit.

SCEND II. The Grecian camp. Before Calchas' tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho? Speak. Cal. [Within] Who calls?
Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?
Cal. [Within] She comes to you.

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance; after them THERSITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now, my charge!

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! Hark, a word with you. [Whispers.

Tro. Yea, so familiar!

bu. Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember ?

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA Cres. Remember? Yes. Dio. Nav. but do, then; And let your mind be coupled with your words. Tro. What shall she remember? Ulyss. List! Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly. Ther. Roguery! Dio. Nay, then-Cres. I'll tell you what-Dio. Fo, fo! come, tell a pin; you are a forsworn-Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you I will not be myself, nor have cognition have me do? Ther. A juggling trick, to be secretly open. Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me? Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath: Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek. Dio. Good night. Tro. Hold, patience! Ulyss. How now, Troyan! 30 Cres. Diomed! Dio. No. no, good night; I'll be your fool no more. Tro. Thy better must. Cres. Hark! a word in your ear. Tro. O plague and madness! 35 Ulyss. You are moved, Prince; let us depart, I pray, Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself To wrathful terms. This place is danger-The time right deadly; I beseech you, go. Tro. Behold, I pray you. Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off; You flow to great distraction; come, my lord. Tro. I prithee stay. Ulyss. You have not patience; come. Tro. I pray you, stay; by hell and all hell's torments. I will not speak a word. Dio. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger. Tro. Doth that grieve thee? O withered truth! Ulyss. How now, my lord? Tro. By Jove, I will be patient. 40 Cres. Guardian! Why, Greek! Dio. Fo, fo! adieu! you palter. Cres. In faith, I do not. Come hither once again. Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something; will you go? You will break out. She strokes his cheek. Tro. Ulvss. Come, come.

There is between my will and all offences A guard of patience. Stay a little while. 54 Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump and potato finger, tickles these together! Fry, lechery, fry! Dio. But will you, then?

Cres. In faith, I will, lo; never trust me else.

Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it. [Exit.

Cres. I'll fetch you one.

Ulyss. You have sworn patience. Fear me not, my lord: Of what I feel. I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now! Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve. 65 Tro. O beauty! where is thy faith? Ulyss. My lord! Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will. Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold it well.

He lov'd me-O false wench !- Give't me again. Dio. Whose was't? Cres. It is no matter, now I ha't again. I will not meet with you to-morrow night. I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more. Ther. Now she sharpens.

whetstone.

Dio. I shall have it. What, this? Cres.

Dio. Av. that. Cres. O all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge!

Thy master now lies thinking on his bed Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my glove.

And gives memorial dainty kisses to it. As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from

He that takes that doth take my heart withal.

Dio. I had your heart before; this follows it.

Tro. I did swear patience.

Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith, you shall not;

I'll give you something else. Dio. I will have this. Whose was it?

Cres. It is no matter. Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.

Cres. 'Twas one's that lov'd me better than you will.

But, now you have it, take it.

challenge it.

Dio. Whose was it? Cres. By all Diana's waiting women youd, And by herself, I will not tell you whose.

Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my heim, Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak And grieve his spirit that dares not a word:

Tro. Wert thou the devil and wor'st it on thy horn. It should be challeng'd.

Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; and own eyes?' vet it is not:

I will not keep my word.

Why, then farewell Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.

Cres. You shall not go. One cannot speak a word

But it straight starts you.

Dio. I do not like this fooling, 100 Ther. Nor I, by Pluto; but that that likes not you Pleases me best.

Dio. What, shall I come? The hour-Cres. Ay, come—O Jove! Do come. I shall be plagu'd.

Dio. Farewell till then.

Cres. Good night. I prithee come. [Exit Diomedes.

Troilus, farewell! One eye yet looks on thee: But with my heart the other eye doth see.

Ah, poor our sex! this fault in us I find, The error of our eye directs our mind. What error leads must err; O, then con-

Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude.

Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more. Unless she said 'My mind is now turn'd whore'. Ulyss. All's done, my lord.

It 15

Ulvss. Tro. To make a recordation to my soul Of every syllable that here was spoke. 115 But if I tell how these two did coact, Shall I not lie in publishing a truth? Sith yet there is a credence in my heart. An esperance so obstinately strong, That doth invert th' attest of eyes and ears; As if those organs had deceptious functions Created only to calumniate. Was Cressid here?

Ulvss.

I cannot conjure, Troyan. Tro. She was not, sure.

Ulyss. Most sure she was. Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord. Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood.

Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme,

For depravation, to square the general sex By Cressid's rule. Rather think this not In his descent than shall my prompted Cressid. 131

Ulyss. What hath she done, Prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

Ther. Will 'a swagger himself out on's

Tro. This she? No; this is Diomed's Cressida.

If beauty have a soul, this is not she; If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimonies, If sanctimony be the gods' delight,

If there be rule in unity itself,

This was not she. O madness of discourse, That cause sets up with and against itself! Bifold authority! where reason can revolt Without perdition, and loss assume all reason

Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid. Within my soul there doth conduce a fight Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate

Divides more wider than the sky and earth; And yet the spacious breadth of this division

Admits no oritex for a point as subtle As Ariachne's broken woof to enter. Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates:

Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven.

Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself:

The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd:

And with another knot, five-finger-tied, 155 The fractions of her faith, oits of her love. The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy relics

Why stay we, then? Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss, May worthy Troilus be halfattach'd

With that which here his passion doth express? Tro. Av. Greek; and that shall be divulged well In characters as red as Mars his heart Inflam'd with Venus. Never did young man fancy With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love, So much by weight hate I her Diomed. That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm:

Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill

My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout Which shipmen do the hurricano call, 170

Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun, Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear sword Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy. 175

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, And they'll seem glorious. O, contain yourself; Ulvss.

Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord. Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;

home.

Tro. Have with you, Prince. Mv courteous lord, adieu.

Farewell, revolted fair !- and, Diomed. Stand fast and wear a castle on thy head. Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates. Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt Troilus, Eneas, and Ulysses. Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this whore; the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery! Still wars and lechery! Nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them! [Exit.

Scene III. Troy. Before Priam's balace. Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd To stop his ears against admonishment?

Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day. Hect. You train me to offend you; get vou in.

By all the everlasting gods, I'll go. And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day. Hect. No more, I say.

Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector? And. Here, sister, arm'd, and bloody in intent.

Consort with me in loud and dear petition, Pursue we him on knees; for I have dreamt

Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Spur them to ruthful work, rein them from Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O, 'tis true!

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound. Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother!

Hect. Be gone, I say. The gods have heard me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows:

They are polluted off'rings, more abhorr'd Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O, be persuaded! Do not count it

To hurt by being just. It is as lawful, 20 For we would give much, to use violent thefts

And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow:

But vows to every purpose . ist not hold. Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hold you still, I say. 25 Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate.

Life every man holds dear; but the dear man

Holds honour far more precious dear than lıfe.

Enter TROULUS.

How now, young man! Mean'st thou to fight to-day?

Cassandra, call my father to And. persuade. [Exit Cassandra. Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth; I am to-day i' th' vein of chivalry.

Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong.

And tempt not yet the brushes of the war. Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy.

I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy. Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you

Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? Chide me for it.

When many times the captive Tro. Grecian falls, Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword.

You bid them rise and live.

Hect. O, 'tis fair play!

Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now ! how now !

Tro. For th' love of all the gods, Let's leave the hermit Pity with our mother;

And when we have our armours buckled on. The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords, ruth I

Hect. Fie, savage, sie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars. Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me? Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars Beck'ning with fiery truncheon my retire; Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees. Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears: Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way. But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him

He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,

Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,

Fall all together.

Come. Hector, come, go back. Pri. Thy wife hath dreamt; thy mother hath had visions;

Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt To tell thee that this day is ominous. Therefore, come back.

Æneas is a-field: Hect. And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks, Even in the faith of valour, to appear This morning to them.

Ay, but thou shalt not go. 70 Pri. Hect. I must not break my faith. You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir, Let me not shame respect; but give me

To take that course by your consent and

Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam, Cas. O Priam, yield not to hun!

Do not, dear father. And. Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you.

Upon the love you bear me, get you in. Exit Andromache.

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl

Makes all these bodements.

O, farewell, dear Hector ! 80 Cas. Look how thou diest. Look how thy eye turns pale.

Look how thy wounds do bleed at many vents.

Hark how Troy roars; how Hecuba cries out;

How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth;

Behold distraction, frenzy, and amaze-

Like witless antics, one another meet, And all cry, Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away, away!

Hector I Cas. Farewell!-yet, soft! take my leave.

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim.

Go in, and cheer the town; we'll forth, and fight, Do deeds worth praise and tell you them at night.

Pri. Farewell. The gods with safety stand about thee! [Exeunt severally Priam and Hector. Alarums.

They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe.

I come to lose my arm or win my sleeve.

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? Do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter come from youd poor girl.

she there?

Tro. Let me read. Pan. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the toolish fortune of this girl, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' th's days; and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that unless a man were curs'd I cannot tell what to think on't. What says

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart; Th' effect doth operate another way.

[Tearing the letter. Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together.

My love with words and errors still she feeds,

But edifies another with her deeds.

Pan. Why but heare you.

Tro. Hence broker-lackey. Ignominy and shame

Pursue thy life and live aye with thy name!] [Exeunt severally.

Scene IV. The plain between Troy and the Grecian camb.

Enter THERSITES. Excursions.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable variet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm. I would fain see them meet, that that same young Troyan ass that loves the whore there might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain with the sleeve back to the dissembling luxurious drab of a sleeve-less errand. A th' t'other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses-is not prov'd worth a blackberry. They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles; and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following,

Soft! here comes sleeve, and t'other.

Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Stvx

I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire. I do not fly: but advantageous care Withdrew me from the odds of multitude. Have at thee.

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian; now for thy whore, Troyan-now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt Troilus and Diomedes fighting.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou. Greek? Art thou for Hector's match?

Art thou of blood and honour?

Ther. No. no-I am a rascal: a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee. Live. Exit. Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. Exit.

SCENE V. Another part of the plain.

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse:

Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid. Fellow, commend my service to her beauty; Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Troyan,

And am her knight by proof. Serv.

I go, my lord. Exit.

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Poly-

Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margarelon

Hath Doreus prisoner,

And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam, Upon the pashed corses of the kings Epistrophus and Cedius. Polixenes is slain; Amphimacus and Thoas deadly hurt: Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruis'd, The dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers. Haste we, Diomed. 15 To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

There is a thousand Hectors in the field: Now here he fights on Galathe his horse, 20 And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot.

And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,

And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,

Fall down before him like the mower's swath. Here, there, and everywhere, he leaves and

With such a careless force and forceless care As if that luck, in very spite of cunning. Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit. Dio. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together. [Exit.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector? Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face: Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.

Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.

Scene VI. Another part of the plain. Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! Where's Troilus? Ajax. What wouldst thou? Dio I would correct him. Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office

Fre that correction. Troilus, I say! What, Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! Turn thy false face, thou traitor,

And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse.

Dio. Ha! art thou there?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone. Stand. Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize. I will not look upon. Tro. Come, both, you cogging Greeks; have at you both. [Exeunt fighting

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my voungest brother!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now do I see thee, ha! Have at thee, Hector!

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Troyan.

Be happy that my arms are out of use; My rest and negligence betriends thee now, But thou anon shalt hear of me again; Hxit. Till when, go seek thy fortune. Fare thee well.

Hect. I would have been much more a fresher man.

Had I expected thee.

Re-enter TROILUS.

How now, my brother! Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas. Shall it be? No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven, He shall not carry him; I'll be ta'en too, Or bring him off. Fate, hear me what I say : I reck not though thou end my life to-day. IExit.

Enter One in armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark.

No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour well:

I'll frush it and uplock the rivets all But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide?

Why then, fly on: I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Another part of the plain.

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons:

Mark what I say. Attend me where I wheel; Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath;

And when I have the bloody Hector found,

Empale him with your weapons round about:

In tellest manner execute your arms. Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye. It is decreed Hector the great must die. [Exeunt.

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting; then THERSITES.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckoldmaker are at it. Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo! now my double-hern'd Spartan! 'loo, Paris, 'loo! The bull has the gaine. Ware horns, ho! [Exeunt Paris and Menelaus.

Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight, Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's. Ther. I am a bastard too: I love bastards. I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in everything illegitimate. bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment. Farewell, bastard. Exit.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward!

SCENE VIII. Another part of the plain. Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrified core so fair without, Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life. Now is my day's work done: I'll take good breath:

Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death! Disaims.

Enter ACHILLES and his Myrmidons.

Achil. Look. Hector, how the sun begins to set:

How ugly night comes breathing at his heels:

Even with the vall and dark'ning of the sun,

To close the day up, Hector's life is done. Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this vantage, Greek. Achil. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man I seek. Hector falls.

So. Ilion, fall thou next! Come, Troy, sink down;

Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.

On, Myrmidons, and cry you all amain Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain'. [A retreat sounded.

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker-lackey. Ignominy and shame

Pursue thy life and live age with thy name! [Exeunt all but Pandarus.

Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones! O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despis'd! O traitors and bawds. how earnestly are you set a work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so lov'd, and the performance so loathed? What verse for it? What instance for it? Let me see-

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing Till he hath lost his honey and his sting; And being once subdu'd in armed tail. Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail. Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall, Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall:

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade, Some two months hence my will shall here be made.

It should be now, but that my fear is this, Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss. Till then I'll sweat and seek about for eases, And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

ACT ONE

Scene I. Rome. A street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

1 Cit. You are all resolv'd rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolv'd, resolv'd.

1 Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know't, we know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict? All. No more talking on't; let it be done. Away, away!

2 Cit. One word, good citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us; if they would yield us but the superfluity while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too The leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes ere we become rakes; for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge. 2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius? 1 Cit. Against him first; he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously he did it to that end; though soft-conscienc'd men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations: he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within] What shouts are these? The other side o' th' city is risen. Why stay we prating here? To th' Capitol!

All. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always lov'd the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough; would all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you

With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak. I pray you.

1 Cit. Our business is not unknown to th' Senate: they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know we have strong arms too.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here. What's the matter? Mess. The news is, sir, the Volsces are in arms.

Mar. I am glad on't; then we shall ha' means to vent

Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders. Enier Cominius, Titus Lartius, with other Enter Cominius, Titus Lartius, with other Senators; Junius Brutus and Sicinius Velutus.

1 Sen. Marcius, 'tis true that you have lately told us:

The Volsces are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader, Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to't. I sin in envying his nobility;

And were I anything but what I am,

I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together? 230 Mar. Were half to half the world by th' ears, and he Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make Only my wars with him. He is a lion That I am proud to hunt.

1 Sen. Then, worthy Marcius, Attend upon Cominius to these wars. 235 Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is; And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.

What, art thou stiff? Stand'st out?

Lart. No, Caius Marcius;
I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with

[To Marcius] Follow Cominius; we must follow you;

Right worthy you priority.

Com. Noble Marcius! 245

1 Sen. [To the Citizens] Hence to your homes; be gone.

Mar. Nay, let them follow. The Volsces have much corn: take these rats thither

To gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutineers,

Your valour puts well forth; pray follow.

[Citizens steal away. Exeunt all but

Sic. Nay, but his taunts!

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.

Sic. Bemock the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him! He is grown

Too proud to be so valiant.

Sic. Such a nature,

His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Commius. 261

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims—

Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcius.

Though Marcius earn'd them not; and all his faults

To Marcius shall be honours, though indeed In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence and hear How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion,

More than his singularity, he goes Upon this present action.

Bru. Let's along.

Scene II. Corioli. The Senate House.

Enter Tullus Aufidius with Senators of Corioli.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are ent'red in our counsels And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours? What ever have been thought on in this

That could be brought to bodily act ere

I have the letter here; yes, here it is:

Our army's in the field: 1 Sen. We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready

To answer us.

Nor did you think it folly Auf. To keep your great pretences veil'd till

They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,

It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery

We shall be short'ned in our aim, which Th'have not prepar'd for us.

O, doubt not that! 30 I speak from certainties. Nay more, Some parcels of their power are forth already.

And only hitherward. I leave your honours. If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet, 'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike Till one can do no more.

The gods assist you! Auf. And keep your honours safe!

1 Sen. Farewell. Farewell. 2 Sen. All. Farewell.

[Exeunt.

Scene III. Rome. Marcius' house. Enter Volumnia and Virgilia, mother and wife to Marcius; they set them down on two low stools and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing, or express yourself in a more comfortable sort. If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness pluck'd all gaze his way; when, for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I, considering how honour would become such a person—that it was no better than picture-like to hang by th' wall, if renown made it not stir-was pleas'd to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him, from whence he return'd his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he does your little son?

he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam, how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Maicius. I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed you shall not.

Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum: See him pluck Aufidius down by th' hair; As children from a bear, the Volsces shunning him. Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call

Come on, you cowards! You were got in fear.

Though you were born in Rome'. His bloody brow

With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes. Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow

Or all or lose his hire. Vir. His bloody brow? O Jupiter, no blood!

Vol. Away, you fool! It more becomes a man Than gilt his trophy. The breasts of Hecuba, When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier

Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood

Grecian sword, contemning, Tell Valeria

We are fit to bid her welcome.

Exit Gentlewoman. Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee

And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and an Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam!

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship. 50 Val. How do you both? You are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How Vir. I thank your ladyship: well, good

Vol. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum than look upon his school master. Val. O' my word, the father's sen! I'l swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth I look'd upon him a Wednesday half an hour together; has such a confirm'd countenance! I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it he let it go again, and after it again, and over and over he comes, and up again, catch'd it again: or whether his fall enrag'd him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it. O, I warrant, how he mammock'd it!

Vol. One on's father's moods.

Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors! Vol. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers: but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet they say all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come, I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband. 90 Vir. O, good madam, there can be none

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: the Volsces against whom have an army forth: Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power. Your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam: I will obey you in everything hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady; as she is now. she will but disease our better muth. 105 Val. In troth, I think she would. Fare you well, then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithee, Virgilia, turn thy solemness out of door and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed I must not. I wish you much mirth. Val. Well then, farewell. Exeunt.

Scene IV. Before Corioli.

Enter MARCIUS, TITUS LARTILS, with drum and colours, with Captains and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news; a wagerthey have met.

Lart. My horse to yours-no.

Mar. 'Tis done. Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke as vet.

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you. Lart. No, I'll nor sell nor give him; lend you him I will

For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Within this nule and half. Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work, That we with smoking swords may march from hence To help our fielded friends! Come, blow thy blast.

They sound a parley. Enter two Senators with Others, on the walls of Corioli.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls? 1 Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he:

That's lesser than a little. [Drum afar off] Hark, our drums

Are bringing forth our youth. We'll break our walls

Rather than they shall pound us up; our gates,

Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes;

They'll open of themselves. [Alarum far off] Hark you far off!

There is Aufidius. List what work he makes Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O, they are at it! Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho !

Enter the army of the Volsces.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forti their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts and fight

With hearts more proof than shields. Ad vance, brave Titus.

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,
Which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on, my fellows. He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsce

And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The Romans are beat back to their trenches. Re-enter MARCIUS, cursing.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you,

You shames of Rome! you herd of—Boils and plagues

Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd Farther than seen, and one infect another Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese

That bear the shapes of men, how have you run 35

From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell!

All hurt behind! Backs red, and faces pale

With flight and agued fear! Mend and charge home,

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe And make my wars on you. Look to't.

Come on;

If you'll stand fast we'll beat them to their wives.

As they us to our trenches. Follow me.

Another alarum. The Volsces fly, and Marcius follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are ope; now prove good seconds;

'Tis for the followers fortune widens them, Not for the fliers. Mark me, and do the like.
[Marcius enters the gates.

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness; not I.

2 Sol. Not I. [Marcius is shut in. 1 Sol. See, they have shut him in. All. To th' pot. I warrant him.

To th' pot, I warrant him.
[Alarum continues.

Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?
All. Slain, sir, doubtless.
1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,

With them he enters; who, upon the sudden,

Clapp'd to their gates. He is himself alone, To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow!
Who sensibly outdares his senseless sword,

And when it hows stand'st up. Thou art left, Marcius;

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou ait, 56 Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier

Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible Only in strokes, but with thy grim looks and

The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world

Were teverous and did tremble.

Re-enter Marcius, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1 Sol. Look, sir.

Last. O, 'tis Marcius!

Let's tetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight, and all enter the city.

Scene V. Within Corioli. A street.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

2 Rom. And I this.

3 Rom. A muriain on't! I took this for silver. [Alarum continues still afar off.

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS with a trumpetor.

Mar. See here these movers that do prize their hours

At a crack'd drachma! Cushions, leaden spoons,

Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would

Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up. Down with them! [Exeunt pillagers. And hark, what noise the general makes! To him!

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufulius, 10 Piercing our Romans; then, valuant Titus, take

Convenient numbers to make good the city;

Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste
To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st; Thy exercise hath been too violent 15 For a second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not; My work hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well;

The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me. To Aufidius thus

I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee, and her great charms 21

Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman,

Scene VI. Near the camp of Cominius. Enter COMINIUS, as it were in retire, with Soldiers.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news? Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle; I saw our party to their trenches driven, And then I came away.

Though thou speak'st truth. Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums.

How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,

And bring thy news so late?

Spies of the Volsces Mess. Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter Marcius.

He has the stamp of Marcius, and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late? Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor

More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue

From every meaner man.

Come I too late? Com. Av. if you come not in the blood of others.

But mantled in your own.

O! let me clip ye Mar. In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart As merry as when our nuptial day was done.

And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors. How is't with Titus Larius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:

Condemning some to death and some to exile;

Ransoming him or pitying, threat'ning th' other:

Holding Corioli in the name of Rome Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash. To let him slip at will.

Where is that slave Com. Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?

Mar. Let him alone: The Roman He did inform the truth. But for our gentlemen.

The common file—a plague! tribunes for them!

The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge

From rascals worse than they.

But how prevail'd you? Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? Are you lords o' th' field?

If not, why cease you till you are so ? Com.

Marcins. We have at disadvantage fought, and did Retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side

They have plac'd their men of trust? Com. As I guess, Marcius,

Their bands i' th' vaward are the Antiates. Of their best trust; o'er them Autidius. Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you, 55 By all the battles wherein we have fought. By th' blood we have shed together, by th' vows

We have made to endure friends, that you directly

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates; And that you not delay the present, but, 6. Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts.

We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish You were conducted to a gentle bath And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking: take your choice of those

That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they That most are willing. If any such be hereScene 6] CORIOLANTIS

They all shout and wave their swords, take him up in their aims and cast up their cabs. O. me alone! Make you a sword of me? If these shows be not outward, which of you But is four Volsces? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Autidius A shield as hard as his. A certain number, Though thanks to all, must I select from all: the rest

And four shall quickly draw out my command.

Scene VII. The gates of Corroli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with drum and trumpet toward Cominius and Caius Marcius, enters with a Lieutenant, other Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded; keep vour duties

As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch

Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve

For a short holding. If we lose the field We cannot keep the town.

Lieut. Fear not our care, sir. 5 Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon's. Our guider, come; to th' Roman camp conduct us. I Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. A field of battle between the Roman and the Volscian camps.

Alarum, as in battle. Enter MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS at several doors.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee

Worse than a promise-breaker.

We hate alike: Not Airic owns a serpent I abhor

Auf. Wert thou the Hector That was the whip of your biagg'd progeny, Thou shoulds' not scape me here.

[Here they fight, and certain Volsces come in the aid of Aufidius. Marcius fights till they be driven in breathless. Officious, and not valiant, you have sham'd me In your condemned seconds. Exeunt.

SCENE IX. The Roman camp.

Flourish. Alarum. A retreat is sounded. Enter, at one door, Cominius with the Romans; at another door, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scart.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work, Thou't not believe thy deeds; but I'll report it Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles;

Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug.

I' th' end admire; where ladies shall be trighted

And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull tribunes,

That with the fusty pleberans hate thine honours, Shall say against their hearts 'We thank the gods Our Rome hath such a soldier'.

Yet cam'st thou to a morsel of this teast, 10 Having fully din'd before.

Enter Titus Lartius, with his Power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O General,

Here is the steed, we the caparison. Hadst thou beheld-

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart

To hear themselves rememb'red.

Com. Should they not, 29
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses—

Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store—of all

The treasure in this field achiev'd and city, We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth Before the common distribution at

Mar. I thank you, General,
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword. I do refuse it,
And stand upon my common part with those

That have beheld the doing.

[A long flourish. They all cry 'Marcius, Marcius!' cast up their caps and lances. Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

May these same instruments which you profane

Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall

Made all of false-fac'd soothing. When steel grows

Soft as the parasite's silk, let him be made An overture for th' wars. No more, I say. For that I have not wash'd my nose that bled.

Or foil'd some debile wretch, which without note

Here's many else have done, you shout me forth

As if I lov'd my little should be dieted

In praises sauc'd with lies.

Cor. I will go wash; And when my face is fair you shall perceive

Whether I blush or no. Howbeit, I thank you;

I mean to stride your steed, and at all times To undercrest your good addition To th' fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent; Where, ere we do repose us, we will write To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back. Send us to Rome The best, with whom we may articulate For their own good and ours.

To give my poor host freedom.

Auf. Condition!

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot, Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition? 3 What good condition can a treaty find Scene 10] CORIOLANUS

I' th' part that is at mercy? Five times, a lamb. You two are old men; tell me one Marcius.

I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me;

encounter

As often as we eat. By th' elements, If e'er again I meet him beard to beard. He's mine or I am his. Mine emulation Hath not that honour in't it had; for where

I thought to crush him in an equal force. True sword to sword, I'll potch at him some way,

Or wrath or craft may get him.

1 Sol. He's the devil. Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd

With only suff'ring stain by him; for him Shall fly out of itself. Nor sleep nor sanciuary,

Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol, 20 The prayers of priests nor times of sacrifice, Embarquements all of tury, shall lift up Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst My hate to Marcius. Where I find him, were it

At home, upon my brother's guard, even there.

Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to th' city:

Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must Be hostages for Rome.

Will not you go? 1 Sol. Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove; I pray you-

'Tis south the city mills-bring me word thither

How the world goes, that to the pace of it I may spur on my journey.

1 Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Rome. A public place.

Enter MENENIUS, with the two Tribunes of the people. Sicinius and Brutus.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love? Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him, as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baes like thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor And wouldst do so, I think, should we in that you two have not in abundance? 15 Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stor'd with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boast-

Men. This is strange now. Do you two know how you are censured here in the city -I mean of us o' th' right-hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censur'd? Men. Because you talk of pride nowwill you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter: for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience. Give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures-at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride. O that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O that you could!

Both. What then, sir?

Med. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates-alias tools-as any in Rome. Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too. Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaving Tiber in't; said to be something imperfect in tavouring the first complaint, hasty and tinder-like upon too trivial motion; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such wealsmen as you are-I cannot call you Lycurguses-it the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worships have deliver'd the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, vet they lie deadly that tell you you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known ike well enough too? What harm can your to bisson conspectuities glean out of this Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like character, if I be known well enough too? 60 enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs; you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fossetseller, and then rejourn the controversy of threepence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinch'd with the colic, you make faces like mummers, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing. All the peace you make in their cause is calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol. 77

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a botcher's cushion or to be entomb'd in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion; though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. God-den to your worships. More of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians. I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[Brutus and Sicinius go aside.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria. How now, my as fair as noble ladies-and the moon, were she earthly, no noblerwhither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home? Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation. Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee. Hoo! Marcius coming home!

Vol., Vir. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another, his wife another; and I think there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night. A letter for me?

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you;

Men. A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician. The 838

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricutic and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? He was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O, no, no, no.

Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I too, if it he not too much. Brings 'a victory in his pocket? The wounds become him. Vol. On's brows, Menenius, he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplin'd Aufidius soundly? Vol. Titus Laitius writes they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that; an he had stay'd by him, I would not have been so fidius'd for all the chests in Corioli and the gold that's in them. Is the Senate possess'd of this? 125

Vol. Good ladies, let's go. Yes, yes, yes: the Senate has letters from the General. wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war; he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Val. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous! Ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, waw. Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true. Where is he wounded ? [To the Tribunes] God save your good worships! Marcius is coming home; he has more cause to be proud. Where is he wounded?

Vol. I' th' shoulder and i' th' left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' th' body.

Men. One i' th' neck and two i' th' thigh—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had before this last expedition twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven; every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish]

Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius. Before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears; Death, that dark spirit, in's nervy arm doth lie.

Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men die.

A sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS the General, and Titus Lartius; between them, Coriolanus, crown'd with an oaken garland; with Captains and Soldiers and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Scene 17 CORIOLANUS

within Corlol gates, where he hath won-With fame, a name to Cams Murcius; these In honour follows Coriolanus. 256 Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus !

I Flourish. Welcome to Rome, renowned AIL. Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this, it does offend my heart.

Pray now, no more.

Look, sir, your mother ! Com. O. 160

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods [Kneels. For my prosperity!

Nay, my good soldier, up; Vol.My gentle Marcius, worthy Cams, and By deed-achieving honour newly nani'd-What is it? Corrolanus must I call thee?

But, O, thy wife! Cor.

My gracious silence, hail! Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home.

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah, my dear,

Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear, And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now the god's crown thee! Cor. And live you yet ? [To Valeria] O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn. O. welcome home! And welcome, General.

And y'are welcome all. Men. A hundred thousand welcomes. I could weep And I could laugh; I am light and heavy.

Welcome! A curse begin at very root on's heart 176

That is not glad to see thee! You are three That Rome should dote on; yet, by the faith of men, We have some old crab trees here at home that will not Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors. We call a nettle but a nettle, and

The faults of fools but folly.

Com. Ever right. Cor. Menenius ever. ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on.

Cor. [To his wife and mother] Your hand, and yours.

Ere in our own house I do shade my head, The good patricians must be visited; From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,

But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have lived To see inherited my very wishes,

And the buildings of my fancy; only 190 There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but

Our Rome will cast upon thee. Cor.

Know, good mother,

I had rather be their servent in my way Than sway with them in the re-

Co.a. On, to the Capitol. IFlourish. Corneis. Excunt in state, as before. Britis and Sicinius come forward.

Bru. All tongues speak of him and the bleared sights

Are spectacled to see him. Your prattling murse

Into a rapture lets her baby cry

While she chats him; the kitchen malkin Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck, Clamb'ring the walls to eye him; stalls, bulks, windows. Are smother'd up, leads fill'd and ridges

hors'd

With variable complexions, all agreeing In earnestness to see him. Seld-shown flamens

Do press among the popular throngs and puit

To win a vulgar station; our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask in Their nicely gawded cheeks to th' wanton spoil

Of Phœbus' burning kisses. Such a pother, As if that whatsoever god who leads him Were stily crept into his human powers, 210 And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden I warrant him consul.

Then our office may

During his power go sleep. Sic. He cannot temp'rately transport his honours From where he should begin and end, but will Lose those he hath won. Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not The commoners, for whom we stand, but they

Upon their ancient malice will forget With the least cause these his new honours; which

That he will give them make I as little question

As he is proud to do't.

I heard him swear. Bru. Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' th' market-place, nor on him put The napless vesture of humility; Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds To th' people, beg their stinking breaths.

'Tis right. Sic. Bru. It was his word. O, he would miss it rather Than carry it but by the suit of the gentry to him

And the desire of the nobles.

I wish no better Than have him hold that purpose, and to 230

In execution.
'Tis most like he will. Sic. It shall be to him then as our good wills:

A sure destruction.

So it must fall out Bru. To him or our authorities. For an end, We must suggest the people in what hatred He still hath held them; that to's power he would

Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders, and Dispropertied their freedoms; holding them

In human action and capacity

Of no more soul nor fitness for the world 240 Than camels in their war, who have their provand

Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows For sinking under them.

This, as you say, suggested Sic. At some time when his soaring insolence Shall touch the people—which time shall not want.

If he be put upon't, and that's as easy As to set dogs on sheep-will be his fire To kindle their dry stubble; and their Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

What's the matter? Bru. Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought That Marcius shall be consul. I have seen the dumb men throng to see him and The blind to hear him speak: matrons flung gloves, Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers,

Upon him as he pass'd; the nobles bended As to Jove's statue, and the commons

A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts.

I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol, And carry with us ears and eyes for th' time.

But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Rome. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions, as it were in the Capitol.

1 Off. Come, come, they are almost here. How many stand for consulships?

2 Off. Three, they say; but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's Rather our state's defective for requital people.

2 Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why. they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, ne waved indifferently twixt doing them neither good nor harm: but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him, and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes-to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all, into their estimation and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes and his actions in their hearts that for their tongues to be silent and not confess so much were a kind of ingrateful injury; to report otherwise were a malice that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it. 32

1 Off. No more of him; he's a worthy man. Make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter the Patricians and the Tribunes of the People, Lictors before them; Coriolanus, Menenius, Com-INIUS the Consul. Sicinius and Brutus take their places by themselves. Coriolanus stands.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volsces.

To send for Titus Lartius, it remains, As the main point of this our after-meeting. To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country. Therefore please you, Most reverend and grave elders, to desire 40 The present consul and last general In our well-tound successes to report A little of that worthy work perform'd

By Caius Marcius Coriolanus; whom We met here both to thank and to remember

With honours like himself. [Coriolanus sits. 1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius.

vengeance proud and loves not the common Than we to stretch it out. Masters o' th' people,

We do request your kindest ears; and, Whom with all praise I point at, saw him after,

Your loving motion toward the common body.

To yield what passes here.

We are convented Sic. Upon a pleasing treaty, and have hearts Inclinable to honour and advance The theme of our assembly.

Which the rather 4. Bru. We shall be bless'd to do, it he remember A kinder value of the people than

He hath hereto priz'd them at.

That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been alent. Please you

To hear Cominius speak?

Most willingly, 60 But yet my caution was more pertinent Than the rebuke you give it.

He loves your people; Men. But tie him not to be their bedtellow.

Worthy Cominius, speak.

[Corrolanus rises, and offers to go away. Nay, keep your place. 1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus, never shame to hear

What you have nobly done.

Your Honours' pardon. I had rather have my wounds to heal again Than hear say how I got them.

Sir, I hope

My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir; yet oft, When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.

your people,

I love them as they weigh-

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i' th' sun

When the alarum were struck than idly sit To hear my nothings monster'd. [Exit. Men. Masters of the people, 75 Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter-

That's thousand to one good one—when Which we devise him.

you now see honour

Than one on's ears to hear it? Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice; the deeds of Coriolanus

Should not be utter'd feebly. It is held That valour is the chiefest virtue and Most dignifies the haver. If it be.

The man I speak of cannot in the world 84 Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years, When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought

Beyond the mark of others; our then Dictator, fient

When with his Amazonian chin he drove The bristled lips before him; he bestrid 90 An o'espress'd Roman and i' th' consul's

Slew three opposers; Tarquin's self he met. And struck him on his knee. In that day's

When he might act the woman in the scene, tie prov'd best man i' th' field, and for his meed

Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age Man-ent'red thus, he waxed like a sea. And in the brunt of seventeen battles since He luich'd all swords of the garland. For this last.

Before and in Corioli, let me say I cannot speak him home. He stopp'd the

And by his raie example made the coward Turn terror into sport; as weeds before

A vessel under sail, so men obey'd And fell below his stem. His sword, death's stamp,

Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot He was a thing of blood, whose every motion

Was tim'd with dying cries. Alone he ent'red

The mortal gate of th' city, which he painted

With shunless destiny; aidless came off, And with a sudden re-enforcement struck Corioli like a planet. Now all's his.

When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce You cooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But His ready sense, then straight his doubled spirit

> Re-quick'ned what in flesh was fatigate. 115 And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if 'Twere a perpetual spoil; and till we call'd Both field and city ours he never stood To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man! 120 1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours

Our spoils he kick'd at, Com. He had rather venture all his limbs for And look'd upon things precious as they were

The common muck of the world. He covets 1ess

Than misery itself would give, rewards 125 His deeds with doing them, and is content To spend the time to end it.

He's right none; Men. Let him be call'd for.

Call Coriolanus. 1 Sen.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd 130

To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still

My life and services.

Men. It then remains

That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseeth you Let me o'erleap that custom; for I cannot Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them

For my wounds' sake to give their suffrage.
Please you

That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people Must have their voices; neither will they bate

One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't.
Pray you go fit you to the custom, and 140
Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part That I shall blush in acting, and might well Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?
Cor. To brag unto them 'Thus I did, and thus!'

Show them th' unaching scars which I should hide,

As if I had receiv'd them for the hire

Of their breath only!

Men. Do not stand upon't.
We recommend to you, Tribunes of the People,

Our purpose to them; and to our noble consul

Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Corolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Cornets. Then exeunt all but Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic May they perceive's intent! He will

Sic. May they perceive's intent! He will require them

As if he did contemn what he requested 155 Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them Of our proceedings here. On th' marketplace

I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.

Scene III. Rome. The Forum. Enter seven or eight Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do; for if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them.

lagratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which we being members should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

3 Cit. We have been call'd so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some abram, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely colour'd; and truly I think if all our wits were to issue o t of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south, and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' th' compass.

2 Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly?

3 Cit. Nay, your wif will not so soon out as another man's will—'tis strongly wedg'd up in a block-head; but it it were at liberty 'twould sure southward.

2 Cd. Why that way?

3 Cit. To lose itself in a tog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks; you may, you may.

3 Cd. Are you all resolv'd to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, it he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus, in a gown of humility, with Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility. Mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars, wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues; therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt Citizens.

Men. O sir, you are not right; have you not known

The worthest men have done't?

Cor. What must I say?
'I pray, sir'—Plague upon't! I cannot bring

My tongue to such a pace. 'Look, sir, my wounds! 50

I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roar'd, and

From th' noise of our own drums.'

Men. You must not speak of that. You must desire them
To think upon you.

Think upon me? Hang'em! Cor. I would they would torget me, like the virtués

Which our divines lose by 'em.

You'll mar all Men. I'll leave you. Pray you speak to 'em, I pray you,-

In wholesome manner.

[Exit.

Re-enter three of the Citizens.

Bid them wash their faces Cor. And keep their teeth clean. So, here comes a brace.

You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.

3 Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to't. Cor. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert?

Cor. Ay, not mine own desire.

3 Cit. How, not your own desire? Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

3 Cit. You must think, it we give you anything, we hope to gain by you. 71 Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o' th' consulship?

1 Cit. The price is to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly, sir, I pray let me ha't. have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private. Your good voice, sir; what say you?
2 Cit. You shall ha' it, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir. There's in all two worthy voices begg'd. I have your alms.

3 Ct. But this is something odd.

2 Cit. An 'twere to give again -but 'tis no matter. [Exeunt the three Citizens.

Re-enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

4 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

4 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies; you have been a rod to her friends. You have not indeed loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle; and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than Endue my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod and be off to them most counterfeitly. That is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man and give it bountiful to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you I may be consul.

5 Cit. We hope to find you our friend: and therefore give you our voices heartily. 4 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no farther.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, artily! [Exeunt Citizens. heartily !

Cor. Most sweet voices!

Better it is to die, better to starve. Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.

Why in this wolvish toge should I stand here To beg of Hob and Dick that do appear

Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to't.

What custom wills, in all things should we do't.

The dust on antique time would lie unswept,

And mountainous error be too highly heap'd

For truth to o'erpeer. Rather than fool it so.

Let the high office and the honour go To one that would do thus. I am half through:

The one part suffered, the other will I do.

Re-enter three Citizens more.

Here come moe voices. Your voices. For your voices I have fought:

Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear

Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice I have seen and heard of; for your voices

have Done many things, some less, some more. Your voices?

Indeed, I would be consul.

6 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

7 Cit. Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, amen. God save thee, noble consul l [Exeunt Citizens.

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS with BRUTUS and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation, and the tribunes you with the people's voice. Remains

That, in th' official marks invested, you Anon do meet the Senate.

Is this done? Cor. Sic. The custom of request you have discharg'd.

CORIOLANUS 「Act 2

mon'd

To meet anon, upon your approbation. Cor. Where? At the Senate House? There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir. Cor. That I'll straight do, and, knowing myself again, Repair to th' Senate House. Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well. [Exeunt Coriolanus and Menenius. He has it now; and by his looks methinks 'Tis warm at's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! Have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

ACT THREE

SCLNI. I. Rome. A street.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cornets. all the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Larrius, and other Senators.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius, then, had made new head?

Last. He had, my lord; and that it was which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volsces stand but as at first.

Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road

Upon's again. Com. They are worn, Lord Consul, so That we shall hardly in our ages see

Then banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius? Last. On safeguard he came to me, and did curse

Against the Volsces, for they had so vilely Yielded the town. He is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me? Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? What? Last. How often he had met you, sword to sword; That of all things upon the earth he hated

Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes

To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he? Last, At Antium. Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there. To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter Sicinius and BRUIUS.

Behold, these are the tribunes of the people. The tongues o' th' common mouth. I do despise them.

For they do prank them in authority, Against all noble suiterance.

Pass no further. Stc.

Cor. Ha! What is that? Bru. It will be dangerous to go on--no turther.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices? 30

CORIOLANUS TAct 3

1 Sen. Tribunes, give way: he shall to th' In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our market-place.

Bru. The people are incens'd against him Sic. Stop.

Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd? Must these have voices, that can yield them now

And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices?

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

Be calm, be calm. Men. Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,

To curb the will of the nobility:

Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule Nor ever will be rul'd. Call't not a plot.

The people cry you mock'd them; and of late,

When corn was given them gratis, vou repin'd;

Scandal'd the suppliants for the people, call'd them

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness. Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru. Not to them all. Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence? How? I inform them! Com. You are like to do such business. Bru. Not unlike Each way to better yours.

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By vond clouds.

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me Your fellow tribune.

You show too much of that For which the people stir; if you will pass To where you are bound, you must enquire your way,

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit, Or never be so noble as a consul, Nor voke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm. Com. The people are abus'd; set on. This palt'ring Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely

I' th' plain way of his merit.

Tell me of corn ! This was my speech, and I will speak't again---

Men. Not now, not now.

1 Sen. Cor. Now, as I hve, I will.

them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves. I say again,

Senate The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition.

Which we ourselves have plough'd for. sow'd, and scatter'd,

By mingling them with us, the honour'd number,

Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more. 1 Sen. No more words, we beseech you. Cor. How? no more! As for my country I have shed my blood, 76 Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs

Coin words till their decay against those measles

Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought

The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak o' th' people 80 As if you were a god, to punish; not As it you were infirmity.

A man of their infirmity.

Twere well

We let the people know't. Men. What, what? his choler?

Cor. Choler! Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, 85

By Jove, 'twould he my mind It is a mind That shall remain a poison where it is,

Not poison any further. Cur. Shall remain!

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? Mark you

His absolute 'shall'?

Com. 'Twas from the canon. Cor. Shall'! oo

O good but most unwise patricians! Why, You grave but reckless senators, have you thus

Given Hydra here to choose an officer That with his peremptory 'shall', being but The horn and noise o' th' monster's, wants not spirit

To say he'll turn your current in a ditch, And make your channel his? If he have power.

Then vail your ignorance; if none, awake Your dangerous lenity. If you are learn'd. Be not as common tools; if you are not, roo Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,

Com. Well, on to th' market-place.
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel to give

The coin o' th' storehouse gratis, as 'twas us'd

Sometime in Greece-

Men. Well, well, no more of that. 118
Cor. Though there the people had more absolute pow'r—

I say they nourish'd disobedience, ted The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why shall the people give One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn 120

Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd

They ne'er did service for't; being press'd to th' war

Even when the navel of the state was touch'd.

They would not thread the gates. This kind of service

Did not deserve coin gratis. Being i' th' war,

Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd

Most valour, spoke not for them. Th accusation

Which they have often made against the

Which they have often made against the Senate,

All cause unborn, could never be the native 1 of our so trank clonation. Well, what then?

How shall this bosom multiplied digest The Senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What's like to be their words: 'We did request it;

We are the greater poll, and in true fear They gave us our demands'. Thus we debase

The nature of our seats, and make the rabble

Call our cares fears; which will in time Break ope the locks o' th' Senate and bring in

The crows to peck the eagles.

Men. Come, enough. Bru. Enough, with over n-casure.

What may be sworn by, both divice and human.

Seal what I end withal! This double worship,

Where one part does disdain with cause, the other

Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom,

Cannot conclude but by the yea and no 145

Of general ignoration—it must out the Real necessities, and give way the while To unstable slightness. Purpose so bur'd, it follows:

Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech you—

You that will be less tourful than discreet; That love the fundamental part of state More than you doubt the change on't; that niefer

A noble life before a long, and with To jump a body with a dangerous physic That's sure of death without it—at once pluck out

The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick

The sweet which is their poison. Your dishonour

Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state

Of that integrity which should become't, Not having the power to do the good it would,

For th' ill which doth control't.

Bru. Ifas sa

Bru. Has spoken like a traitor and shall answer

As traitors do.

Co Then wietch, despite o'erwhelm thee!

What should the people do with these bald tribunes,
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench? In a rebellion,

When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,

Then were they chosen; in a better hour Let what is meet be said it must be meet, And throw their power i' th' dust. 170 Bru. Manifest treason!

Sic. This a consul? No. Bru. The addles, ho!

unter an Aidile.

Let him be apprehended. Sic. Go call the people, [Exit Ædile] in whose name myself

Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,

A foe to th' public weal. Obey, I charge thee, 175
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!

Patricians. We'll smety him.
Com. Ag'd sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, estiep thing! or I shall shake the lience.

Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Enter a rabble of Piebeians, with the Ædiles.

Men. On both sides more respect. 180 Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, rediles.

Plebeians. Down with him! down with him!

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons!

[They all bustle about Coriolanus. All. Tribunes! patricians! citizens! What, ho! Sicinius! Brutus! Coriolanus! Citizens! Patricians. Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace!

Men. What is about to be? I am out of breath:

Confusion's near: I cannot speak. You Tribunes

To th' people-Coriolanus, patience! Speak, good Sicinius.

Hear me, people; peace Plebeians. Let's hear our tribune. Peace Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties. Marcius would have all from you; Marcius,

Whom late you have nam'd for consul. Fie, fie, fie! This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

1 Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all

Sic. What is the city but the people? Plebeians. True.

The people are the city.

Bru. By the consent of all we were establish'd

The people's magistrates.

You so remain. Plebeians. Men. And so are like to do.

Com. That is the way to lay the city flat. To bring the roof to the foundation, And bury all which yet distinctly ranges In heaps and piles of ruin.

This deserves death. Eru. Or let us stand to our authority Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce, Upon the part o' th' people, in whose power We were elected theirs: Marcius is worthy Of present death.

Sic. Therefore lay hold of him: Bear him to th' rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Ædiles, seize him. Bru. Plebeians. Yield, Marcius, yield.

Men. Hear me one word; beseech you, Tribunes. 215

Hear me but a word.

Æd. Peace, peace! Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,

And temp'rately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Sir, those cold ways, 220 That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous upon him

And bear him to the rock.

[Coriolanus draws his sword.

Cor. No: I'll die here. There's some among you have beheld me fighting;

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

Men. Down with that sword! Tribunes. withdraw awhile.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help Marcius, help, You that be noble; help him, young and old.

Plebeians. Down with him, down with him! [In this mutiny the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the Peop'e are beat in.

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone, away.

All will be nought else.

2 Sen. Get you gone.

Cor. Stand fast . We have as many ir ends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that ? The gods forbid ! I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house:

Leave us to cure this cause. For 'tis a sore upon us 235 You cannot tent yourself; be gone. beseech you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us,

Cor. I would they were barbarians, as they are,

Though in Rome litter'd not alcreens, as they are not, Though ca'ved i' th' porch o' th' Capitol.

Be gone. 'u. not your worthy rage into cour tongue; One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground could beat forty of them. Men. I could myself Take up a brace o' th' best of them; yea, the two tribunes. Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic, And manhood is call'd foolery when it stands

Against a falling fabric. Will you hence, Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear

What they are us'd to bear. Pray you be gone. 250 Men. 'll try whether my old wit be in request With those that have but little; this must be patch'd With cloth of any colour.

Nay, come away. [Exeunt Coriolanus and Commins, with others.

Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune. Men. His nature is too noble for the world:

Where the disease is violent. Lay hands He would not flatter Neptune for his trident, or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever

He heard the name of death.

[A noise within

Here's goodly work!

Pat. I would they were a bed.

Men. I would they were in Tiber.

What the vengeance, could be not speal 'em fair?

Re-enter Brutus and Sicinius, with the Rabble again.

Sic. Where is this v per

That would depopulate the city and Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy Tribunes— Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock

With figorous hands; he hath resisted law And therefore law shall scorn him further

Than the severity of the public power,

Which he so sets at nought.

1 Cit. He shall well know The noble tribunes are 'he people's moutis, And we their hands.

Plebeians. He shall, sure on't.

Men. Sir, sir—

Sic. Peace!

Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt

With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes't that you Have holp to make this rescue?

Men. Hear me speak. As I do know the consul's worthiness,

So can I name his faults.

Sic. Consul! What consul? Men. The consul Corrolanus.

Bru. He consul! 280

Plebeians. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tubune's leave, and yours, good people,

I may be heard, I would crave a word or two;

The which shad turn you to no further

The which shad turn you to no further harm

Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly, then, so For we are peremptory to dispatch This viperous fraitor; to eject him hence Were but one danger, and to keep him here Our certain death; therefore it is decreed He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid 2000 That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserved children is enroll'd In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam Should now eat up her own!

Sic. He's a disease that must be cut away.

Men. O, he's a limb that has but a disease—

Mortal, to cat if on: to care it, easy.

What has he done to Rome that's worthy death?

Killing our enemies, the blood he hath

Which I date vouch is more than that he hath

By many an ounce—he dropt it for his country;

And what is left, to lose it by his country. Were to us all that do't and suffer it

A brand to th' end o' th' world.

Stc. This is cican kam Bru. Merely awiy. When he did love his country,

It honour'd him.

Sic. The service of the foot, Being once gangien'd, is not then respected For what before it was.

Bru. We'll hear no more. Pursue him to his house and pluck him thence,

Lest his infection, being of catching nature,

Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word! This tiget-footed rage, when it shall find the harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too late,

Tie leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by process,

Lest parties—as he is belov'd—break out, And sack great Rome with Romans. 310 Bru. It it were 50—

O, sir, sir, sir, Vol.

I would have had you put your power well

Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are With striving less to be so; lesser had been The thwartings of your dispositions, if You had not show'd them how ye were

Enter MENENIUS with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, something too rough; You must return and mend it.

 Sen. There's no remedy, Unless, by not so doing, our good city Cleave in the midst and perish.

Pray be counsell'd; I have a heart as little apt as yours, 20 To better vantage

Well, what then, what then? Cor. Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them! I cannot do it to the gods:

44

Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute: Though therein you can never be too noble But when extremities speak. I have heard you say

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends. I' th' war do grow together; grant that, and tell me

In peace what each of them by th' other lose

Cor. Tush, tush! Men.

A good demand. Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem The same you are not, which for your best ends

You adopt your policy, how is it less or WORSE

That it shall hold companionship in peace With honour as in war; since that to both It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this? Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak

To th' people, not by your own instruction. Nor by th' matter which your heart prompts you,

But with such words that are but roted in Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables

Of no allowance to your borom's truth. Now, this no more dishonours you at all Than to take in a town with gentle words. Which else would put you to your fortune and

He must and will. Prithee now, say you will, and go about it. Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd sconce? Must I With my base tongue give to my noble heart

A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't; Yet, were there but this single plot to lose, This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it.

And throw't against the wind. To th' market-place!

You have put me now to such a part which never

I shall discharge to th' life. Come, come, we'll prompt you. Com. Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said

My praises made thee first a soldier, so, To have my praise for this, perform a part Thou hast not done before.

Well, I must do't. 110 Away, my disposition, and possess me

Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his That hath receiv'd an alms! I will not do't. Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth, And by my body's action teach my mind A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice, then. To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour Than thou of them. Come a" to ruin. Let Thy mother rather feel thy pude than fear Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death

With as hig heart as thou. Do as thou list. Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me:

But owe thy pride thyself.

Pray be content. 130 Mother, I am going to the market-place; Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves.

Cog their hearts from them, and come home belov'd

Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going.

Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul.

Or never trust to what my tongue can do I' th' way of flattery further,

Vol. Do your will. [Exit. Com. Away! The tribunes do attend you. Arm yourselt us go. Let them a cuse me by invention: I

Will answer in mine honour. Ay, but mildly, 144 Men. Cor. Well, mildly be it then-mildly.

The Forum. Scene III. Rome. Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannical power. If he evade us there, Enforce him with his envy to the people, And that the spoil got on the Antiates Was ne'er distributed.

Enter an Ædile.

What, will he come?

[Exeuns.

CORIOLANUS IAct 3

Æd. He's coming

How accompanied? Bru. Æ1. Wirb old Menenius, and those senators

That always favour'd him.

Have you a catalogue Sic. Of all the voices that we have procur'd, Set down by th' poll?

I have; 'tis ready. 10 Sic. Have you collected them by tribes ? I have. Æd.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither; And when they hear me say 'It shall be so I' th' right and strength o' th commons' be it either

For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them

If I say one, cry 'Fine!'—it death, crv 'Death!'

Insisting on the old prerogative

And power i' th' truth o' th' cause.

I shall inform them. Æd. Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,

Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd Enforce the present execution

Of what we chance to sentence

Verv well. Æd. Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint.

When we shall hap to give't them.

Go about it. Bu [Exit Ædile.

Put him to choler straight. He hath been Ever to conquer, and to have his worth Of contradiction; being once chaf'd, he cannot

Be rein'd again to temperance; then he

What's in his heart, and that is there which looks

With us to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Com-INIUS, with Others.

Well, here he comes. 30 Men. Calmly, I do beseech you. Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for th' poorest piece

Will bear the knave by th' volume. honour'd gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice

Supplied with worthy men! plant love him! among's!

Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,

And not our streets with war !

1 Sen. Amen, amen! Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter the Ædile, with the Plebeians.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Cor First, hear me speak.

Well, say. Peace, ho! Both Tri. Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?

Must all determine here?

Sic. I do demand, If you submit you to the people's voices. Allow their officers, and are content To suffer lawful censure for such faults As shall be prov'd upon you.

Cor. I am content. Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content. The warlike service he has done, consider: think

Upon the wounds his body bears, which show

Like graves i' th' holy churchyard. Cor. Scratches with briers.

Scars to move laughter only. Men. Consider further,

That when he speaks not like a citizen, 53 You find him like a soldier do not take His rougher accents for malicious sounds, But, as I say, such as become a soldier Rather than envy you.

Com Well, well! No more. Cor. What is the matter,

That being pass'd for consul with full voice. I am so dishonour'd that the very hour 60 You take it off again?

Answer to us. Cor. Say then; 'tis true, I ought so. Sic. We charge you that you have contriv'd to take

From Rome all season'd office, and to wind Yourself into a power tyrannical: For which you are a traitor to the people. Cor. How-traitor?

Men. Nav, temperately! Your promise. Cor. The fires i' th' lowest hell fold in the people 1

Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune!

Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths

In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would Sav

'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free As I do pray the gods.

Sic. Mark you this, people? Plebeians. To th' rock, to th' rock, with

Sic. Peace 1

We need not put new matter to his charge. What you have seen him do and heard him speak,

Beating your officers, cursing yourselves. Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying

Those whose great power must try himeven this.

So criminal and in such capital kind, Deserves th' extremest death.

Bitt. But since he hath

Serv'd well for Rome--

What do you or to of service? Bru. I talk of that that know it. Cor. You!

Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother?

Com. Know, I pray (377 ---

I'll know no further. Cor. Let them pronounce the steep Tarperan death.

Vagabond exile, flaving, lent to imger 90 But with a grain a day, I would not buy Their mercy at the price of one fair word, Nor check my courage for what they can give.

To have't with saving 'Goo' morrow'. For that he has-Sic.

As much as in him nes - from time to time Envied against the people, seeking means To pluck away their power; as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that no in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers That do distribute it-in the nam. o' th' people.

And in the power of us the tribunes, we, Ev'n from this instant, banish him our city, In peril of precipitation

From off the rock Larpeian, never more To enter our Rome gates I' th' people's name

I say it hall be so.

Pieberans It shall be so, it shall be so! Let him away!

He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. If at me, my masters and my common friends --

Sic. He's sentenc'd: no more hearing. Let me speak. I have been consul, and can show for Rome Her enemies' marks upon me. I do tove My country's good with a respect more tender. More holy and protound, than more own lite.

My dear wife's estimate, her womb's mcrease And treasure of my toms. Then if I would Speak that --

Sic. We know your shift. Speak what ? Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd.

As enemy to the people and his country. It shall be so.

Plebcians. It shall be so, it shall be so. Cor. You common cry of curs, whose breath I hate

As reek o' th' rotten tens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcasses of unburied men That do corrupt my air-I banish you. 125 If you had been the wife of Hercules,

And here remain with your uncertainty! Let every feeble numour shake your hearts: Your encines, with nodding of their plumes, han you into desparc! Have the power still to banish your detenders till at length 130 Your ignorance-- which finds not till it teels.

Making but reservation of yourselves till your own toes-deliver you

As most abated captives to some nation 134 that won you without blows! Despising For you the city, thus I turn my back : There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt Cortolanus, Commus, Menentus, with the other Patricians.

.Ed. The people's enemy is gone, is gone! I I hey all shout and throw up their caps. Plebetans Our enemy is banish'd, he is gone! Hoo-oo!

Sic. Go see him out at gates, and follow

A he hath tollow'd you, with all despite; Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard Attend us through the city.

Plebeians Come, come, let's see him out at ates; come!

The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Conie 1Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

SUFNE I. Rome Before a gate of the city. Inter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, MININIUS, COMINIUS, with the young Nobility of Rome

Cor. Come, leave your tears; a brief tarewell. The beast

With many heads buits me away. Nay, mother.

Where is your ancient comage? You were u.'d

To say extremities was the trier of spirits; That common chances common men could bear:

That when the sea was calm all boats alike Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,

When most struck home, being gentle wounded craves

A noble cunning. You were us'd to load me With precepts that would make invincible The heart that conn'd them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Nay, I prithee, woman-Cor. Vol. Now the red postulence strike all trades in Rome,

And occupations perish!

What, what, what! Cor. I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother. Resume that spirit w. en you were wont to say.

CORIOLANUS Six of his labours you'd have done, and I'd with thee every toot. sav'd Your husband so much sweat. Cominius, Droop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife, my mother. I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius. Thy tears are salter than a younger man's And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime General, I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hard'ning spectacles; tell these sad women 'Tis fong to wail inev table strokes, As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My mother, you wot My hazards still have been your solace; and Believe't not lightly—though i go alone, Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen-your son Will or exceed the common or be caught With cautelous baits and practice.

My first son,

Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius With thee awhile; determine on some course

More than a wild exposture to each chance That starts i' th' way before thee. Vir. O the gods!

Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee hear of us, And we of thee; so, if the time thrust forth A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man, And lose advantage, which doth ever cool

I' th' absence of the needer. Cor. Fare ve well: Thou hast years upon thee, and thou art too full

Of the wars' surfeits to go rove with one That's yet unbruis'd; bring me but out at gate.

Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and

My friends of noble touch; when I am forth.

Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you come.

While I remain above the ground you shall Hear from me still, and never of me aught But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily As any ear can hear. Come, let's not

If I could shake off but one seven years 55 From these old arms and legs, by the good gods.

Give me thy hand. Cor. Come. IExeunt.

SCENE II. Rome. A street near the gate.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius and BRUTUS, with the Ædile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.

The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided In his behalf.

Now we have shown our power, Let us seem humbler after it is done Than when it was a-doing.

Sic. Bid them home. 5 Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home. Exil Ædile.

Here comes his mother.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Sic. Let's not meet her. Bru. Why?

Sic. They say she's mad. Bru. They have ta'en note of us; keep on your way.

Vol. O, y'are well met; th' hoarded plague o' th' gods

Requite your love!

Peace, peace, be not so loud. Men. Vol If that I could for weeping, you should hear-

Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst Nay, and you shall hear some, [To Brutus] Will you be gone?
Vir. [To Sicinius] You shall stay too. I would I had the power

To say so to my husband. Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame? Note but this, fool:

Was not a man my father 1 Hadst thou foxship

To banish him that struck more blows for Rome

Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens! 20 Vol. Moe noble blows than ever thou wise words;

And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee whatvet go!

Nay, but thou shalt stay too. I would my

Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him, His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then! 25 He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.

ood man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continued to hiccountry

As he began, and not unknit himself The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had.

Vol. 'I would he had'! 'Twas you incens'd the rabble—

Cats that can judge as fitly of his worth As I can of those mysteries which heaven 3 Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let's go

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone; You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:

As far as doth the Capitol exceed

The meanest house in Rome, so far my

This lady's husband here, this, do you see?—
Whom you have banish'd does exceed you

Whom you have banish'd does exceed you all.

Bru. Well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you. I would the gods had nothing else to do 4 But to confirm my curses. Could I meet 'em But once a day, it would unclog my heart Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home, And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll cup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,

And so shall stary; with feeding. Come, let's go.

Leave this faint puling and lament as I do, In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come. [Exeunt Volumnia and Virgilia.

Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exit.

Scene III. A highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volsce, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vols. It is so, sir. Truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em. Know you me yet?

Vols. Nicanor? No! Rom. The same, sir.

Vois. You had more beard when I last saw you, but your favour is well appear'd by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there. You have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrections: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vols. Hath been! Is it ended, then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come up.n them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again; for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent to eaking out.

Vols. Coriolanus banish'd!

Rom. Banish'd, sir.

Vols. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fall'n out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vols. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate "hus accidentally to encounter you; you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shal between this and supper tell you most strange things from Rome, all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Have you an army ready, say you?

Vols. A most royal one: the centurions and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in th' entertainment, and to be on toot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vols. You take my part from me, sir. I have the most cause to be glad of yours. 47 Rom. Well, let us go together. [Excunt.

Scene IV. Antium. Before Aufidius's house.

Enter Coriolanus, in mean apparel, disguis'd and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. City, 'Tis I that made thy widows; many an heir

Of these fair edifices fore my wars Have I heard groan and drop. Then know me not,

Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with stones,

In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,

Where great Aufidius lies. Is he in Antium? Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the

At his house this night.

Which is his house, beseech you? Cit. This here before you.

Thank you, sir; farewell. Cor. [Exit Citizen. O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn. Whose double bosoms seems to wear one heart. Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal and exercise

Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love

Unseparable, shall within this hour, On a dissension of a doit, break out

To hitterest enmity; so fellest foes,

Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep

To take the one the other, by some chance, Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends

And interioin their issues. So with me: My birthplace hate I, and my love's upon This enemy town. I'll enter. If he slay me, He does fair justice; if he give me way, 25 (Exit. I'll do his country service.

Scene V. Ant.um. Aufid us's house Music plays. Enter a Serv ngman.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. Exit.

Enter another Servingman.

2 Serv. Where's Cotus? My master calls for him. Cotus!

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house. The feast smells well, but I Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Scivingman.

1 Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray go to the door. Exit.

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment

In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servant.

2 Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray get you out.

Cor. Away!

2 Serv. Away? Get you away. Cor. Now th' art troublesome.

2 Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you Bears a command in't; though thy tackle's talk'd with anon.

Enter a third Servingman. The first meets hin.

3 Serv. What fellow's this?

1 Serv. A strange one as ever I look'd on. I cannot get h m out o' th' house. ' Prithee call my master to him.

3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow?

Pray you avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand-I will not hurt your hearth.

3 Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

3 Serv. A marv'llous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am. 3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you. Pray you avoid. Come.

Cor. Follow your function, go and batten on cold bits. Pushes him away from him. 3 Serv. What, you will not? Prithee tell my master what a strange guest he has here. Serv. And I shail. I Exit.

3 Serv. Where dwell'st thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

3 Serv. Under the canopy? Cor. Ay.

3 Serv. Where's that ?

Cor. I' th' city of kites and crows.

3 Serv. I' th' city of kites and crows! What an ass it is! Then thou dwell'st with daws too?

Cor. No, I serve not thy master. 3 Serv. How, sir! Do you meddle with my maste ?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honester service than to meddle with thy mistress. Thou prat'st and prat'st; serve with thy !rencher; hence! Beats him away.

Enter AUFIDIUS with the second Servingman.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

2 Seri. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auſ. Whence com'st thou? wouldst thou? Thy name?

Why speak'st not? Speak, man. What's thy name?

Cor. [Unmuffling] If, Tullus, Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity

Commands me name myselt. Auf. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears.

And harsh in sound to thine.

Say, what's thy name? Auf. Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy most welcome!

[Exeunt Cortolanus and Aufidius.

The two Servingmen come forward.

1 Serv. Here's a strange alteration!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turn'd me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

- 2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him; he had, sir, a kind of face, methought-I cannot tell how to term it.
- 1 Serv. He had so, looking as it were-Would I were hang'd, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn. He is samply the rarest man i' th' world.

1 Serv. I think he is; but a greater soldier than he you wot one.

2 Serv. Who, my master?

1 Serv. Nav, it's no matter for that. 165

2 Serv. Worth six on him.

- 1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.
- 2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that; for the defence of a town our general is excellent.
 - 1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter the third Servingman.

3 Serv. O slaves, I can tell you newsnews, you rascals!

Both. What, what, what? Let's partake. 3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations: I had as lief be a condemn'd man. Both. Wherefore? wherefore?

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general-Caius Marcius.

1 Serv. Why do you say 'thwack our general'?

3 Serv. I do not say 'thwack our general'. but he was always good enough for him.

- 2 Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends. He was ever too hard for him, I have heard him say so himself.
- 1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the troth on't; before Corioli he scotch'd him and notch'd him like a carbonado.
- 2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broil'd and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But more of thy news!

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within as if he were son and heir to Mars: set at upper end o' th' table; no question asked him by any of the senators but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him, sanctifies himself

Yet. Marcius, that was much. Your hand; with's hand, and turns up the white o' th' eve to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' th' middle and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowl the porter of Rome gates by th' ears: he will mow all down before him, and leave his passage poll'd.

2 Serv. And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine.

3 Serv. Do't! He will do't; for look you, sir. he has as many triends as enemies: which friends, sir, as it were, durst notlook you, sir-show themselves, as we term it, his friends, whilest he's in directitude.

1 Serv. Directitude? What's that? 200 3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this forward? 213 3 Serv. To-morrow, to-day, presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon; 'tis as it were a parcel of their teast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing but to rust iron, increase failors, and breed ballad-makers.

I Serv. Let me have war, say I; it ex-17: ceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; mull'd, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men.

2 Serv. 'Tis so; and as war in some sort may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

1 Sert. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Serv. Reason · because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising.

Both. In, in, in, in!

SCENE VI. Rome. A public place. Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius and BRUIUS.

Sic. Where is he, hear you? Men. Nay, I hear nothing; his mother and his wife

Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both! God-den, our neighbours. Bru. God-den to you all, god-den to you all.

1 Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees

Are bound to pray for you both.

Live and thrive! Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd Coriolanus

Had lov'd you as we did.

Now the gods keep you! 25 Citizens. Both Tri. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Citizens. Sic. This is a happier and more comely time

Than when these fellows ran about the streets

Crying confusion.

Caius Marcius was Bru.

A worthy officer i' th' war, but insolent, 30 O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,

Self-loving-

And affecting one sole throne, Sic. Without assistance.

I think not so. Men.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world, Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome,

And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you of Marcius? Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be

The Vo'sces dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be ! We have -ecord that very well it can: 50 And three examples of the like hath been Within my age. But reason with the fellow Before you punish him, where he heard this,

Lest you shall chance to whip your information

And beat the messenger who bids beware 55 Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me. I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going Ail to the Senate House some news is come

That turns their countenances.

'Tis this slave-Go whip him fore the people's eyes—his raising,

Nothing but his report.

Yes, worthy sir, Mess. The slave's report is seconded, and more. More fearful, is deliver'd

Sic. What more fearful? Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths-

How probable I do not know—that Marcius, Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,

And yows revenge as spacious as between The young'st and oldest thing.

This is most likely! Sic Bru. Rais'd only that the weaker sort may wish

The very trick on't. Sic.

Men. This is unlikely. He and Aufidius can no more atone Than vio ent'st contrariety.

Enter a second Messenger.

2 Mess. You are sent for to the Senate. 75 'A fearful army, led by Calus Marcius Associated with Aufidius, rages Upon our territories, and have already and took

What lay before them.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O, you have made good work! What news? what news? Com. You have holp to ravish your own daughters and

To melt the city leads upon your pates, To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses-

Men. What's the news? What's the news?

Your temples burned in their Com. cement, and franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd

Into an auger's bore.

Pray now, your news? ASPIL. You have made fair work, I fear me. Pray, your news.

It M rrcrusshould be join'd wi'th' Volscians-If! 90 He is their god: he leads them like a thing Made by some other deity than Nature, That shapes man better: and they follow

Against us brats with no less confidence Than boys pursuing summer butterflies, or Or butchers killing flies.

You have made good work, You and your apron men; you that stood so much Upon the voice of occupation and

The breath of garlic-eaters!

He'll shake Your Rome about your ears.

As Hercules Men. Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work !

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Ay; and you'll look pale Before you find it other. All the regions Do smilingly revolt, and who resists him.

Men. We are all undone unless The noble man have mercy.

Coin. Who shall ask it? The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people Deserve such pity of him as the wolf Does of the shepherds; for his best friends.

if they say 'Be good to Rome'—they Should say

As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,

And therein show'd like enemies. 'Tis true; xx5

O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire If he were putting to my house the brand That should consume it, I have not the face To say 'Beseech you, cease'. You have made fair hands,

You and your claits! You have crafted fair!

You have brought Com.

A trenching upon Rome, such as was never S' incapable of heip.

Both Tri. Say not we brought it. Men. How! Was't we? We lov'd him. but, like beasts

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters.

Who did hoot him out o' th' city.

They'll toar him in again. Tullus Aufidius. The second name of men, obeys his points As if he were his other. Desperation 127 Is all the policy, strength, and defence, That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Here comes the clusters. And is Autichus with him? You are they That made the air unwholesome when you cast

Your struking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' evile. Now he's coming, And not a hair upon a soldier's head Which will not prove a whip; as many concombs

As you threw caps up will be tumble down. And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;

If he could burn us all into one coal, We have deserv'd it.

Pleberans. Faith, we hear fearful news. 1 Cit. For mine own part,

When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity, 2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com Y'are goodly things, you voices! You have made Men. Your enemies and his find something in Good work, you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol ?

Com. O, ay, what else?

Haeunt Commins and Menenius. Sic. Go masters, get you home; be not dismav'd:

These are a side that would be glad to have This true which they so seem to fear. Go home,

And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i th' wrong when we banish'd him. 2 Cit. So did we all. But come, home. [Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth

Would buy this for a lie!

Pray let's go. [Exeunt

When first I did embrace him; yet his nature

In that's no changeling, and I must excuse What cannot be amended.

Yet I wish, sir-Lieu. I mean, for your particular-you had not Join'd in commission with him, but either Had borne the action of yourself, or else 15 To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,

When he shall come to his account, he knows not

What I can urge against him. Although it seems,

And so he thinks, and is no less apparent 20 To th' vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly

And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state,

Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as

As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone That which shall break his neck or hazard mine

Whene'er we come to our account. Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome? Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down,

And the nobility of Rome are his; The senators and patricians love him too. 30 The tribunes are no soldiers, and their people Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome

As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it By sovereignty of nature. First he was 35 A noble servant to them, but he could not

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Rome. A public place.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius and BRUIUS the two Tribunes, with Others.

Men. No, I'll not go. You hear what he hath said

Which was sometime his general, who lov'd him

In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:

But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him:

A mile before his tent fall down, and knee The way into his mercy. Nay, if he coy'd To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home

Com. He would not seem to know me. Do you hear? Men.

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name.

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. 'Coriolanus He would not answer to; forbad all names; He was a kind of nothing, titleless.

Till he had forg'd himself a name i' th' fire Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so ! You have made good work. A pair of tribunes that have wrack'd for Rome To make coals cheap-a noble memory!

CORTOL ANTIS [Act 5

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to And then I'll set upon him. When it was less expected; he replied, It was a base petition of a state To one whom they had punish'd. Very well. Men. Could he say less? Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For's private friends; his answer to me was. He could not stay to pick them in a pile 25 Of noisome musty chaff. He said 'twas folly. For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt And still to nose th' offence. For one poor grain or two! I am one of those. His mother, wife, his child. Only make trial what your love can do For Rome, towards Marcius. Well, and say that Marcius Return me, as Cominius is return'd, Unheard-what then? But as a discontented friend, grief-shot With his unkindness? Say't be so? Sic. Yet your good will 45 Must have that thanks from Rome atter the measure As you intended well. You guard like men, 'tis well; but, by your leave. I am an officer of state and come To speak with Coriolanus. 1 Watch. From whence? Men. From Rome. 1 Watch. You may not pass; you must return. Our general Will no more hear from thence. 2 Watch. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire before You'll speak with Coriolanus. Men. Good my friends, If you have heard your general talk of Rome And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius. 1 Watch. Be it so; go back. I must have leave to pass.

Watch. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as viituous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore go back.

Men. Prithee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2 Watch. Howsoever you have been his liar, as you say you have, I am one that, telling true under him, must say you cannot pass. Therefore go back.

Men. Has he din'd, canst thou tell? For I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 Watch. You are a Roman, are you? 35

Men. I am as thy general is.

1 Watch. Then you should hate Rome, a. he does. Can you, when you have push'd out your gates the very defender of them. and in a violent popular ignorance given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decay'd dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceiv'd; therefore back to Rome and prepare for your execution. You are condemn'd; our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation. 50

1 Watch. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean thy general.

1 Watch. My general cares not for you. Back, I say; go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood. Back—that's the utmost of your having.

Men. Nay, but fellow, fellow-

Enter Coriolanus with Aufidius.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus. Guess but by my entertainment with him if thou stand'st not i' th' state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee. The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular piosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old tather Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art piepaing fire toi us; loof thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs, and conjuie thee to pardon Rome and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this vailet here; this, w! o, like a block, hath denied my access to thee. 73 Cor. Away!

CORIOLANUS

Men. How! away i

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not.
My affairs

Are servanted to others. Though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies so In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar, Ingrate torgetfulness shall poison rather Than pity note how much. Therefore be gone.

Mine ears against your suits are stronger than

Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee,

Take this along; I writ it for thy sake
[Gives a letter.]

And would have sent it. Another word,
Menenius,

I will not hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius,

Was my belov'd in Rome; yet thou behold'st.

Auf. You keep a constant temper. 90 [Excunt Corolonus and Aufidius. 1 Watch. Now, sir, is our name Menenius?

2 Watch. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power! You know the way home again.

1 Watch. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back?

2 Watch. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for th' world nor your general; for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, y'are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to: Away! [Exit.

I Watch. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

2 Watch. The worthy fellow is our general; he's the rock, the oak not to be windshaken. [Exeunt.

Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon; he has wings, he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He lov'd his mother dearly. Men. So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now than an eightvear-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes; when he walks, he moves like an engine and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corslet with his eye, talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finish'd with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes—mercy, if you report him

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him. There is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find. And all this is 'long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us! Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banish'd him we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house.

The plebeians have got your fellow tribune And hale him up and down; all swearing if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home They'll give him death by inches.

Scene 4] CORIOLANUS

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

2 Mess. Good news, good news! The ladies have prevail'd,

The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone.

A merrier day did never yet greet Rome, No, not th' expulsion of the Tarquins.

Art thou certain this is true? Is't most certain?

2 Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire.

Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it? 45 Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide

As the recomforted through th' gates.

Why, hark you! [Trumpets, hautboys, drums beat, all together.

The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes,

Tabors and cymbals, and the shouting
Romans,

Make the sun dance. Hark you!

IA shout within.

Men. This is good news. 50
I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes such as you,

A sea and land full. You have pray'd well to-day:

This morning for ten thousand of your

I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy! [Sound still with the shouls. Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,

Accept my thankfulness.

2 Mess. Sir, we have all Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city? Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We'll meet them, to And help the joy.

SCENE V. Rome. A street near the gate.

Enter two Senators with Volumnia, Vir-Gilia, Valeria, passing over the stage, with other Lords.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!

Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,

And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them.

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius, Repeal him with the welcome of his mother; Cry 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'

All. Welcome, ladies, Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.

Scene VI. Corioli. A public place.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords o' th' city I am here:

Deliver them this paper; having read it, Bid them repair to th' market-place, where I.

Even in thems and in the commons' ears, Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse 5 The city ports by this hath enter'd and Intends t' appear before the people, hoping To purge himself with words. Dispatch.

[Exeunt Altendants.

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' faction.

Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auf.

Even so ro

As with a man by his own alms empoison'd, And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir, If you do hold the same intent wherein You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell; 15
We must proceed as we do find the people.
3 Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst

'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either

Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it;

And my pretext to strike at him admits and A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd

Mine honour for his truth; who being so heighten'd,

He watered his new plants with dews of flattery,

Seducing so my friends; and to this end He bow'd his nature, never known before But to be rough, unswayable, and free. 6 3 Con. Sir, his stoutness

When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping—

Auf. That I would have spoke of. Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth,

Presented to my knife his throat. I took him; Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way

In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files his projects to accomplish

Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men; serv'd his designments

In mine own person; holp to reap the fame Which he did end all his, and took some pride

To do myself this wrong. Till, at the last, I seem'd his follower, not partner; and 867

I had been mercenary.

So he did, my lord. 1 Con. The army marvell'd at it; and, in the last, When he had carried Rome and that we look'd

For no less spoil than glory-

There was it; Auf. For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him.

At a few drops of women's rheum, which are

As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour

Of our great action; therefore shall he die, And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark! 10 [Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the people.

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,

And had no welcomes home; but he returns

Splitting the air with noise.

And patient tools, 2 Con. Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear

With giving him glory.

Therefore, at your vantage, 3 Con. Ere he express himself or move the people With what he would say, let him feel your sword.

Which we will second. When he lies along, After your way his tale pronounc'd shall

His reasons with his body.

Say no more: Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the city.

Lords. You are most welcome home. I have not deserv'd it. Auf. But, worthy lords, have you with heed perúsed

What I have written to you? Lords. We have.

 Lord. And grieve to hear't. What faults he made before the last, I think Might have found easy fines; but there to end

Where he was to begin, and give away The benefit of our levies, answering us With our own charge, making a treaty where

There was a yielding-this admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches; you shall hear him.

Enter Coriolanus, marching with drum and colours; the Commoners being with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier:

No more infected with my country's love 868

He wag'd me with his countenance as if 40 Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting

Under your great command. You are to know That prosperously I have attempted, and With bloody passage led your wars even to

The gates of Rome Our spoils we have brought home Doth more than counterpoise a full third part The charges of the action. We have made peace

With no less honour to the Antiates Than shame to th' Romans; and we here deliver.

Subscrib'd by th' consuls and patricians. Together with the seal o' th' Senate, what We have compounded on.

Read it not, noble lords: Auf. But tell the traitor in the highest degree 85 He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor! How now?

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius, Cor. Marcins 1 Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius! Dost thou think I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name

Coriolanus, in Corioli? You lords and heads o' th' state, perfidiously

He has betray'd your business and given up. For certain drops of salt, your city Rome-I say your city—to his wife and mother: Breaking his oath and resolution like A twist of rotten silk; never admitting Counsel o' th' war; but at his nurse's tears

He whin'd and roar'd away your victory, That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart

Look'd wond'ring each at others.

Hear'st thou, Mars? 100 Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears— Cor. Ha! Auf.

-no more. Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart Too great for what contains it. 'Boy'! O slave! Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords. Must give this cur the lie; and his own notion-

Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him, that Must bear my beating to his grave—shall join

To thrust the lie unto him. .1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak. Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volsces; men and lads.

Scene 61

Stain all your edges on me. 'Boy'! False hound!

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I 115 Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli Alone I did it. 'Boy'!

Why, noble lords, Auf. Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune.

Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,

Fore your own eyes and ears?

Conspirators. Let him die for't. 121 All the people. Tear him to pieces. Do it presently. He kill'd my son. My daughter. He kill'd my cousin Marcus. He kill'd my father.

2 Lord. Peace, ho! No outrage -peace! The man is noble, and his fame folds in 1% This orb o' th' earth. His last offences to us Shall have judicious hearing. Stand. Aufidius.

And trouble not the peace.

O that I had him, With six Aufidiuses, or more-- his tribe. To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain! 179 Conspirators. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him! The Conspirators draw and kill Coriolanus, who falls. Aulidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold! Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak. O Tullus! 1 Lord.

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat Assist. [Exeunt, bearing the body of Coriovalour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him. Masters all. be quiet:

Put up your swords. Auf. My lords, when you shall know-as in this rage.

Provok'd by him, you cannot-the great danger

Which this man's life did owe you, you'll reforce

That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours

To call me to your Senate. I'll deliver 110 Myself your loyal servant, or endure Your heaviest censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body. And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded

As the most noble corse that ever herald Did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience ris Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.

Let's make the best of it.

My rage is gone, And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up. Help, three o' th' chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.

Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully; Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he Hath widowed and unchilded many a one, Which to this hour bewail the injury, Yet he shall have a noble memory.

larus. A dead march sounded.

THE SCENE: Rome and the neighbourhood.

ACT ONE

Scene I. Rome. Before the Capitol.

Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft: and then enter below SATURNINUS and his Followers at one door, and BASSIANUS and his Followers at the other, with drums and trumpets.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right. Defend the justice of my cause with arms; And, countrymen, my loving followers, Plead my successive title with your swords. I am his first-born son that was the last 5 That ware the imperial diadem of Rome; Then let my father's honours live in me, Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right, If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son, Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome, Keep then this passage to the Capitol; And suffer not dishonour to approach The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate, To justice, continence, and nobility; 15 But let desert in pure election shine; And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS aloft, with the crown.

Marc. Princes, that strive by factions and Plead your deserts in peace and humbleby friends Ambitiously for rule and empery. Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand A special party, have by common voice

In election for the Roman empery

870

A nobler man, a braver warrior, Lives not this day within the city walls. He by the Senate is accited home. From weary wars against the barbarous Goths. That with his sons, a terror to our foes, Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms. Ten years are spent since first he undertook This cause of Rome, and chastised with

Our enemies' pride; five times he hath return'd

Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons In coffins from the field; and at this day To the monument of that Andronici Done sacrifice of expiation,

And slain the noblest prisoner of the Goths. And now at last, laden with honour's spoils, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome. Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms. Let us entreat, by honour of his name Whom worthily you would have now succeed,

And in the Capitol and Senate's right. Whom you pretend to honour and adore, That you withdraw you and abate your strength.

Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should, ness. Sat. How fair the Tribune speaks to calm my thoughts! Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy

In thy uprightness and integrity, And so I love and honour thee and thine. Thy noble brother Titus and his sons, And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all.

Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament. That I will here dismiss my loving friends, And to my fortunes and the people's favour Commit may cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the soldiers of Bassianus. Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,

I thank you all and here dismiss you all. And to the love and favour of my country Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

Exeunt the soldiers of Saturninus. Rome, he as just and gracious unto me to As I am confident and kind to thee. Open the gates and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor. [Flourish. They go up into the Senate House.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way. Andronicus.

Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion, or Successful in the battles that he fights, With honour and with fortune is return'd From where he circumscribed with his sword

And brought to yoke the enemies of Rome.

Sound drums and trumpets, and then enter MARTIUS and MUTIUS, two of Titus' sons: and then two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then I ucius and Quintus. two other sons: then TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA the Queen of Goths, with her three sons, ALARBUS, DEMITRIUS and CHIRON, with AARON the Moor, and Others, as many as can be. Then set down the coffin and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds I

Lo, as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught

Returns with precious lading to the bay From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage.

Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,

To re-salute his country with his tears, 75 Tears of true joy for his return to Rome. Thou great defender of this Capitol. Stand gracious to the rites that we intend! Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons, Half of the number that King Priam had, Behold the poor remains, alive and dead! These that survive let Rome reward with love; my sword.

These that I bring unto their latest home, With burial amongst their ancestors.

Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own. Why sufter'st thou thy sons, unburied yet, To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx? Make way to lay them by their biethien.

They open the tomb. There greet in silence, as the dead are wont. And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wais.

O sacred receptacle of my joys, Sweet cell of virtue and nobility.

How many sons hast thou of mine in store

That thou wilt never render to me more! 95 Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths.

That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile Ad manes tratrum sacrifice his flesh Before this earthy prison of their bones. That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, 100 Nor we disturb'd wirh prodigies on earth.

Tu. I give him you-the noblest that survives,

The good The eldest son of this distressed queen. Tum. Stav. Roman brethien! Gracious conqueror, > Victorious Titus, rue ine tears I shed. 105 A mother's tears in passion for her son; And if thy sons were ever dear to thee. O, think my son to be as dear to me! Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome To beautify thy triamphs, and return 110 Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke; But must my sons be slaughtered in the

> For valiant doings in their country's cause? O, if to fight for king and commonweal Were piety in thine, it is in these. Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood. Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods? Draw near them then in being merciful. Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.

> Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son. Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon

These are their brethren, whom your Goths beheld

Alive and dead; and for their brethren slain

Religiously they ask a sacrifice. To this your son is mark'd, and die he must T' appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him, and make a fire straight;

And with our swords, upon a pile of wood, Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt Titus' sons, with Alarbus. Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety! Chi. Was never Scythia half so barbarous! Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe Alarbus goes to rest, and we survive 85 To tremble under Titus' threat'ning look. Then, madam, stand resolv'd, but hope withal

The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy

With opportunity of sharp revenge Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent May favour Tamora. the queen of Goths-When Goths were Goths and Tamora was queen-To guit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and MUTIUS, the sons of Andronicus, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd.

And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, Whose smoke like incense doth perfume the Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren, And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

Sound trumpets and lay the coffin in the tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my 150

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest.

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps! Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells, Here grow no damned drugs, here are no storms.

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep. 155 In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame! Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears I render for my brethren's obsequies; And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy Shed on this earth for thy return to Rome.

O, bless me here with thy victorious hand. Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud!

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd 165

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart! Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days, And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter, above, Marcus Andronicus and Tribunes; re-enter Saturninus, Bassi-ANUS, and Attendants.

brother.

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome! Of noble minds is honourable meed.

Tit. Thanks, gentle Tribune, noble brother Marcus. nephews, from Marc. And welcome, successful wars.

You that survive and you that sleep in fame.

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all That in your country's service drew your swords:

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp That liath aspir'd to Solon's happiness And triumphs over chance in honour's bed. Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome. Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been.

78a Send thee by me, their Tribune and their trust,

This palliament of white and spotless hue: And name thee in election for the empire With these our late-deceased Emperor's

Be candidatus then, and put it on. And help to set a head on headless Rome. Tit. A better head her glorious body fits Than his that shakes for age and feebleness.

What should I don this robe and trouble vou ?

Be chosen with proclamations to-day, 190 To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life, And set abroad new business for you all? Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years, And led my country's strength successfully, And buried one and twenty valiant sons. Knighted 'n field, slain manfully in arms. In right and service of their noble country. Give me a staff of honour for mine age. But not a sceptre to control the world.

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious Tribune, canst thou tell ?

Tit. Patience. Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right. Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not Till Saturninus be Rome's Emperor. Andronicus, would thou were shipp'd to hell

Rather than rob me of the people's hearts ! Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good

That noble-minded Titus means to thee! Tit. Content thee, Prince; I will restore to thee

The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee, But honour thee, and will do till I die. My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved I will most thankful be; and thanks to 215

872

People of Rome, and people's Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Tribunes here.

I ask your voices and your suffrages: Will ye bestow them friendly on Androni cus?

Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus, 200 And gratulate his safe return to Rome. The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this suit I make,

That you create our Emperor's eldest son, Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope, Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth, And ripen justice in this commonweal.

Then, if you will elect by my advice, Crown him, and say 'Long live our Emperor!'

Marc. With voices and applause of every sort.

Patricians and plebeians, we create Lord Saturninus Rome's great Emperor; And say 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine!' [A long flourish till they come down.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done

To us in our election this day I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts, And will with deeds requite thy gentleness; And for an onset, Titus, to advance Thy name and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my emperess, Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart, And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse. Tell me. Andronicus, doth this motion please thee? Tit. It doth, my worthy lord, and in this

I hold me highly honoured of your Grace, And here in sight of Rome, to Saturnine. King and commander of our commonweal, The wide world's Emperor, do I consecrate My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners, Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord;

Receive them then, the tribute that I owe, Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet. Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life. How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts Rome shall record; and when I do forget The least of these unspeakable deserts, 25th

Romans, forget your fealty to me. Tit. [To Tamora] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;

To him that for your honour and your state Will use you nobly and your followers. 240 Sat. [Aside] A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue

Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this? Lav. Not I, my lord, sith true nobility Warrants these words in princely courtesy. Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go.

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free. Proclaim our honours, loids, with trump and drum. IFlow ish. Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing Lavinia.

Tit. How, sir! Are you in earnest then, my lord?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus, and resolv'd withal To do myself this reason and this right.

Marc. Suum cuique is our Roman justice: This prince in justice seizeth but his own. Luc. And that he will and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the Emperor's guard?

Treason, my lord—Lavinia is surpris'd! Sai. Surpris'd! By whom?

Bas. By him that justly may 285 Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Exeunt Bassianus and Marcus with Lavinia.

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe. [Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius. Tit Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

What, villain boy! 290 Tit. Bar'st me my way in Rome?

Help, Lucius, help! Mut. [Titus kills him. During the fray, exeunt Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius. Chiron, and Aaron.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust, and more than so:

In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son. Tit. Nor thou nor he are any sons of mine: My sons would never so dishonour me. 295

Re-enter aloft the EMPEROR with TAMORA and her two Sons, and AARON the Moor.

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the Emperor. Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife,

Exit.

873

Sat. No. Titus, no; the Emperor needs her not,

Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock. 300 I'll trust by leisure him that mocks me once;

Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Coths.

That, like the stately Phoebe 'mongst her nymphs,

Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome.

If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice.

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride

And will create thee Emperess of Rome, 320 Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods— To pardon Mutius and to bury him. Sith priest and holy water are so near, And tapers burn so bright, and every-

I lead espous'd my bride along with me. Tam. And here in sight of heaven to Rome I swear,

If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths, She will a handmaid be to his desires.

A loving nurse, a mother to his youth. Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany

Your noble Emperor and his lovely bride, Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine. Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

[Exeunt all but Titus Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone Dishonoured thus, and challenged wrongs?

Re-enter MARCUS, and Titus' sons, Lucius. QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Marc. O Titus, see, O, see what thou hast done I

In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish Tubune, no; no son of mine-deed That hath dishonoured all our family; 345

Unworthy brother and unworthy sons! Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes: Give Mutius burial with our bretheren.

Tit. Traitors, away! He rests not in this tomb.

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that This monument five hundred years hath atood.

Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here.

Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite?

Marc. No, noble Titus, but entreat of thee

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,

And with these boys mine honour thou hast wounded. My foes I do repute you every one:

So trouble me no more, but get you gone. Mart. He is not with himself; let us withdraw. Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

The brother and the sons kneel. Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead --

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak --

Til. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul --

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all-Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter

His noble nephew here in virtue's nest, That died in honour and Lavinia's cause. Thou art a Roman-be not barbarous.

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax, That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son Did graciously plead for his funerals. Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy iov.

Be barr'd his entrance here.

Rise, Marcus, rise: Tit. The dismal'st day is this that e'er I saw. To be dishonoused by my sons in Rome! Well, bury him, and bury me the next. 386

They put Mutius in the tomb. Luc. There he thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adoin thy tomb. All. [Kneeling] No man shed tears for noble Mutius ;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause. Marc. My lord-to step out of these dreary dumps-3.11

How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths

Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome? Tit. I know not, Marcus, but I know it 15---

Whether by device or no, the heavens can

Is she not, then, beholding to the man That brought her for this high good turn so far?

Marc. Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter the EMPEROR, TAMORA and her two Sons, with the Moor, at one door; at the other door, BASSIANUS and LAVINIA. with Others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride! Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more.

Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave. Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power, Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape. Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own.

My true betrothed love, and now my wife? But let the laws of Rome determine all; Meanwhile am I possess'd of that is mine. Sat. 'Tis good, sir. You are very short with us;

But if we live we'll be as sharp with you. 410 Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,

Answer I must, and shall do with my life. Only thus much I give your Grace to know: By all the duties that I owe to Rome, This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here, 415 Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd, That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

To be controll'd in that he frankly gave. 400 Receive him then to favour, Saturnine, That hath express'd himself in all his deeds A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds

'Tis thou and those that have dishonoured

Rome and the righteous heavens be my nudge

How I have lov'd and honoured Saturnine! Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine.

Then hear me speak indifferently for all; And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past. What, madam! be dishonoured openly, And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome torfend

I should be author to dishonour you! 435 But on mine honour dare I undertake For good Lord Titus' innocence in all. Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs. Then at my suit look graciously on him: Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose, Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart. [Aside to Sat.] My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last; Dissemble all your griefs and discontents. You are but newly planted in your throne: Lest, then, the people, and patricians too. Upon a just survey take Titus' part. And so supplant you for ingratitude. Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin. Yield at entreats, and then let me alone: I'll find a day to massacre them all, And raze their faction and their family, The cruel father and his traitorous sons. To whom I sued for my dear son's life: And make them know what 'tis to let a queen

Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.-455 come, sweet Emperor:

Come, come. Andronicus.

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart

That dies in tempest of thy angry frown. Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my Empress hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your Majesty and her, my lord: These words, these looks, infuse new life in me. Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily, And must advise the Emperor for his good. This day all quarrels die, Andronicus; 465 And let it be mine honour, good my lord, That I have reconcil'd your friends and you. For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath My word and promise to the Emperor 469

That you will be more mild and tractable. Hast prisoner held, fett'red in amorous And fear not, lords-and you, Lavinia. By my advice, all humbled on your knees, You shall ask pardon of his Majesty.

Luc. We do, and vow to heaven and to his Highness

That what we did was mildly as we might, Tend'ring our sister's honour and our own.

Marc. That on mine honour here do I protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet Emperor, we must all be friends.

The Tribune and his nephews kneel for grace.

I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Marcus, for thy sake, and thy Sat. brother's here.

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats, I do remit these young men's heinous faults. Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl, I found a friend; and sure as death I swore I would not part a bachelor from the priest. Come, if the Emperor's court can feast two

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora. To-morrow, an it please your Majesty

To hunt the panther and the hart with me, With horn and hound we'll give your Grace bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too. [Exeunt. Sound trumpets.

ACT TWO

Scene I. Rome. Before the valace. Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,

Safe out of Fortune's shot, and sits aloft, Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash. Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.

As when the golden sun salutes the morn, 5 And, having gilt the ocean with his beams, Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach And overlooks the highest-peering hills, So Tamora.

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait, 10 And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.

Then, Aaron, arm thy heart and fit thy Nor would your noble mother for much thoughts

And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus. Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!

I will be bright and shine in pearl and gold. To wait upon this new-made emperess. 20 To wait, said I? To wanton with this queen,

This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph. will charm Rome's This siren that Saturnine.

And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's.

Hullo! what storm is this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years wants wit. thy wits wants edge And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd, And may, for aught thou knowest, affected be. Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all; And so in this, to bear me down with braves. 'Tis not the difference of a year or two Makes me less gracious or thee more tortunate:

I am as able and as fit as thou

To serve and to deserve my mistress' grace; And that my sword upon thee shall approve, And plead my passions for Lavinia's love. Aar. [Aside] Clubs, clubs! These lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,

Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side, Are you so desperate grown to threat your friends?

Go to; have your lath glued within your sheath

Till you know better how to handle it. Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have.

Full well shalt thou perceive how much I

Dem. Ay, hoy, grow ye so brave?

They draw. Aar. [Coming forward] Why, how now, Iords I

So near the Emperor's palace dare ye draw And maintain such a quarrel openly? Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge: I would not for a million of gold

The cause were known to them it most concerns:

more

Be so dishonoured in the court of Rome. Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd My rapier in his bosom, and withal Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat

That he hath breath'd in my dishonou. here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and ful resolv'd, Foul-spoken coward, that thund'rest with thy tongue,

And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aar. Away, I say!

Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore
This petty brabble will undo us all.

Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous

It is to jet upon a prince's right?

What, is Lavinia then become so loose, 60 Or Bassianus so degenerate, That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd

Without controlment, justice, or revenge?

Young lords, beware; an should the Empress know

This discord's ground, the music would not please. 70

Chi. I care not. I. knew she and all the world:

I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad, or know ye not in Rome How furious and impatient they be, 76 And cannot brook competitors in love? I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths

By this device.

Chi. Aar in, a thousand deaths

Would I propose to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her-How?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange? She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd; She is a woman, therefore may be won; She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd. What, man! more water glideth by the mill Than wots the miller of; and easy it is 86 Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know. Though Bassianus be the Emperor's brother.

Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. [Aside] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?
What, hast not thou full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, then, it seems some certain snatch or so

Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were served. 96 Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too!
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.
Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools

To square for this? Would it offend you,

That both should speed?

Chr. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jai.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do That you affect; and so must you resolve That what you cannot as you would achieve.

You must perforce accomplish as you may. Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love. A speedier course than ling'ring languish-

Must we pursue, and I have found the path. My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand; There will the lovely Roman ladies troop; The forest walks are wide and spacious, And many unfrequented plots there are 115 Fitted by kind for rape and villainy. Single you thither then this dainty doe,

And strike her home by force if not by words.

This way, or not at all, stand you in hope. Come, come, our Empress, with her sacred wit

To villainy and vengeance consecrate, Will we acquaint with all what we intend; And she shall file our engines with advice That will not suffer you to square yourselves,

But to your wishes' height advance you both.

The Emperor's court is like the house of Fame,

The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears; The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull.

There speak and strike, brave boys, and take your turns;

There serve your lust, shadowed from heaven's eye,

And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nesas, till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits, 134

Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exeunt.

Scene II. A forest near Rome.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, and his three sons, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, making a noise with hounds and horns; and MARCUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are When green.

Uncouple here, and let us make a bay, And wake the Emperor and his lovely bride.

And rouse the Prince, and ring a hunter's peal,

That all the court may echo with the noise. Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours, To attend the Emperor's person carefully. I have been troubled in my sleep this night, But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Here a cry of hounds, and wind horns in a peal. Then enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and their Attendants.

Many good morrows to your Majesty!
Madam, to you as many and as good!
I promised your Grace a hunter's peal.
Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords—

Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav.

I say no;

I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport. [To Tamora] Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord, 20 Will rouse the proudest panther in the

And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound.

nor hound, 25
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.
[Exeunt.

Scene III. A lonely part of the forest.

Enter AARON alone, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had none.

To bury so much gold under a tree
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget 6
A very excellent piece of villainy.

And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest [Hides the gold.

That have their alms out of the Empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA alone, to the Moor.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad ro When everything doth make a gleeful boast?

The birds chant melody on every bush;
The snakes lie rolled in the cheerful sun:

The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind

And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground;

Index their sweet shade. Aaron let us sit

Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit, And whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds.

Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns, As if a double hunt were heard at once, Let us sit down and mark their yellowing noise;

And—after conflict such as was suppos'd
The wand'ring prince and Dido once enjoyed,

When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,

And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave—

We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,

Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber,
Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds Be unto us as is a nurse's song

Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,

Saturn is dominator over mine. What signifies my deadly-standing eye, My silence and my cloudy melancholy, My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls Even as an adder when she doth unroll 35 To do some fatal execution? No, madam, these are no venereal signs.

Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,

Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.

Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul, 40 Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee—

This is the day of doom for Bassianus; His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day, Thy sons make pillage of her chastity, And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood. Seest thou this letter? Take it up, I pray thee.

And give the King this fatal-plotted scroll. Now question me no more; we are espled.

Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty, Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great Empress: Bassianus comies.

Be cross with hart; and I'll go fetch thy sons

To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be. | Enit.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal Emperess,

Unfurnish'd of her well beseeming troop? Or is it Dian, habited like her, Who hath abandoned her holy groves

To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of my private steps! 60

Had I the pow'r that some say Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently

Thy temples should be planted presently With horns, as was Actæon's; and the hounds

Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,

Unmannerly intruder as thou art! 65
Lav. Under your patience, gentle
Emperess,

'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning,

And to be doubted that your Moor and you Are singled forth to try thy experiments.

Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day!

'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, Queen, your swarth
Cimmerian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue, Spotted, detested, and abominable. Why are you sequest'red from all your train, 75

Dismounted from your snow-white goodly

And wand'red hither to an obscure plot, Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor, If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,

Great reason that my noble lord be rated For sauciness. I pray you let us hence, And let her joy her raven-coloured love; This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The King my brother shall have notice of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long.

Good king, to be so mightily abused!

Tam. Why, I have patience to endure all this.

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

Why doth your Highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have 'ticed me hither to this place.

A barren detested vole you see it is:

The trees, though sommarr, yet forfern and lean,

Overcome with most and baleful must setoe; Here never shines the sun; here no hing breeds,

Unless the nightly owl or latel rayen. And when they show'd me this abhorred pit, They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,

Would make such fearful and confused cries
As any mortal body hearing it

As any mortal body hearing it Should straight fall mad or else die suddenly.

No sooner had they told this hellish tale 105 But straight they told me they would bind me here

Unto the body of a dismal yew, And leave me to this miserable death. And then they call'd me foul adulteress, Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms That ever ear did hear to such effect; 112 And had you not by wondrous fortune come, This vengeance on me had they executed. Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.
Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength. [Also stabs.

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis—nay, barbarous Tamora,

For no name fits thy nature but thy own!

Tam. Give me the poniard; you shall know, my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to her;

First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.

This minion stood upon her chastity, Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty, x25 And with that painted hope braves your mightiness;

And shall she carry this unto her grave?
Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole.

And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey we desire,

Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting. Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy That nice-preserved honesty of yours. 135

879

Lav. O Tamora! thou bearest a woman's Do this, and be a charitable murderer. face-

Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory

To see her tears; but be your heart to them As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?

thee:

The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble, Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.

Yet every mother breeds not sons alike: [To Chiron] Do thou entreat her show a woman's pity.

Chi. What, wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. 'Tis true, the raven doth not hatch

Yet have I heard—O, could I find it now !-The lion, mov'd with pity, did endure To have his princely paws par'd all away. Some say that ravens foster forlorn children, The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:

O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no, Nothing so kind, but something pitiful! Tam. I know not what it means; away with her! Lav. O. let me teach thee! For my father's sake. That gave thee life when well he might Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

have slain thee, Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears. 160 Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me. Even for his sake am I pitiless.

Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in

To save your brother from the sacrifice; But fierce Andronicus would not relent. 165 Therefore away with her, and use her as you will;

The worse to her the better lov'd of me. Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen, And with thine own hands kill me in this place! For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long; Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What beg'st thou, then? Fond woman, let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing more,

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell: O, keep me from their worse than killing lust. 175

And tumble me into some loathsome pit, Where never man's eye may behold my body:

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee. 180 Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lav. No grace? no womanhood? Ah. beastly creature.

The blot and enemy to our general name! Confusion fall-

Chi. Nay, then I'l' stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband. O, do not learn her wrath—she taught it This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus into the pit; then exeunt Demetrius and Chiron, dragging off Lavinia.

Tam. Farewell, my sons; see that you make her sure. Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed Till all the Andronici be made away. Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor. And let my spleenful sons this trull deflower. [Exit.

Re-enter AARON, with two of Titus' sons. QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome

Where I espied the panther fast asleen. Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes. Mart. And mine, I promise you; were it not for shame, [Falls into the pit.

Quin. What, art thou fallen? subtle hole is this,

Whose mouth is covered with rude-growing Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood As fresh as morning dew distill'd on flowers?

A very fatal place it seems to me.

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O brother, with the dismal'st object hurt

That ever eye with sight made heart lament!

Aar. [Aside] Now will I fetch the King to find them here,

That he thereby may have a likely guess How these were they that made away his brother.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out

From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole? Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear :

A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling Upon the north side of this pleasant chase: ioints:

My heart suspects more than mine eye can

Mart. To prove thou hast a true divining heart.

Aaron and thou look down into this den, And see a fearful sight of blood and death. Quin. Aaron is gone, and my compassionate heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold The thing whereat it trembles by surmise; O, tell me who it is, for ne'er till now Was I a child to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies beray'd in blood.

All on a heap, like to a slaughtered lamb, In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit. Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear A precious ring that lightens all this hole, Which, like a taper in some monument, Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks.

And shows the ragged entrails of this pit: So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.

O brother, help me with thy fainting hand-

If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath-

Out of this fell devouring receptacle, -235 As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out,

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,

I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave. 40 I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose again,

Till thou art here aloft, or I below.

Thou canst not come to me-I come to [Falls in.

Enter the EMPEROR and AARON the Moor. Sat. Along with me! I'll see what hole is here, And what he is that now is leapt into it.

Say, who art thou that lately didst descend Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy sons of old An-dronicus, Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,

To find thy brother Bassianus dead. Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but jest:

He and his lady both are at the lodge 254 For, by my fatilers' reverend tomb, I vow

'Tis not an hour since I lest them there.

Mart. We know not where you left them all alive :

But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord the King? Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus? Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound:

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ.

The complet of this timeless tragedy; 265 And wonder greatly that man's face can fold

In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny. [She giveth Saturnine a letter.

Sat. [Reads] 'An if we miss to meet him handsomely,

Sweet huntsman—Bassianus 'tis we mean— Do thou so much as dig the grave for him. Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward

Among the nettles at the elder-tree Which overshades the mouth of that same

Where we decreed to bury Bassianus. Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends. O Tamora! was ever heard the like? I'his is the pit and this the elder-tree.

Look, sits, if you can find the huntsman out

That should have murdered Bassianus here. Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.

Sat. [To Titus] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind.

Have here berett my brother of his life. Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison: There let them bide until we have devis'd Some never-heard-of torturing pain for 285 them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High Emperor, upon my feeble knee I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed, That this fell fault of my accursed sons— Accursed if the fault be prov'd in them-

Sat. If it be prov'd! You see it is apparent.

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up. Tit. I did my lord, yet let me be their bail:

To answer their suspicion with their lives. Sat. Thou shalt not bail them; see thou follow me.

Some bring the murdered body, some the murderers;

Let them not speak a word—the guilt is plain;

For, by my soul, were there worse end than death.

That end upon them should be executed. Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the King. Fear not thy sons; they shall do well enough. Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt.

Another part of the forest. SCENE IV.

Enter the Empress' sons, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out, and ravish'd.

And so let's leave her to her silent walks. Chi. An 'twere my cause, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord. [Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron.

Wind horns. Enter MARCUS, from hunting.

Marc. Who is this ?-my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word: where is your husband? If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down, That I may slumber an eternal sleep! Speak, gentle niece. What stern ungentle hands

Hath lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare

Of her two branches-those sweet ornaments

Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in.

And might not gain so great a happiness 20 As half thy love? Why dost not speak to Alas, a crimson river of warm blood.

They shall be ready at your Highness' Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind.

Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips. Coming and going with thy honey breath. But sure some Tereus hath deflowered thee, And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!

And notwithstanding all this loss of blood-As from a conduit with three issuing spouts-

Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face Blushing to be encount'red with a cloud. Shall I speak for thee? Shall I say 'tis so? O, that I knew thy heart, and knew the

ACT THREE

SCHNE I. Rome. A street.

Enter the Judges, Tribunes, and Senators, with Titus' two sons Marrius and QUINTUS bound, passing on the stage to the place of execution, and TITUS going before, pleading.

Hear me, grave fathers; noble Tribunes, stay I For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent

In dangerous wars whilst you securely Receive my tears, and seem to weep with slept:

For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed.

For all the trosty nights that I have watch'd, And for these bitter tears, which now you

Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks, Be pitiful to my condemned sons,

Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.

For two and twenty sons I never wept. 10 Because they died in honour's lofty bed. [Andronicus lieth down, and the Judges pass by him with the prisoners, and exeunt.

For these, Tribunes, in the dust I write My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears.

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite; and blush.

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain That shall distil from these two ancient urns.

Than youthful April shall with all his show'rs.

In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still;

In winter with warm tears I'll melt the

And keep eternal spring-time on thy face, So thou refuse to drink my dear sons'

Enter Lucius with his weapon drawn.

O reverend Tribunes! O gentle aged men! Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death,

And let me say, that never wept before, 25 My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain; The Tribune: near you not, no man is by, And you recount your sorrows to a stone. Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead !

Grave Tribunes, once more I entreat of you. Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter,"man: if they did hear,

They would not mark me; if they did mark,

They would not pity me; yet plead I must, And bootless unto them.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones; Who though they cannot answer my distress,

Yet in some sort they are better than the Tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale. 40 When I do weep, they humbly at my feet

me;

And were they but attired in grave weeds, Rome could afford no tribunes like to these. A stone is soft as wax: tribunes more hard than stones.

A stone is silent and offendeth not.

And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises. But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death:

For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers? Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey

My sons' sweet blood will make it shame But me and mine; how happy art thou then

From these devourers to be banished! But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS with LAVINIA.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep,

Or if not so, thy noble heart to break. I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? Let me see it then.

Marc. This was thy daughter. Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ay me! this object kills me. Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her. Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand

Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?

What fool hath added water to the sea, Or brought a fagot to bright-burning Troy? My grief was at the height before thou cam'st

And now like Nilus it disdaineth bounds. Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too,

For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;

And they have nurs'd this woe in feeding life ;

In bootless prayer have they been held up, And they have serv'd me to effectless use. Now all the service I require of them Is that the one will help to cut the other.

'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands; For hands to do Rome service is but vaiu.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?

Marc. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts

That blabb'd them with such pleasing And in the fountain shall we gaze so long. eloquence

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage, Where like a sweet melodious bird it sung Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear! Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?

Marc. O, thus I found her straying in the park.

Seeking to hide herself as doth the deer 89 That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound. Tit. It was my dear, and he that wounded

Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me

For now I stand as one upon a rock, Environ'd with a wilderness of sea. Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by Expecting ever when some envious surge Will in his brinish bowels swallow him. This way to death my wretched sons are gone:

Here stands my other son, a banish'd man, And here my brother, weeping at my woes. But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul. Had I but seen thy picture in this plight, It would have madded me; what shall I do Now I behold thy lively body so? Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears, Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:

Thy husband he is dead, and for his death Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.

Look, Marcus! Ah, son Lucius, look on her!

When I did name her brothers, then fresh Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey dew Upon a gath'red lily almost withered Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband:

Perchance because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.

No. no, they would not do so foul a deed; Witness the sorrow that their sister makes. Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips, Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.

Shall thy good uncle and thy brother Lucius

And thou and I sit round about some fountain.

Looking all downwards to behold our cheeks How they are stain'd, like meadows yet not dry

Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness.

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears? Or shall we cut away our hands like thine? Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

Pass the remainder of our hateful days? What shall we do? Let us that have our tongues

Plot some device of further misery

To make us wonder'd at in time to come. Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears: for at your grief

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps. Marc. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus. dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! Brother, well I wot

Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, 140 For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs.

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say That to her brother which I said to thee: His napkin, with his true tears all bewet. Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.

O, what a sympathy of woe is this-As far from help as Limbo is from bliss!

Enter AARON the Moor.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the Emperor Sends thee this word, that, if thou love thy sons, Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus, Or any one of you, chop off your hand And send it to the King: he for the same Will send thee hither both thy sons alive. And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious Emperor! O gentle Aaron I

Did ever raven sing so like a lark That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise? With all my heart I'll send the Emperor my hand.

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off? Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine.

That hath thrown down so many enemies. Shall not be sent. My hand will serve the turn,

My youth can better spare my blood than you,

And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe, With miry slime left on them by a flood? Writing destruction on the enemy's castle? O. none of both but are of high desert! 171 Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear My hand hath been but idle; let it serve To ransom my two nephews from their Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welking death:

Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along.

For fear they die before their pardon come Marc. My hand shall go. Luc. By heaven, it shall not go ! Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such with'ied herbs as these Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son, Let me redeem my brothers both from death. Marc. And for our father's sake and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an ave.

Marc. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt Lucius and Marcus. Tit. Come hither, Aaron, I'll deceive them both;

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside] If that be call'd decelt, I will be honest.

And never whilst I live deceive men so; 190 But I'll deceive you in another sort, And that you'll say ere half an hour pass [He cuts off Titus' hand, Re-enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now stay your strife. What shall be is dispatch'd.

Good Aaron, give his Majesty my hand; Tell him it was a hand that warded him 105 From thousand dangers; bid him bury it. More hath it merited—that let it have. As for my sons, say I account of them As jewels purchas'd at an easy price; And yet dear too, because I bought mine

Aar. I go, Andronicus; and for thy hand Look by and by to have thy sons with thee. [Aside] Their heads I mean. O, how this villainy

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it!

Let fools do good, and fair men call for Aaron will have his soul black like his face.

IExit. Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven. And bow this feeble ruin to the earth; If any power pities wretched tears, To that I call ! [To Lavinia] What, would'st That ever death should let life bear his thou kneel with me?

our players,

clouds When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Marc. O brother, speak with possibility. And do not break into these deep extremes Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?

Then be my passions bottomless with them. Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries.

Then into limits could I bind my woes. When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow? It the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad.

Threat'ning the welkih with his big-swol'n

And wilt thou have a reason for this coil? I am the sea; hark how her sighs do blow.

She is the weeping welkin, I the earth; Then must my sea be moved with her sight; Then must my earth with her continual tears

Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd; For why my bowels cannot hide her woes, But like a drunkard must I vomit them. Then give me leave; for losers will have

To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid 235

For that good hand thou sent'st the Emperor.

Here are the heads of thy two noble sons; And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent hack-

Thy griet their sports, thy resolution mock'd.

That woe is me to think upon thy woes, 240 More than remembrance of my father's (Exit. death.

Marc. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily, And be my heart an ever-burning hell! I hese miseries are more than may be borne. To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal.

But sorrow flouted at is double death. Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so

And yet defested life not shrink thereat! name,

Where life hath no more interest but to Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister: breathe ! Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless

As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end? farewell, flatt'ry; Marc. Now Andronicus. Thou dost not slumber: see thy two sons' heads. Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here:

Thy other banish'd son with this dear sight Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,

Even like a stony image, cold and numb. Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs. Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight The closing up of our most wretched eyes. Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! Marc. Why dost thou laugh? It fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:

Besides, this sorrow is an enemy, And would usurp upon my wat'ry eyes

And make them blind with tributary tears. Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave?

For these two heads do seem to speak to me, And threat me I shall never come to bliss Till all these mischiefs be return'd again Even in their throats that have committed Come, let me see what task I have to do. You heavy people, circle me about, That I may turn me to each one of you And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.

The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head.

And in this hand the other will I bear. And, Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd in this:

Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight;

Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay. Hie to the Goths and raise an army there: And if ye love me, as I think you do, Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt all but Lucius. Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father.

The woefull'st man that ever liv'd in Rome.

Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again, He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.

886

[Lavinia kisses Titus. O, would thou wert as thou tofore hast been!

But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives But in oblivion and hateful griefs.

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs And make proud Saturnine and his emperess Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his queen. Now will I to the Goths, and raise a pow'r To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I. What violent hands can she lay on her life? Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands ?

To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er How Troy was burnt and he made miserable?

O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands. Lest we remember still that we have none. Fie, fie, how franticly I square my talk, As if we should forget we had no hands, If Marcus did not name the word of hands! Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat

Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,

But I of these will wrest an alphabet, And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments;

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Marc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov'd.

Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness. Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears.

And tears will quickly melt thy life away. [Marcus strikes the dish with a knife. What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Rome. Titus' garden.

Enter Young Lucius and Lavinia running after him, and the boy flies from her with his books under his arm. Enter TITUS and MARCUS.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia Follows me everywhere, I know not why. Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes! Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius; somewhat doth she mean.

See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee. Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a Somewhither would she have thee go with her. Tit. 'But'! How if that fly had a father Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons than she hath read to thee Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator. Marc. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus? Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her; For I have heard my grandsire say full oft Extremity of griefs would make men mad: And I have read that Hecuba of Troy 24 Ran mad for sorrow. That made me to fear:

Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did, And would not, but in fury, fright my youth:

Which made me down to throw my books, and fly-Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt; And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go, I will most willingly attend your ladyship. This after me. I have writ my name Marc. Lucius, I will. [Lavinia turns Without the help of any hand at all. which Lucius has let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see. Which is it, girl, of these ?-Open them, bov.-But thou art deeper read and better skill'd; Come and take choice of all my library, 34 And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed. Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there were more than one Confederate in the fact; ay, more there was, Or else to heaven she heaves them for so? Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses;

My mother gave it me.

For love of her that's gone, Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest. Tit. Soft! So busily she turns the leaves! Help her.

What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?

This is the tragic tale of Philomel

And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape; And rape, I fear, was root of thy annoy. 50 Marc. See, brother, see! Note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl.

Ravish'd and wrong'd as Philomela was, Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,

Let's see: [Reads] 'Integer vitae, scelerisque purus, 20 Non eget Mauri iaculis, nec arcu.' Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well:

I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just-a verse in Horace. Right, vou have it.

[Aside] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass! Here's no sound jest! The old man hath found their guilt,

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines

Nur. A devil.

Why, then she is the devil's Aar. dam:

A joyful issue.

and Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, sorrowful issue!

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad Amongst the fair-fac'd breeders of our clime:

The Empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal.

And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. Zounds, ye whore! Is black so base a hue?

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done? Aar. That which thou canst not undo. Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother. Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone her.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice!

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so.

dispatch it. Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy brother! Now, by the burning tapers of the sky

That shone so brightly when this boy was

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point That touches this my first-born son and heir. I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus, With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood.

boys !

Nur. O, that which I would hide from Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alchouse painted signs!

Coal-black is better than another hue In that it scorns to bear another hue: 100 For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white.

Although she lave them hourly in the flood. Tell the Empress from me I am of age

To keep mine own-excuse it how she can. Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress: this my self.

The vigour and the picture of my youth. This before all the world do I prefer; This maugre all the world will I keep safe.

Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome. Dem. By this our mother is for ever

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The Emperor in his rage will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy. Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears: Fie, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of thy heart! Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer. Look how the black slave smiles upon the father.

As who should say 'Old lad, I am thine own'.

He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed Of that self-blood that first gave life to you: And from your womb where you imprisoned were

He is enfranchised and come to light. Nay, he is your brother by the surer side, Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the Empress ?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will all subscribe to thy advice. 130 Save thou the child, so we may all be safe. Aar. Then sit we down and let us all consult. My son and I will have the wind of you: Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety. They sit.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?

Aar. Why, so, brave lords! When we join in league

I am a lamb; but if you brave the Moor, The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,

The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms. But say, again, how many saw the child? 140 Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself; And no one else but the delivered Empress.

Aar. The Emperess, the midwife, and yourself.

Two may keep counsel when the third's away:

Go to the Empress, tell her this I said. 145 [He kills her Weeke weeke! So cries a pig prepared to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron?
Wherefore didst thou this?

Agr. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy.

Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours—
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? No, lords,
no. 15,1

And now be it known to you my full intent: Not far, one Muliteus, my countryman— His wife but yesternight was brought to

His child is like to her, fair as you are. 155 Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,

And tell them both the circumstance of all, And how by this their child shall be advanc'd.

And be received for the Emperor's heir And substituted in the place of mine, Tocalm this tempest whirling in the court; And let the Emperor dandle him for his own.

Hark ye, lords. You see I have given her physic, [Pointing to the Nurse. And you must needs bestow her funeral; The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.

This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife and the nurse well made

Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air

With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.
[Exeunt Demetrus and Chiron, bearing off the dead Nurse.

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies,

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,

And secretly to greet the Empress' friends. Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence:

For it is you that puts us to our shifts.
I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,

And cabin in a cave, and bring you up 180
To be a warrior and command a camp.

[Exit with the child.]

Scene III. Rome. A public place.

Enter Titus, bearing arrows with letters on the ends of them; with him Marcus,
Young Livers and other gradewing

Young Lucius, and other gentlemen, Publius, Sempronius, and Caius, with hours.

Tu. Come, Marcus, come; kinsmen, this is the way.

Sir boy, let me see your archery; Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.

Terras Astraea reliquit,

Be you rememb'red, Marcus; she's gone, she's fled.

Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean and cast your nets; Happily you may caich her in the sea; Yet there's as little justice as at land. No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;

'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade.

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth; Then, when you come to Pluto's region, I pray you deliver him this petition.

Tell him it is for justice and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
Ah, Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable

What time I threw the people's suffrages On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. 20 Go get you gone; and pray be careful all, And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd.

This wicked Emperor may have shipp'd her hence:

And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case, To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lords, it highly us conceins

By day and night t'attend him carefully, And feed his humour kindly as we may Till time beget some careful remedy.

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.

Join with the Goths, and with revengeful war

Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude, And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now? How now, my masters?

What, have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you word,

If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall.

Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd, He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else, So that perforce you must needs stay atime. the man must not be hang'd till the next Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.

I'll dive into the burning lake below And pull her out of Acheron by the heels. Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we, 45 No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops' size:

But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back, Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear;

And, sith there's no justice in earth nor hell.

We will solicit heaven, and move the gods To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.

Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus. [He gives them the arrows. 'Ad Jovem' that's for you; here 'Ad Apollinem '

'Ad Martem' that's for myself.

'To Pallas'; 'To Here, boy. here Mercury'.

'To Saturn' Caius-not to Saturnine: You were as good to shoot against the wind. To it, boy. Marcus, loose when I bid. Of my word, I have written to effect; There's not a god left unsolicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court:

We will afflict the Emperor in his pride. Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot] O, well said, Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap! Give it Pallas. Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon:

Your letter is with Jupiter by this. Tit. Ha! ha!

Publius, Publius, what hast thou done? See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord: when Publius shot,

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock

That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court ;

And who should find them but the Empress' villain? She laugh'd, and told the Moor he should not choose But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes! God give his lordship joy!

Enter the Clown, with a basket and two pigeons in it.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings? Have you any letters?

Shall I have justice? What says Jupiter? Clo. Ho, the gibbet-maker? He says that he hath taken them down again, for 892 week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee? Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter: T never drank with him in all my life. Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else. Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven! Alas, sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunal Plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the Emperal's men. 93

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the Emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the Emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sırrah, come hither. Make no more

But give your pigeons to the Emperor; By me thou shalt have justice at his hands. Hold, hold! Meanwhile here's money for thy charges.

Give me pen and ink. Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver up a supplication? Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel; then kiss his foot: then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand. sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone. Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come. let me see it. Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;

For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant. And when thou hast given it to the Emperor,

Knock at my door, and tell me what he says

Clo. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me. I Exeunt.

Scene IV. Rome. Before the balace.

Enter the EMPEROR, and the EMPRESS and her two sons, DEMETRIUS and CHIRON; Lords and Others. The Emperor brings the arrows in his hand that Titus shot at

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these! Was ever seen

An emperor in Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent

Of egal justice, us'd in such contempt? My lords, you know, as know the mightful gods.

However these disturbers of our peace Buzz in the people's ears, there nought hath Have by my means been butchered wrongpass'd

But even with law against the wilful sons Of old Andronicus. And what an if His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits, Shall we be thus afflicted in his wreaks, in His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness? And now he writes to heaven for his jedress. See, here's 'To Jove' and this 'To Mercury'

This 'To Apollo'; this 'To the God of War'-Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!

What's this but libelling against the Senate, And blazoning our unjustice every where? A goodly humour, is it not, my lords? As who would say in Rome no justice were. But if I live, his feigned ecstasies Shall be no shelter to these outrages; But he and his shall know that justice lives In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep, He'll so awake as he in fury shall Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine.

Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age. Th' effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, 3. Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his ĥeart ;

And rather comfort his distressed plight Than prosecute the meanest or the best For these contempts. [Aside] Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze with all. But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick Thy life-blood out: if Aaron now be wise, Then is all safe, the anchor in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! Wouldst thou speak with us?

Clo. Yes, forsooth, an your mistriship be Emperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the Emperor.

'Tis he .-- God and Saint Stephen give you godden. I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

[Saturninus reads the letter. Sat. Go take him away, and hang him presently.

Clo. How much money must I have? Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd Clo. Hang'd! by'r lady, then I hav brought up a neck to a fair end.

[Exit guarded Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs Shall I endure this monstrous villainy? 5

I know from whence this same device proceeds.

May this be borne—as if his traitorous sons That died by law for murder of our brother fully?

o drag the villain hither by the hair: Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege. For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughterman.

Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,

In hope thyself should govern Rome and Enter Nuntius ÆMILIUS.

What news with thee, Æmilius? Æmil. Arm, my lords! Rome never had more cause. The Goths have gathered head; and with a power Of high resolved men, bent to the spoil,

They hither march amain, under conduct Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus: Who threats in course of this revenge to do As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths?

These tidings nip me, and I hang the head As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms.

Ay, now begins our sorrows to approach. 'Tis he the common people love so much; Myself hath often heard them say-

When I have walked like a private man— That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear? Is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius, And will revolt from me to succour him. 80 Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious like thy name! Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it? The eagle suffers little birds to sing,

And is not careful what they mean thereby. Knowing that with the shadow of his wings He can at pleasure stint their melody; 86 Even so mayest thou the giddy men of Rome.

Then cheer thy spirit; for know thou, Emperor,

I will enchant the old Andronicus

With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,

Than baits to fish or honey-stalks to sheep, When as the one is wounded with the bait, The other rotted with delicious feed. Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will; For I can smooth and fill his aged ears 6 With golden promises, that, were his heart Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,

Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.

[To Æmilius] Go thou before to be our ambassador;

Say that the Emperor requests a parley Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably;

And if he stand on hostage for his safety, Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. [Exit.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus, And temper him with all the art I have, To pluck proud Lucius from the warle Goths.

And now, sweet Emperor, be blithe again, And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius with an army of Goths with drums and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors and my faithful friends,

I have received letters from great Rome Which signifies what hate they bear their Emperor

And how desirous of our sight they are.

Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,

5

Imperious and impatient of your wrongs; And wherein Rome hath done you any scath.

Let him make treble satisfaction.

1 Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus.

Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort,

Whose high exploits and honourable deeds Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt.

Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,

Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day, Led by their master to the flow'red fields, And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

All the Goths. And as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON with his Child in his arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd 20

To gaze upon a runous monastery; And as I earnestly did fix mine eye Upon the wasted building, suddenly I heard a child cry underneath a wall.

I made unto the noise, when soon I heard
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:

'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!

Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou

Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look, Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor;

But where the bull and cow are both milkwhite,

They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace! '—even thus he rates
the babe—

'For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth, Who, when he knows thou art the Empress' babe,

35
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake'.
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him.

Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither

To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand; This is the pearl that pleas'd your Empress' eye;

And here's the base fruit of her burning lust.

Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey

This growing image of thy fiend-like face? Why dost not speak? What, deaf? Not a word?

A halter, soldiers! Hang him on this tree, And by his side his fruit of bastardy. Aar. Touch not the boy, he is of royal

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl—

A sight to vex the father's soul withal.

Get me a ladder. [A ladder brought, which Aaron is made to climb.

Aar. Lucius, save the child, And bear it from me to the Emperess. If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things

That highly may advantage thee to hear; If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,

If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you
all!'

Luc. Say on; an if it please me which thou speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

Aar. An if it please thee! Why, assure thee, Lucius,

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd speak:

For I must talk of murders, rapes and massacres.

Acts of black night, abominable deeds, Complots of mischief, treason, villainies, 65 Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd; And this shall all be buried in my death, Unless thou swear to me my child shall live. Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say thy child shall live.

Agr. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Who should I swear by? Thou believest no god; That granted, how canst thou believe an oath? Aar. What if I do not?—as indeed I do not: Yet, for I know thou art religious

And hast a thing within thee called con-

With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies Which I have seen thee careful to observe, Therefore I urge thy oath. For that I know An idiot holds his bauble for a god,

And keeps the oath which by that god he swears,

To that I'll urge him. Therefore thou shalt vow

By that same god—what god soe'er it be That thou adorest and hast in reverence-To save my boy, to nourish and bring him Even now I curse the day—and yet, I up;

Or else I will discover nought to thee. Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I

Agr. First know thou. I begot him on the Empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman!

Aar. Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of charity

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon. "Twas her two sons that murdered Bassianus:

They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,

And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou sawest.

Luc. O detestable villain! Call'st thou that trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd, and 'twas Trim sport for them which had the doing of it. Luc. O barbarous beastly villains like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct

That codding spirit had they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set:

of me.

As true a dog as ever fought at head. Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth. I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay; I wrote the letter that thy father found. And hid the gold within that letter mention'd, Confederate with the queen and her two sons:

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue. Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand. And, when I had it, drew myself apart And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pried me through the crevice of a wall, When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads:

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily That both mine eyes were rainy like to his: And when I told the Empress of this sport. She swooned almost at my pleasing tale.

And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses. Goth. What, canst thou say all this and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is. Luc. Art thou not sorry for these hemous deeds?

Agr. Av. that I had not done a thousand more.

think,

Few come within the compass of my curse-Wherein I did not some notorious ill: As kill a man, or else devise his death; Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it: Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself: Set deadly enmity between two friends; Make poor men's cattle break their necks; Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night, And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,

And set them upright at their dear friends' door

Even when their sorrows almost was forgot. And on their skins, as on the bark of trees, Have with my knife carved in Roman letters

'Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead '.

Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things

As willingly as one would kill a fly; And nothing grieves me heartily indeed

But that I cannot do ten thousand more. Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die 100 So sweet a death as hanging presently. devil.

To live and burn in everlasting fire, So I might have your company in hell But to torment you with my bitter tongue! Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome

Desires to be admitted to your presence. Luc. Let him come near.

Welcome, Æmilius. What's the news from Rome?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you Princes of the Goths.

The Roman Emperor greets you all by me; And, for he understands you are in arms, He craves a parley at your father's house, Willing you to demand your hostages, 160 And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

1 Goth. What says our general?

Luc. Æmilius, let the Emperor give his pledges

Unto my father and my uncle Marcus. x(4 And we will come. March away. [Excunt.

Scene II. Rome. Before situs' house.

Enter TAMORA, and her two sons, DE-METRIUS and CHIRON, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment

I will encounter with Andronicus,

And say I am Revenge, sent from below To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.

Knock at his study, where they say he

To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge; Tell him Revenge is come to join with him.

And work confusion on his enemies.

They knock, and TITUS opens his study door, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation? Is it your trick to make me ope the door, 10 That so my sad decrees may fly away

And all my study be to no effect? You are deceiv'd; for what I mean to do See here in bloody lines I have set down; And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee. Tit. No, not a word. How can I grace mv talk.

Wanting a hand to give it that accord? Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough:

Aar. If there be devils, would I were a Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines:

Witness these trenches made by grief and care;

Witness the tiring day and heavy night: Witness all sorrow that I know thee well 25 For our proud Empress, mighty Tamora. Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not

Tamora:

She is thy enemy and I thy friend.

I am Revenge, sent from th' infernal kingdom To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes. Come down and welcome me to this world's light:

Confer with me of murder and of death: There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place. No vast obscurity or misty vale, Where bloody murder or detested rape

Can couch for fear but I will find them out : And in their ears tell them my dreadful name-

Revenge, which makes the toul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me

To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.

Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands:

Now give some surance that thou art Revenge-

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels;

And then I'll come and be thy waggoner And whirl along with thee about the globes. Provide thee two proper paltreys, black as jet,

To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away. And find out murderers in their guilty caves;

And when thy car is loaden with their heads,

I will dismount, and by thy waggon wheel Trot, like a servile footman, all day long, 55 Even from Hyperion's rising in the east Until his very downfall in the sea.

And day by day I'll do this heavy task, So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there. Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me. Tit. Are they thy ministers? What are they call'd? Tam. Rape and Murder; therefore called

'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the Empress' sons they are l

And you the Empress! But we worldly men 65

Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee;
And, if one arm's embracement will content
thee

I will embrace thee in it by and by.

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy. 70

Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick humours,

Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,

For now he firmly takes me for Revenge; And, being credulous in this mad thought, I'll make him send for Lucius his son, 75 And whilst I at a banquet hold him sure, I'll find some cunning practice out of hand To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths, Or, at the least, make them his enemies. See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter TITUS, below.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee.

Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house. Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too. How like the Empress and her sons you are! Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor. 85 Could not all hell afford you such a devil? For well I wot the Empress never wags But in her company there is a Moor; And, would you represent our queen aright.

It were convenient you had such a devil. 90 But welcome as you are. What shall we do? Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,

And I am sent to be reveng'd on him. 95

Tam. Show me a thousand that hath done thee wrong,

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,

Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer. Go thou with him, and when it is thy hap To find another that is like to thee, Good Rapine, stab him; he is a ravisher. Go thou with them; and in the Emperor.

Go thou with them; and in the Emperor's court

There is a queen, attended by a Moor; 205
Well shalt thou know her by thine own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee. I pray thee, do on them some violent death; They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.

But would it please thee, good Andronicus, To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son, Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike

Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy
house:

When he is here, even at thy solemn feast, I will bring in the Empress and her sons, The Emperor himself, and all thy foes; And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel, And on them shalt thou ease thy angry

heart.
What says Andronicus to this device? 120

Tu. Marcus, my brother! 'Tis sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius; Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths.

Bid him repair to me, and bring with him Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths; Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are. Tell him the Emperor and the Empress too Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.

This do thou for my love; and so let him, As he regards his aged father's life. 130

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business, And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me.

Or else I'll call my brother back again, 135 And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to her sons] What say you, boys? Will you abide with him, Whiles I go tell my lord the Emperor How I have govern'd our determin'd jest? Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair.

And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside] I knew them all, though they suppos'd me mad,

And will o'er-reach them in their own devices.

A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam. Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus; Revenge now goes

To lay a complet to betray thy foes.

Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell. [Exit Tamora. Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do.

Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine.

Enter Publius, Caius, and Valentine.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The Empress' sons, I take them: Chiron, Demetrius.

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd.

The one is Murder, and Rape is the other's name:

And therefore bind them, gentle Publius—Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them.

Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,

And now I find it; therefore bind them sure,

And stop their mouths if they begin to cry.

[Exit. They lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.

Chi. Villains, forbear! we are the Empress' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.

Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word.

Is he sure bound? Look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lavinia with a basin.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me;

But let them hear what fearful words I utter.

O villains, Chiron and Demetrius! 170
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud;

his goodly summer with your winter mix'd.

You kill'd her husband; and for that vile fault

I'wo of her brothers were condemn'd to death,

My hand cut off and made a merry jest; 275 Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity, Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.

What would you say, if I should let you speak?

Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace. 180

Hark, wretches! how I mean to martyr you. This one hand yet is left to cut your throats, Whiles that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The basin that receives your guilty blood. You know your mother means to feast with me, 185

And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.

Hark, villains! I will grind your bones to dust,

And with your blood and it I'll make a paste;

Pub. The Empress' sons, I take them: And of the paste a coffin I will rear,

And make two pasties of your shameful heads;

And bid that strumpet, your unhallowed dam,

Like to the earth, swallow her own increase. This is the feast that I have bid her to, And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;

For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,

And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd.

And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd.

And now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come,

Receive the blood; and when that they are dead, Let me go grind their bones to powder small,

And with this hateful liquor temper it: 200

And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.

Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet, which I wish may prove

More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast. [He cuts their throats.

Now bring them in, for I will play the cook, And see them ready against their mother comes. 206

[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.

Scene III. The court of Titus' house.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Goths, with Aaron prisoner, and his Child in the arms of an Attendant.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind

That I repair to Rome, I am content. e 1 Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor.

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil; 5 Let him receive no sust'nance, fetter him, Till he be brought unto the Empress' face For testimony of her foul proceedings.

And see the ambush of our friends be strong;

I fear the Emperor means no good to us. 10

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in my ear,
And prompt me that my tongue may utter forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog, unhallowed slave!

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in. 15 [Exeunt Goths with Aaron. Flourish within.

The trumpets show the Emperor is at hand.

Sound trumpets. Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with ÆMILIUS, Tribunes, Senators, and Others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament moe suns than one?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun ?

Marc. Rome's Emperor, and nephew, break the parle;

These quarrels must be quietly debated. 20 The feast is ready which the careful Titus Hath ordain'd to an honourable end, For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome. Please you, therefore, draw nigh and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will. [A table brought in. The company sit down.

Trumpets sounding, enter TITUS like a cook, placing the dishes, and LAVINIA with a veil over her face; also Young Lucius, and Others.

Tit. Welcome, my lord; welcome, dread Oueen:

Welcome, ye warlike Goths; Lucius:

And welcome all. Although the cheer be

'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Why art thou thus attır'd, An-Sat. dronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all

To entertain your Highness and your Empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your Highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the Emperor, resolve me this: 35 Was it well done of rash Virginius To slay his daughter with his own right hand,

Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord.

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows. Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual:

A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant For me, most wretched, to perform the like. Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee; [He kills her.

And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die! Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and And break my utt'rance, even in the unkind ?

made me blind.

I am as woeful as Virginius was. And have a thousand times more cause than he

To do this outrage; and it now is done. Sat. What, was she ravish'd? Tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? Will't please your Highness feed?

Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius. They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue;

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently. Tit. Why, there they are, both baked in this pie,

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed, Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred. 'Tis true, 'tis true: witness my knife's sharp point. [He stabs the Empress. Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed! [He stabs Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?

welcome, There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed. [He stabs Saturninus. A great tumult. Lucius, Marcus, and their friends go up into the balcony.

Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproars sever'd, as a flight of fowl Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,

O, let me teach you how to knit again 70 This scattered corn into one mutual sheaf, These broken limbs again into one body: Lest Rome heiself be bane unto herself, And she whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to, Like a forlorn and desperate castaway, 75 Do shameful execution on herself. But if my frosty signs and chaps of age, Grave witnesses of true experience, Cannot induce you to attend my words, [To Lucius] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as erst our ancestor, with his solemn tongue he did When discourse

To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear The story of that baleful burning night, When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's time Tit. Kill'd her for whom my tears have When it should move ye to attend me most And force you to commiseration.

800

Here's Rome's young Captain, let him tell Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall. the tale:

While I stand by and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, gracious auditory, be it known Lucius our Emperor; for well I know to vou

That Chiron and the damn'd Demetrius Were they that murd'red our Emperor's brother:

And they it were that ravished our sister. For their fell faults our brothers were TOO beheaded.

Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd

Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel out

And sent her enemies unto the grave.

Lastly, myself unkindly banished, The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping

To beg relief among Rome's enemies ; Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears, And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend.

I am the turned forth, be it known to vou,

That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood

And from her bosom took the enemy's point,

Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body. Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I; My scars can witness, dumb although they are. That my report is just and full of truth. 115 But, soft! methinks I do digiess too much, Citing my worthless praise. O, pardon me! For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold the child. [Pointing to the child in an Attendant's arms.

Of this was Tamora delivered, T 1/ The issue of an irreligious Moor, Chief architect and plotter of these woes. The villain is alive in Titus' house, Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true. Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge These wrongs unspeakable, past patience, Or more than any living man could bear. Now have you heard the truth: what say you, Romans?

Have we done aught amiss, show us wherein.

And, from the place where you behold us pleading,

The poor remainder of Andronici Will hand in hand all headlong hurl ourselves.

And on the ragged stones beat forth our souls.

And make a mutual closure of our house. Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we shall.

Æmil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome.

And bring our Emperor gently in thy hand. The common voice do cry it shall be so. 140

Lucius, all hail, Rome's royal Emperor!

Marc. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house.

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor To be adjudg'd some direful slaught'ring death,

As punishment for his most wicked life. 145 [Exeunt some Attendants. Lucius.

Marcus, and the others descend. All. Lucius, all hail, Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans! May I govern so

To heal Rome's harms and wipe away her woe!

But, gentle people, give me aim awhile, For nature puts me to a heavy task. Stand all aloof; but, uncle, draw you near To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk. O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips, Kisses Titus.

These sorrowful drops upon thy bloodstain'd face,

The last true duties of thy noble son! 155 Marc. Tear for tear and loving kiss for Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips. O, were the sum of these that I should pay Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!

Luc. Come luther, boy; come, come, and learn of us To melt in showers. Thy grandsire lov'd thee well;

Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee. Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;

Many a story hath he told to thee,

And bid thee bear his pretty tales in mind And talk of them when he was dead and gone.

Marcus. How many thousand times hath these poor lips,

When they were living, warm'd themselves on thine!

O, now, sweet boy, give them their latest kiss!

Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;

Do them that kindness, and take leave of them.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! ev'n with all my heart Would I were dead, so you did live again!

O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping; 135 My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth. Re-enter Attendants with AARON.

A Roman. You sad Andronici, have done with woes;

Give sentence on this execrable wretch That hath been breeder of these dire events. Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him:

There let him stand and rave and cry for food.

If any one relieves or pities him, For the offence he dies. This is our doom. Some stay to see him fast'ned in the earth.

ome stay to see him fast'ned in the earth.

Aar. Ah, why should wrath be mute and fury dumb?

I am no baby, I, that with base prayers 185 I should repent the evils I have done;

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did Would I perform, if I might have my will. If one good deed in all my life I did, I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the Emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave.
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that ravenous tiger, Tamora, 195
No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weed,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds to prey.

Her life was beastly and devoid of pity,

And being dead, let birds on her take pity.

THE PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Two households, both alike in dignity, In fair Verona, where we lay our scene, From ancient grudge break to new mutiny, Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean,

From forth the fatal loins of these two foes A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life:

Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows Doth with their death bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,

And the continuance of their parents' rage, Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;

Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage; The which if you with patient ears attend, What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend. [Exit.

ACT ONE

Scene I. Verona. A public place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, of the house of Capulet, with swords and bucklers on.

Sam. Gregory, on my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand; therefore, if thou art moved, thou run'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand. I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. 'Tis true; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall; therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one; I will show myself a tyrant. When I have fought with the men, I will be civil with the maids—I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

26

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand; and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Il Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor-John. Draw k thy tool; here comes two of the house of 5 Montagues.

Enter two other Servingmen, ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How? turn thy back and run? Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them, which is disgrace to them if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir? Sam. I do bite my thumb. sir. Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. [Aside to Gregory] Is the law of our side, if I say ay?

Gre. [Aside to Sampson] No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir? Abr. Quarrel, sir! No, sir.

Sam. But if you do, sir, I am for you. I serve as good a man as you. Abr. No better?

Sam. Well, sir.

Enter BENVOLIO.

Gre. [Aside to Sampson] Say 'better'; here comes one of my master's kinsmen. Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight. Ben. Part, fools ! [Beats down their swords. Put up your swords; you know not what you do.

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio: look upon thy death. Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword.

Or manage it to part these men with me. Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace! I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee. Have at thee, coward! [They fight, Enter an Officer, and three or four Citizens with clubs or partisans.

Officer. Clubs, bills, and partisans! Strike; beat them down. the Capulets!

Citizens. Down with Down with the Montagues!

Enter Old CAPULET in his gown, and his Wife.

long sword, ho!

Lady C. A crutch, a crutch! Why call vou for a sword? Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is come, And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter Old MONTAGUE and his Wife.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet !- Hold me not, let me go.

Lady M. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE Escalus, with his Train. Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel-Will they not hear? What, ho! you men, you beasts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins!

On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistempered weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved prince.

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, 55 Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets

And made Verona's ancient citizens Cast by their grave beseeming ornaments To wield old partisans, in hands as old, Cank'red with peace, to part your cank'red

If ever you disturb our streets again, Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time all the rest depart away. You, Capulet, shall go along with me; And, Montague, come you this afternoon, To know our farther pleasure in this case,

To old Free-town, our common judgmentplace. Once more, on pain of death, all men Exeunt all but Montague, depart. his Wife, and Benvolio.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?

Speak, nephew; were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach. I drew to part them; in the instant came The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd; Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears.

He swung about his head and cut the winds, Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in

While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my Came more and more, and fought on part and part,

Till the Prince came, who parted either part.

Lady M. O, where is Romeo? Saw you To hear true shrift him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray. 115 Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun

Peer'd forth the golden window of the east, A troubled mind drew me to walk abroad; Where, underneath the grove of sycamore That westward rooteth from this city side, So early walking did I see your son. Towards him I made; but he was ware of

And stole into the covert of the wood. I, measuring his affections by my own, Which then most sought where most might not be found,

Being one too many by my weary self, Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his, And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew.

Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun Should in the farthest east begin to draw The shady curtains from Aurora's bed, 134 Away from light steals home my heavy

And private in his chamber pens himself, Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight

And makes himself an artificial night. Black and portentous must this humour

Unless good counsel may the cause remove. Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself and many other friends.

But he, his own affections' counsellor, Is to himself—I will not say how true; But to himself so secret and so close, So far from sounding and discovery,

As is the bud bit with an envious worm, Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air. 150

Or dedicate his beauty to the sun. Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow, We would as willingly give cure as know.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. See where he comes./ So please you step aside : I'll know his grievance or be much denied. This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Mon. I would thou wert so happy by the stav

Come, madam, let's awav.

Exeunt Montague and his Wife. Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Is the day so young? Ben. But new struck nine.

Ay me! sad hours seem long. Rom. Was that my father that went hence so fast?

What sadness lengthens Ben. It was. Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that which having makes them short.

Ben. In love? Rom. Out-

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour where I am in

Ben. Alas that love, so gentle in his view. Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof! Rom. Alas that love, whose view is muffled still,

Should without eyes see pathways to his

Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all. Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.

Why then, O brawling love! O loving hatel O anything, of nothing first create! O heavy lightness! serious vanity!

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms! Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is! This love feel I, that feel no love in this. 180 Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep. Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression. Rom. Why, such is love's transgression. Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast, Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest With more of thine. This love that thou hast shown Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with loving tears.

What is it else? A madness most discreet. A choking gall, and a preserving sweet. Farewell, my coz.

Soft! I will go along; Ben.

An if you leave me so, you do me wrong. Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not

Ben. Tell me in sadness who is that you For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Rom. What, shall I groan and tell thee? Groan! Why, no: Ben. But sadly tell me who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will.

Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill! In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good markman! And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll not be hit

With Cupid's arrow. She hath Dian's wit, And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd. From Love's weak childish bow she lives unharm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms, Nor bide th' encounter of assailing eyes, Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold. O, she is rich in beauty; only poor That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;

For beauty, starv'd with her severity, Cuts beauty off from all posterity. She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair, To merit bliss by making me despair. 220 She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow Do I live dead that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me: forget to think of her. Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think!

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes. Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way 426 To call hers, exquisite, in question more. These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows,

Being black, puts us in mind they hide the fair.

He that is strucken blind cannot forget 230 The precious treasure of his eyesight lost. Show me a mistress that is passing fair, What doth her beauty serve but as a note Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?

Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget. Ben. I'll pay that doctrine or else die in debt. IExeunt.

Scene II. A street.

Enter CAPULET. COUNTY PARIS, and the Clown, his servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I, In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think, Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both.

And pity 'tis you hy'd at odds so long. But now, my lord, what say you to my suit? Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before: My child is yet a stranger in the world, She hath not seen the change of fourteen years; Let two more summers wither in their pride Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride. Younger than she are happy Par.

mothers made. Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made. Earth hath swallowed all my hopes but she; She is the hopeful lady of my earth.

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart: My will to her consent is but a part.

And, she agreed, within her scope of choice Lies my consent and fair according voice. This night I hold an old accustom'd feast. Whereto I have invited many a guest. Such as I love; and you among the store. One more, most welcome, makes my number more.

At my poor house look to behold this night. Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light.

Such comfort as do lusty young men feel When well-apparell'd April on the heel Ot limping winter treads, even such delight Among fresh temale buds shall you this night

Inherit at my house. Hear all, all see, 30 And like her most whose merit most shall

Which on more view of many, mine, being one.

May stand in number, though in reck'ning none.

Come, go with me. [To Servant, giving him a paper] Go, sirrah, trudge about Through fair Verona; find those persons out Whose names are written there, and to them say

My house and welcome on their pleasure [Exeunt Capulet and Paris. stay.

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned. In good time!

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning,

One pain is less'ned by another's anguish; And these, who, often drown'd, could never Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning:

languish.

And the rank poison of the old will die. 50 Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

For your broken shin. Rom. Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is:

Shut up in prison, kept without my food, Whipt and tormented, and—God-den, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' go'den. I pray, sir, can you But to rejoice in splendour of mine own. read?

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read. 63
[He reads the list] 'Signior Martino and his wife and daughters; County Anselme and his beauteous sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio and his lovely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; my fair niece Rosaline and Livia; Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio and the lively Helena.' 70 A fair assembly. [Gives back the paper] Whither should they come?

Serv. Up. Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper. To our house.

Rom. Whose house? Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have ask'd you that before. Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: my master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry!

Scene III. Capulet's house.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady C. Nurse, where's my daughter? Call her forth to me.

Nunce. Now, by my maidenhead at twelve year old,

I bade her come. What, lamb! what, lady-

God forbid! Where's this girl? What, Juliet!

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now, who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here. What is your will? Lady C. This is the matter. Nurse, give leave awhile,

We must talk in secret. Nurse, come back again;

I have rememb'red me, thou's hear our counsel.

Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

Lady C. 's not fourteen.

Nurse. a il lay fourteen of my teeth-And yet, to my teen he it spoken, I have but four-

She's not fourteen. How long is it now 15 To Lammas-tide?

Lady C. A fortnight and odd days. Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, fourteen.

And I will make thee think thy swan a Susan and she-God rest all Christian souls !-

She was too good for me. But, as I said, fourteen:

That shall she, marry; I remember it well. 'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years: And she was wean'd-I never shall forget

Of all the days of the year, upon that day; For I had then laid wormwood to my dug, Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall;

My lord and you were then at Mantua. Nay, I do bear a brain. But, as I said, When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool. To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug!

Shake, quoth the dove-house. 'Twas no need. I trow.

To bid me trudge. 35 And since that time it is eleven years: For then she could stand high-lone; nay, by th' rood,

She could have run and waddled all about: For even the day before, she broke her brow:

And then my husband-God be with his soul!

Wilt thou not, Jule?' And, by my holidam,

The pretty wretch left crying, and said Ay To see, now, how a jest shall come about! I warrant, an I should live a thousand years, I never should forget it: 'Wilt thou not,

Jule?' quoth he; And, pretty fool, it stinted, and said 'Ay'. Lady C. Enough of this; I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh

To think it should leave crying and say 'Ay'.

And yet, I warrant, it had upon it brow A bump as big as a young cock'rel's stone-A perilous knock; and it cried bitterly. 55 'Yea,' quoth my husband 'fall'st upon thy face?

Thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to age;

Wilt thou not, Jule?' It stinted, and said

'Ay'. Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace! Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I

An I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.

Lady C. Marry, that 'marry' is the very theme

I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet, How stands your dispositions to be married? Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of. Nurse. An honour! Were not I thine only nurse.

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

Lady C. Well, think of marriage now. Younger than you.

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem. Are made already mothers. By my count, I was your mother much upon these years That you are now a maid. Thus, then, in

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move:

But no more deep will I endart mine eve Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper serv'd up, you call'd, my young lady ask'd for, the nurse curs'd in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

Scene IV. A street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six other Maskers: Torch-bearers.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity. We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scarf.

Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper; Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke After the prompter, for our entrance; But, let them measure us by what they will,

We'll measure them a measure, and be gone. Rom. Give me a torch; I am not for this ambling; Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me. You have dancing shoes

With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead 15 So stakes me to the ground I cannot move. Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's

To soar with his light feathers; and so I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe.

Under love's heavy burden do I sink. Mer. And to sink in it should you burden love: Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? It is too rough,

Too rude, too boist'rous, and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down.

Give me a case to put my visage in.

[Putting on a mask. A visor for a visor! What care I What curious eve doth quote deformities? Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me. Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no Which off the angry Mab with blisters sooner in

I mean, sir, in delay We waste our lights in vain—like lights by day.

But 'tis no wit to go.

Why, may one ask? Mer. Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did 1. Rom. Well, what was yours?

That dreamers often lie. Mer. Rom. In hed asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then I see Queen Mab hath been with you.

She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes In shape no bigger than an agate stone 55 On the fore-finger of an alderman. Drawn with a team of little atomies Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep;

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs: The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers; 60 Her traces, of the smallest spider's web:

Her collars, of the moonshine's wat'ry beams;

Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film;

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat. Not half so hig as a round little worm Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid. Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut, Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,

Time out o' mind the fairles' coachmakers. And in this state she gallops night by night

Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love;

O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on curtsies straight;

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream, plagues, Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are. 35. Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,

And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's thou, save me a piece of marchpane: and tail.

Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep, 8 Then dreams he of another benefice.

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck. And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats.

Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades, Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon

Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,

And, being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two.

And sleeps again. This is that very Mab That plats the manes of horses in the night: And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs. Which once untangled much misfortune bodes.

This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs.

That presses them and learns them first to bear.

Making them women of good carriage. This is she-

Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace! Rom. Thou talk'st of nothing.

True. I talk of dreams. Which are the children of an idle brain, Begot of nothing but vain fantasy; Which is as thin of substance as the air, And more inconstant than the wind, who woos Even now the frozen bosom of the north, And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence, Turning his side to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves:

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early; for my mind misgives

Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars, Shall bitterly begin his tearful date With this night's revels and expire the term Of a despised life clos'd in my breast, By some vile forfeit of untimely death. But He that hath the steerage of my course Direct my sail! On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

They march about the stage. Exeunt.

Scene V. Capulet's house.

Enter the Maskers. Servingmen come forth with napkins.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? He shift a trencher! He scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwash'd too, 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. You are look'd for and call'd for. ask'd for and sought for, in the great chamber.

3 Serv. We cannot be here and there too. Cheerly, boys! Be busk a while, and the longer liver take all! IServants retire.

Enter CAPULET, with all the Guests and Gentlewomen to the Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! Ladies that have their toes

Unplagu'd with corns will have a bout with vou.

Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,

She I'll swear hath corns; am I come near ve now?

Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day That I have worn a visor and could tell 20 A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear, Such as would please. 'Tis gone, 'tis gone,

'tis gone!

You are welcome, gentlemen. musicians, play.

A hall, a hall! give room; and foot it, girls. [Music plays, and they dance. More light, you knaves; and turn the tables up,

And quench the fire, the room is grown too

Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet, For you and I are past our dancing days. How long is't now since last yourself and I Were in a mask?

not so much. 'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentia,

Come Pentecost as quickly as it will, Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder, sir;

His son is thirty Will you tell me that? Cap.

His son was but a ward two years ago. Rom. [To a servant] What lady's that which doth enrich the hand Of yonder knight?

Serv. I know not, sir.

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night As a rich jewel in an Ethiop's car-

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear! 1 Serv. Away with the join-stools, remove So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows

As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand.

And, touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.

Did my heart love till now? Forswear it,

For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.

Fetch me my rapier, boy. What, dares the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antic face, To ffeer and scorn at our solemnity? Solemnity ? Solemnity is stock and honour of my kin, To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! Wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe; A villain, that is hither come in spite 60 To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo, is it?
Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him

'A bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him 65
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth.
I would not for the wealth of all this town
Here in my house do him disparagement.
Therefore be patient, take no note of him;
It is my will; the which if thou respect, 70
Show a fair presence and put off these frowns.

An ill-besceming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest.
I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd. 74
What, goodman boy! I say he shall. Go to;
Am I the master here or you? Go to.
You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul!

You'll make a mutiny among my guests!
You will set cock-a-hoop! You'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame. Cap. Go to, s

Cap. Go to, go to; 80 You are a saucy boy. Is't so, indeed? This trick may chance to scathe you. I know what:

You must contrary me. Marry, 'tis time.— Well said, my hearts!—You are a princox; go.

Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—For shame!

I'll make you quiet. What!—Cheerly, my hearts!

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler I'll to my rest.

I will withdraw; but this intrusion shall, Now seeming sweet, convert to bitt'rest gall. [Exit. Rom. [To Juliet] If I profane with my unworthiest hand

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this:
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,

Which mannerly devotion shows in this:

For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in pray'r.

Rom. O. then, dear saint, let lips do what

Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do!
They pray; grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not while my prayer's effect I take.

Thus from my lips by thine my sin is purg'd. [Kissing her.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!

Give me my sin again. [Kissing her.
Jul. You kiss by th' book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor, Her mother is the lady of the house,

And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous.

I nurs'd her daughter that you talk'd withal.

I tell you, he that can lay hold of her 114 Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone:

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards. Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all; I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night.

More torches here! [Exeunt Maskers] Come on then, let's to bed.

Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;

[Exeunt all but Juliet and Nurse. Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is youd gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.Ju!. What's he that now is going out of door?

Petruckio.

Jul. What's he that follows there, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go ask his name.—If he be married. My grave is like to be my wedding bed. Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague:

The only son of your great enemy. Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!

Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

Prodigious birth of love it is to me. That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? What's this? A rhyme I learnt even now Jul. Of one I danc'd withal.

[One calls within 'Juliet'.

Anon, anon! 141 Nurse. Come, let's away; the strangers all are Exeunt.

ACT TWO PROLOGUE

Enter CHORUS.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie. And young affection gapes to be his heir; That fair for which love groan'd for and would die.

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair. Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again, 5 Alike bewitched by the charm of looks; But to his foe suppos'd he must complain, And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks.

Being held a foe, he may not have access To breathe such vows as lovers use to

And she as much in love, her means much less

To meet her new beloved any where. But passion lends them power, time means, to meet, Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet. Exit.

Scene I. A lane by the wall of Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here?

Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

[He climbs the wall and leaps down within it.

Enter Benvolio with Mercutio.

Remeo! my cousin, Romeo! Ben. Romeo! Mer. He is wise,

Nurse. Marry, that I think be young And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leapt this orchard wall.

Call, good Mercutio. Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.

humours! madman! passion! Romeo! lover!

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh; Speak but one rhyme and I am satisfied: Cry but 'Ay me!' pronounce but 'love' and 'dove';

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word. One nickname for her purblind son and heir.

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim When King Cophetua lov'd the beggarmaid!

He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes. By her high forehead and her scarlet lip. By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie. That in thy likeness thou appear to us. Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle Of some strange nature, letting it there stand

Till she had laid it and conjur'd it down; That were some spite. My invocation Is fair and honest: in his mistress' name.

I conjure only but to raise up him. Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees

To be consorted with the humorous night: Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. if love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,

And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit

As maids call medlars when they laugh alone.

O Romeo, that she were, O that she were An open et cetera, thou a pop'rin pear! Romeo, good night. I'll to my truckle bed: This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep. 40 Come, shall we go?

Go, then; for 'tis in vain Ben. To seek him here that means not to be found. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound.

Enter JULIET above at a window.

But, soft! What light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun. Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, Who is already sick and pale with grief 5 That thou her maid art far more fair than

Be not her maid, since she is envious; Her vestal livery is but sick and green, And none but fools do wear it; cast it off. It is my lady; O, it is my love! 10 O that she knew she were!

She speaks, yet she says nothing. What of Her eye discourses; I will answer it.

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks;
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?

The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven

Would through the airy region stream so bright

That birds would sing, and think it were not night.

See how she leans her cheek upon her hand! O that I were a glove upon that hand, as That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ay me!

Rom. She speaks.

speak again, bright angel, for thou art

O, speak again, bright angel, for thou art As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,

As is a winged messenger of heaven Unto the white-upturned wond ring eyes Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him, w When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name; 31 Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love, And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy; Thou art thyself, though not a Montague. What's Montague? It is nor hand, nor foot, Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!

What's in a name? That which we call a

By any other name would smell as sweet; So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd, 45

Retain that dear perfection which he owes

Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name; And for thy name, which is no part of thee, Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

5x
Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,

So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a r

Rom. By a name I know not how to tell thee who I am: My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself, Because it is an enemy to thee; 56 Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words

Of thy tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound:

Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague? 60 Rom. Neither, tair maid, if either thee dislike.

J.J. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high and hard to climb;

And the place death, considering who thou art,

If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'erperch these walls,

For stony limits cannot hold love out; And what love can do, that dares love attempt.

Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder
thee.

Rom. Alack, there lies more peril in thine eye

Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet,

And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes; 75

And but thou love me, let them find me

here.
My life were better ended by their hate
Than death prorogued wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, that first did prompt me to enquire;

He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes. I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest

I should adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou knowest the mask of night is on my face,

85

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek

For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!

Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say

And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swear'st.

Thou mayst prove false; at lovers' periuries

They say Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo, If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully. Or, if thou think'st I am too quickly won, I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,

So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the I hear some noise within. world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond: And therefore thou mayst think haviour light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true

Than those that have more cunning to be strange.

I should have been more strange. I must confess,

But that thou overheard'st, ere I was ware,

My true love's passion. Therefore pardon

And not impute this yielding to light love, Which the dark night hath so discovered. Rom. Lady, by vonder blessed moon I vow.

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, th' inconstant moon.

That monthly changes in her circled orb. Lest that thy love prove likewise variable. Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all; Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self, Which is the god of my idolatry,

And I'll believe thee. If my heart's dear love- 115 Rom. Jul. Well, do not swea. Although I joy in thee.

I have no joy of this contract to-night: It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden: Too like the lightning, which doth cease to

Ere one can say 'It lightens'. Sweet, good night! This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath, May prove a beauteous flow'r when next we meet. Good night, good night! As sweet repose and rest

Come to thy heart as that within my breast! Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?

Rom. Th' exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it;

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? what purpose, love? Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.

And yet I wish but for the thing I have. My bounty is as boundless as the sea, My love as deep: the more I give to thee, The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within. Dear love. adieu !-

Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.

Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit. Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard.

Being in night, all this is but a dream, 140 Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable. Thy purpose marriage, send me word tomorrow.

By one that I'll procure to come to thee. Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite:

And follow thee, my lord, throughout the world.

Nurse. [Within] Madam!

Jul. I come anon.—But if thou meanest not well. 150

I do beseech thee-Nurse. [Within] Madam!

By and by, I come-Jul. To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief. To-morrow will I send.

So thrive my soul-Rom. Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit. Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Love goes toward love as school-boys from their books;

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

Re-enter JULIET above.

Hist! Romeo, hist!-O for a Jul. falc'ner's voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle back again! Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud:

Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies, And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine

With repetition of my Romeo's name. Romeo!

165

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,

Like softest music to attending cars I Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear?

At what o'clock to-morrow Jul.

Shall I send to thee?

By the hour of nine. Rom. Jul. I will not fail. 'Tis twenty years till then. I have forgot why I did call thee back. Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,

Rememb'ring how I love thy company. Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget, Forgetting any other home but this. Jul. 'Tis almost morning. I would have thee gone;

And yet no farther than a wanton's bird, That lets it hop a little from her hand, And with a silk thread plucks it back again, So loving-jealous of his liberty. Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Sweet, so would L. Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.

Good night, good night! Parting is such sweet sorrow 185

That I shall say good night till it be [Exit. morrow.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast !

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest l Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell,

His help to crave and my dear hap to tell. [Exit. SCENE III. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE with a basket.

Fri. L. The gray-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night,

Check'ring the eastern clouds with streaks of light;

And fleckel'd darkness like a drunkard reels From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels.

Now, ere the sun advance his burning eve The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,

I must up-fill this osier cage of ours With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers. The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb;

What is her burying grave, that is her

And from her womb children of divers kind My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my We sucking on her natural bosom find: Many for many virtues excellent. None but for some, and yet all different.

O, mickle is the powerful grace that hes 15 In plants, herbs, stones, and their true qualities;

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live

But to the earth some special good doth give:

Nor aught so good but, strain'd from that fair use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:

Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied. And vice samatime's by action dignified. Within the infant rind of this weal; flower Poison hath residence, and medicine power: For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part;

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart. Two such opposed kings encamp them still In man as well as herbs-grace and rude will;

And where the worser is predominant. Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves, Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father I

Benedicite! Fri. L. What early tongue so sweet saluteth me? Young son, it argues a distempered head So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed. Care keeps his watch in every old man's

And where care lodges sleep will never lie: But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign.

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure 39 Thou art uprous'd with some distemp'rature :

Or if not so, then here I hit it right-Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night,

Rom. That last is true: the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. L. God pardon sin: wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? No;

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son; but where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy: Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me so That's by me wounded; both our remedies Within thy help and holy physic lies. I bear no hatred, blessed man, for, lo,

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drut; Riddling confession finds but riddling shuft.

Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set On the fair daughter of rich Capulet. As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine; And all combin'd, save what thou must combine

By holy marriage. When, and where, and how,

We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow.

I'll tell thee as we pass: but this I pray. That thou consent to marry us to-day. Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis! What a change is here! Is Rosaline, that thou didst love so dear.

So soon forsaken? Young men's love, then, lies

Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes. Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine line! How much salt water thrown away in waste.

To season love, that of it doth not taste! The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven

Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline. And art thou chang'd? Pronounce this sentence, then: Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline

Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. L. Not in a grave To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee chide me not; her I love now

Doth grace for grace and love for love allow:

The other did not so.

O, she knew well Fri. L. Thy love did read by rote that could not

In one respect I'll thy assistant be; For this alliance may so happy prove To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fil. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run tast. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. A street.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?

Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline, Torments him so that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman to old Capulet. Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life. Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosadead: stabb'd with a white wench's black eye; run through the ear with a lovesong; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft. And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt? Mer. More than Prince of Cats. O, He fights as you sing prickpliments. song: keeps time, distance, and proportion; he rests his minim rests, one, two, and the third in your bosom; the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah. the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay !-

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accent!—'By Jesu, a very good blade! a very tall man! a very good whore!' Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardon me's, who stand so much on the new form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bones, their bones!

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring. O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in; Laura, to his lady, was a kitchen-wenchmarry, she had a better love to berhyme her; Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a gray eye or so, but not to the purpose—Sigmor Romeo, bon jour! There's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio; my business was great, and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning, to curtsy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition. 55 Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy. Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flower'd.

Mer. Sure wit! Follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump, that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-sol'd jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Bervolio; my wits faints.

Rom. Swits and spurs, swits and spurs;

or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-goose chase, I am done; for thou hast more of the wild goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that iest.

jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting;

it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not then well serv'd in to

Rom. And is it not then well serv'd in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word 'broad', which, added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? Now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art by art as well as by nature; for this drivelling love is like a great natural that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale ropery? against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O, thou art deceiv'd: I would have made it short; for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and her man, PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock. Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon.

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer lace.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen, Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell ye; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! What a man are you?

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said. 'For himself to mar' quoth 'a! Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?"

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him. I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse. Nurse, You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? Very well took, i' taith; wisely, wisely.

Nuise. It you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

224

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho! Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

He walks by them and sings.

An old hare hoar, 130 And an old hare hoar.

Is very good meat in Lent;
But a hare that is hoar

Is too much for a score, When it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? We'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, [Sings] lady, lady, lady.

is [Execut Mercutio and Benvolio.
Nurse, I pray you, sir, what saucy on merchant was this that was so full of his le ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an 'a were laster than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurry knave! I am none of his fiirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates. And thou must stand by too, and suiter every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you. I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side. 156

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vex'd that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word; and as I told you, my young lady bid me enquire you out; what she bid me say I will keep to myself. But first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her in a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say; for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should dead double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be off'red to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee-

Nurse. Good heart, and, i' taith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord! she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? Thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise

Some means to come to shrift this afternoon;

And there she shall at Friar Lawrence' cell Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny. Rom. Go to: I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? Well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse—behind the abbey wall

Within this hour my man shall be with thee,

And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair:

Which to the high top-gallant of my joy dust be my convoy in the secret night. 185 Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains. Farewell; commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee !— Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is' your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say

I wo may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I want thee my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sie. My mistress 's the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing! O, there is a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her so netimes, and tell har that Paris is the properer man; but. I'll warrant you, when I say so she looks as pale as any clout in the veisal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? Both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for the—no, I know it begins with some other letter. And she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

Pet. Anon.

Nurse. [Handing him her fan] Before and apace. [Exeunt.

Scene V. Capulet's orchard.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him—that's not

O, she is lame! Love's heralds should be thoughts,

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams 5
Driving back shadows over louring hills;

Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw Love,

And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours, yet she is not come.

Had she affections and warm youthful blood.

She would be as swift in motion as a ball; My words would bandy her to my sweet love.

And his to me.

But old folks—many feign as they were dead:

Unwieldy, slow, heavy, and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God, she comes! O honey nurse, what news?

Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate.

20

[Exit Peter.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse—O Lord, why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; f good, thou shamest the music of sweet

By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am aweary, give me leave a while; 25

Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunce have I had!

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones and I thy news.

Nay, come, I pray thee speak; good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste? Can you not stay a while?

Do you not see that I am out of breath? 30 Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me that thou art out of breath? The excuse that thou dost make in this delay

Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse. Is thy news good or bad? Answer to that; Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance. Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad? 37

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man. Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talk'd on, yet they are past compare. He is not the flower of courtesy, but I'll warrant him as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; serve God. What, have you din'd at home?

Jul. No, no. But all this did I know before.

What says he of our marriage? What of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! What a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back a t' other side—ah, my back, my back!

50

Beshrew your heart for sending me about To catch my death with jauncing up and down!

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

says my love?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman, and a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and, I warrant, a virtuous—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother! Why, she is within;

Where should she be? How oddly thou And yet not fall, so light is vanity.

repliest!

And yet not fall, so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly co

Your love says like an honest gentleman, 60 Where is your mother?'

Nurse. O God's lady dear!

Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow; Is this the poultice for my aching bones? Henceforward, do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil! Come, what says
Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Lawrence' cell;

There stays a husband to make you a wife. Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks;

They'll be in scarlet straight at any news. Hie you to church; I must another way, To fetch a ladder, by the which your love Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark.

I am the drudge, and toil in your delight; But you shall bear the burden soon at night.

Go; I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune! Honest nurse, farewell.

[Execut.

SCLNE VI. Priar Laurence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. L. So smile the heavens upon this holy act

That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!
Rom. Amen, amen! But come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy That one short minute gives me in her sight.

Do thou but close our hands with holy words,

Then love-devouring death do what he dare:

It is enough I may but call her mine. Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends,

And in their triumph die; like fire and powder, 10
Which, as thy kiss, consume. The sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite.

And in the taste confounds the appetite.
Therefore love moderately: long love doth so:

Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow. 15

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady. O, so light a foot Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint. A lover may bestride the gossamer That idles in the wanton summer air

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else is his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be

To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath This neighbour air, and let rich music's my life for an hour and a quarter. tongue

Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both Receive in either by this dear encounter. Jul. Concert, more rich in matter than in words, Brags of his substance, not of ornament.

They are but beggars that can count their worth:

But my true love is grown to such excess I cannot sum up sum of half my wealth. Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work: For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone

Till holy church incorporate two in one. [Exeunt.

ACT THREE

Scene I. A public place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire.

The day is hot, the Capulets abroad, And if we meet we shall not scape a brawl; For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring. Mer. Thou art like one of these fellows that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table and says 'God send me no need of thee! and by the operation of the second cup draws him on the drawer, when, indeed there is no need. Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, w should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wil quarrel with a man that hath a hair moror a hair less in his beard than thou hast Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye but suc! an eye would spy out such a quarrel? Th head is as full of quarrels as an egg is ful of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling Thou hast quarrell'd with a man for cough ing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter With another for tying his new shoes with old riband? And yet thou wilt tutor me rom quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee simple of

Mer. The fee simple! O simple!

Enter Tybalt and Others

Ben. By my head, here comes the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to sentlemen, good den; a word with one of

Mer. And but one word with one of us? Louple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to .hat, sir, an you will give me occasion. 41 Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consortest with Romeo.

Mer. Consort! What, dost thou make us minstrels? An thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords. Here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men:

Either withdraw unto some private place, Or reason coldly of your grievances, Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze:

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I. Enter Romeo.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery. Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower: Your worship in that sense may call him man. Tyb. Romeo, the love I bear thee can afford No better term than this: thou art a villain. Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee Doth much excuse the appertaining rage

To such a greeting. Villain am I none; Therefore, farewell; I see thou knowest me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries

That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee, But love thee better than thou canst devise Till thou shalt know the reason of my love; And so, good Capulet—which name I tender

As dearly as mine own —be satisfied. 70

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

Alla stoccata carries it away. [Draws. Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk? Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me? Mer. Good King of Cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? Make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

7.

Tyb. I am for you. [Draws. Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up. Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage! Tybalt! Mercutio! the Prince expressly hath

Forbid this bandying in Verona streets.

Hold, Tybalt! Good Mercutio!

[Tybalt under Romeo's arm thrusts Mercutio in, and flies with his friends.

Mer. I am hurt. A plague a both your houses! I am sped. Is he gone and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt? Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry,

'tis enough.

Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

[Ext Page.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door, but 'tis enough. 'twill serve. Ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world. A plague a both your houses! Zounds, a dog, a ral, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! A braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best. Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio.

or I shall faint.

A plague a both your houses!

They have made worms' meat of me. 104
I have it, and soundly too—Your houses!

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio. Rom. This gentleman, the Prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got this mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander—Tybalt, that an hour

Hath been my cousin. O sweet Juliet, 110 Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, And in my temper soft'ned valour's steel! Re-enter DENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio is dead!

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untincely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black rate on moe days

This but begins the woe others must end.

Re-encer Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive in triumph and Mercutio slain!

Away to heaven respective lenity, 120 And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now! Now, Tybalt, take the 'villain' back again That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul

Is but a little way above our heads, Staying for thine to keep him company. 125 Either thou or ', or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wittched boy, that didst con-

Shalt with lore hence.

Rom. This shall determine flat. 11hey fight; Tybell falls.

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone.
The citizens are up, and 'tybalt slain. 130
Stand not amaz'd. 'The Prince will doom thee death

If thou art taken. Hence, be gone, away!
Rom. O, I am fortune's fool!
Ben. Why dost thou stay?

Why dost thou stay?

Enter Citizens.

1 Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutho? 144 Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he? Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

1 Cit. Up, sir, go with me; I charge thee in the Prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended: Montague, Capu-Let, their Wives, and All.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble Prince, I can discover all The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl: There lies the man, slain by young Romeo, That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

Lady C. Tyhalt, my cousin! O my brother's child!

O Prince! O husband! O, the blood is spill'd

Of my dear kinsman! Prince, as thou art true, 145 For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.

O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray 7

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's Bear hence this body, and attend our will: hand did slay; Romeo that spoke him fair, bid him

This is the truth, or let Benvolio die. Ludy C. He is a kinsman to the Montague, Affection makes him false, he speaks not

Some twenty of them fought in this black stufe. And all those twenty could but kill one life. I beg for justice, which thou, Prince, must give:

Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live. Prin. Romeo slew him; he slew Mercutio. Who now the price of his dear blood doth' owe ?

Mon. Not Romeo, Prince; he was Mercutio's triend:

His fault concludes but what the law should end.

The life of Tybalt.

And for that offence, Prin. Immediately we do exile him hence. 184 I have an interest in your hate's proceeding, My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleeding;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine That you shall all repent the loss of mine. I will be deaf to pleading and excuses, Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses:

Therefore use none. Let Romeo hence in haste.

Mercy but muiders, pardoning those that kill. Exeunt.

SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds Towards Phoebus' lodging; such a waggoner

As Phaethon would whip you to the west, And bring in cloudy night immediately. Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night,

Take him and cut him out in little stars. And he will make the face of heaven so fine That all the world will be in love with night, And pay no worship to the garish sun. (). I have bought the mansion of a love, to the out possess'd it; and though I am : old.

Enter Nurse with cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue that speaks

But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.

Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? The cords

That Romeo bid thee fetch?

Ay, ay, the cords. 35 [Throws them down. Nurse.

Jul. Ay, me! what news? Why dost thou wring thy hands? Nurse. Ah, well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead.

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Romeo can, 40 Nurse. O Romeo. heaven cannot. Though Romeo!

Who ever would have thought it? Romeo! Jul. What devil art thou that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roat'd in dismal hell. Hath Romeo slain himself? Say thou but 'I',

And that bare vowel I shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice. I am not I if there be such an 'I': Or those eyes shut that makes thee answer here: And thou and Romco press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!

O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman! That ever I should live to see thee dead! Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary?

Is Romeo slaught'red, and is Tybalt dead? My dearest cousin and my dearer lord? Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom;

For who is living if those two are gone? Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;

Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished. Jul. O God! Did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day, it did!

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave? Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical! 75 Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravening lamb!

Shame come to Romeo!

Blister'd he thy tongue 90 Jul. For such a wish! He was not born to shame:

Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit: For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd

Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O, what a beast was I to chide at him! os Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name, When three-hours wife, have mangled it? But wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin ? That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband.

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;

Your tributary drops belong to woe.

Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy. My husband lives that Tybalt would have slain.

And Tybalt's dead that would have slain my husband.

All this is comfort; wherefore ween I then ?

Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's death,

That murd'red me; I would forget it fain, But, O, it presses to my memory Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:

'Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banished'. That 'banished', that one word 'banished' Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there: 115 Or if sour woe delights in fellowship And needly will be rank'd with other griefs, Why followed not, when she said 'Tybalt's

But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,

Romeo is banished '-to speak that word In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh? Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet, Was ever book containing such vile matter All slain, all dead. 'Romeo is banished'— ment. Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd, Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd; He made you for a highway to my bed, But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed. Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-bed:

And death, not Romeo, take my maiden-

Nurse. Hie to your chamber; I'll find Romeo To comfort you. I wot well where he is.

Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night. I'll to him; he is hid at Lawrence' cell.

Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight. And bid him come to take his last farewell.

Exeunt.

Scene III. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou tearful man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts, And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter ROMEO.

Prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my Being a divine, a ghostly confessor, hand

That I yet know not?

Fri. L. Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company; I bring thee tidings of the Prince's doom. Rom. What less than doomsday is the Prince's doom?

Fri. L. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips-

Not body's death, but body's banishment. Rom. Ha, banishment! Be merciful, say death';

For exile hath more terror in his look, Much more than death. Do not say 'banishment'.

L. Here from Verona art thou banished.

Be patient, for the world is broad and wide. Rom. There is no world without Verona walls.

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Is death mis-term'd; calling death 'banished',

And smilest upon the stroke that murders 1777

Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness !

Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind Prince.

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law. And turn'd that black word death to banishment.

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not. Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is here

Where Juliet lives, and every cat, and dog, And little mouse, every unworthy thing, Live here in heaven and may look on her; But Romeo may not. More validity, More honourable state, more courtshin lives

In carrion flies than Romeo. They may seize

On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand, And steal immortal blessing from her lips; Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,

Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin:

But Romeo may not-he is banished. This may flies do, when I from this must fly: They are free men, but I am banished. And sayest thou yet that exile is not death? Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife, No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean, But 'banished' to kill me-'banished'? O friar, the damned use that word in hell; Rom. Father, what news? What is the Howling attends it; how hast thou the heart,

A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd, 50 To mangle me with that word 'banished'?

Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me a little speak. Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy, To comfort thee, though thou art banished. Rom. Yet 'banished'? Hang up plulosophy:

Unless philosophy can make a Juliet, Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom, It helps not, it prevails not. Talk no more. Fri. L. O, then I see that madmen have no ears. Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. L. Let me dispute with thee of they estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou And Tybut calls; and then on Romes dost not feel.

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love, 65 And then down falls again. An hour but married, Tybalt murdered, Doting like me, and like me banished, thou tear thy hair,

Taking the measure of an unmade grave. [Knocking within.

one knocks. Good Fri. L. Arise; Romeo, hide thyself.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heartsick groans,

Mist-like, enfold me from the search of eyes. [Knocking.

Who's Fri. L. Hark how they knock! there? Romeo, arise;

Thou wilt be taken .- Stay awhile .- Stand [Knocking. up:

Run to my study.—By and by.—God's will. What simpleness is this !—I come, I come.

[Knocking. Who knocks so hard? Whence come you?

What's your will? Nurse. [Within] Let me come in and you shall know my errand:

I come from Lady Juliet. Welcome, then. 80 Fri. L.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar, Where's my lady's lord, where's Romeo? Fri. L. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O. he is even in my mistress' case. Just in her case!

Fri. L. O woeful sympathy! Piteous predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she. Blubb'ring and weeping, weeping and blubb'ring.

Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man ;

For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand:

Why should you fall into so deep an O? 90 Rom. Nurse!

the end of all.

Rom. Spakest thou of Juliet? How is it with her?

Doth not she think me an old murderer, 91 Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy With blood remov'd but little from her own?

Where is she? and how doth she? and what says

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love? Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps; happy.

And now falls on her bed, and then starts A pack of blessings lights upon thy back:

CITE S.

As if that name. Rom. Shot from the deadly level of a gun, Then mightst thou speak, then mightst Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand

And fall upon the ground, as I do now, 69 Murder'd her kinsman. O, tell me, triar, tell me.

> In what vie part of this anatomy Doth my name lodge? Tell me that I may sack

> The hateful mansion [Drawing his sword. Hold thy desperate hand. Fri. L. Art thou a man? Thy form cries out thou art:

> Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote

The unreasonable tury of a boost. Unseemly woman in a seeming man!

And ill-b, seeming beast in scenning both I Thou hast amaz'd me. By my holy order,

I thought the disposition better temper'd. Hast thou stan Tybalt ? Wilt thou slay thy self 2

And slay the lady that in thy life lives, By doing damned hate upon thy eff?

Why railest thou on thy buth, the maten. and earth ?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose. Fie, fie I thou shamest thy shape, thy love. thy wit:

Which, like a warer, abound'st in all, And usest none in that true use indeed Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit. Thy noble shape is but a form of wax, Digressing from the valour of a man;

Thy dear love sworn but hollow perjury. Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish:

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love, Misshapen in the conduct of them both, Like powder in a skilless soldier's flask,

Is set affre by thine own ignorance, Nurse. Ah, sir! ah, sir! Well, death's And thou dismembired with thine own defence.

What, rouse toee, man! Thy Juliet is alive, For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead:

There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,

But thou slewest Tybalt; there art thou happy too.

The law, that threat'ned death, becomes thy friend,

And turns it to exile; there art thou

100 Happiness courts thee in her best array;

But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench. Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.

Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed. Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort

But look thou stay not till the watch be set For then thou canst not pass to Mantua. Where thou shalt live till we can find a time

To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,

Beg pardon of the Prince, and call thee back With twenty hundred thousand times more joy

Than thou went'st forth in lamentation. Go before, nurse; commend me to thy ladv:

And bid her hasten all the house to bed. Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here

all the night

To hear good counsel; O, what learning is! My lord. I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give vou. sir.

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late. HExit.

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!

Fri. L. Go hence; good night; and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be set. Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence.

Solourn in Mantua: I'll find out your man, And he shall signify from time to time 170 Every good hap to you that chances here. Give me thy hand. "Tis late; farewell; good night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me.

It were a grief so brief to part with thee. Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Capulet's house.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris. Cap. Things have fall'n out, sir, so un-luckilv That we have had no time to move our daughter.

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,

And so did I. Well, we were born to die. 'Tis very late; she'll not come down tonight.

I promise you, but for your company, I would have been abed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo. Madam, good night; commend me to your daughter.

Lady C. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;

To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness. Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender

Of my child's love. I think she will be rul'd

In all respects by me; nay, more, I doubt it not.

Wife, go you to her ere you go to hed; 15 Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love And hid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next-

But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord. Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon.

A Thursday let it be; a Thursday, tell her.

She shall be married to this noble earl. Will you be ready? Do you like this haste? We'll keep no great ado—a friend or two; For, hark you, Tybalt being slam so late, It may be thought we held him carelessly, Being our kinsman, if we revel much: 26 Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends.

And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone: a Thursday be it then.

Go you to Juliet ere you go to hed; Prepare her, wife, against this wedding day. Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho!

Afore me, it is so very very late That we may call it early by and by. (Exerent. Good night.

Scene V. Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET, aloft.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? It is not yes near day;

It was the nightingale, and not the lark, That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear; Nightly she sings on youd pomegranate tree.

Believe me, love, it was the nightingale. 5 Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn, No nightingale. Look, love, what envious streaks

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east: Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops. I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Youd light is not daylight; I know For sweet discourses in our times to it. I:

It is some meteor that the sun exhalcs To be to thee this night a torch-bearer, And light thee on thy way to Mantua; 15 Therefore stay yet; thou need'st not to be Either my eyesight fails or thou look'st gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death:

I am content, so thou wilt have it so. I'll say you grey is not the morning's eye, 'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow; Nor that is not the lark whose notes do beat The vaulty heaven so high above our heads. I have more care to stay than will to go. Come death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.

How is't, my soul? Let's talk-it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is; hie hence, be gone, away! It is the lark that sings so out of tune, Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.

Some say the lark makes sweet division; This doth not so, for she divideth us. Some say the lark and loathed toad change eves: O, now I would they had chang'd voices too!

Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,

Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.

O, now be gone! More light and light it giows.

Rom. More light and light-more dark and dark our woes!

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam! Jul. Nurse?

Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your chamber.

The day is broke: be wary, look about. 40 [Exit. Jul. Then, window, let day in and let life

Rom. Farewell, farewell! One kiss, and I'll descend. [He goeth down. Jul. Art thou gone so, love—lord, ay, husband, friend!

I must hear from thee every day in the hour.

For in a minute there are many days; 45 O, by this count I shall be much in years Ere I again behold my Romeo!

Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity

That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think'st thou we shall ever meet again ?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes Would none but I might venge my cousin's shall serve come.

Jul. O God, I have an ill-divining soul! Methinks I see thee, now thou art below, 55 As one dead in the bottom of a tomb: pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you ;

Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu, adieu! Exit below. Jul. O Fortune, Fortune! all men call thee fickle. If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle.

Fortune: For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him

long,

But send him back.

Lady C. [Within] Ho, daughter! are ven up?

Jul. Who is't that calls? It is my lady mother. Is she not down so late, or up so early?

What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady C. Why, how now, Juliet!

Jul. Madam, I am not well. Lady C. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?

An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live;

Therefore have done. Some grief shows much of love :

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

Lady C. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend

Which you weep for. Feeling so the loss, Jul.

I cannot choose but ever weep the friend. Lady C. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam?

Lady C. That same villain, Romeo. Jul. [Aside] Villain and he be many miles asunder!-

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart; And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.

Lady C. That is because the traitor murderer lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.

death 1

Lady C. We will have vengcanc for it, fear thou not;

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua-

Where that same banish'd runagate dotte live-

Shall give him such an unaccustom'd diam That he shall soon keep Tybalt company; And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied With Romeo till I behold him-dead-Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd. 95

Madam, if you could find out but a man To bear a poison, I would temper it. That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,

Soon sleep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors

To hear him nam'd, and cannot come to him.

To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him! Lady C. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl. Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy

What are they, beseech your ladyship? Lady C. Well, well, thou hast a careful But thankful even for hate that is meant Lady C. Av, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would the fool were married to her grave! Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.

How will she none? Doth she not give us thanks?

Is she not proud? Doth she not count her blest.

Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend ; An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets.

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee.

Nor what is mine shall never do thee good. Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit. Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds That sees into the bottom of my grief? O, sweet my mother, cast me not away! Delay this marriage for a month, a week; Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed 201 In that dim monument where Tybalt lies. Lady C. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word; Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

[Exit. Jul. O God !-O nurse! how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven:

How shall that faith return again to earth, Unless that husband send it me from heaven

By leaving earth? Comfort me, counsel

Alack, alack, that heaven should reactise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself! What say'st thou! Hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse.

Nur se. Faith, here it is: Romeo is banished; and all the world to nothing

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you: Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth. Then, since the case so stands as now it doth. I think it best you married with the County.

O, he's a lovely gentleman!

Romeo 's a dishclout to him; an eagle. madam, Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye As Paus hath. Beshrew my very heart, I think you are happy in this second match, For it excels your first; or, if it did not, Your fuse is dead, or 'twere as good he were

As Lying here and you no use of him. Jul. Speak'st thou from thy heart?

Nanse. And from my soul too, else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse. What?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much. Go in; and fell my lady I am gone.

Having displeas'd my father, to Lawrence'

To make confession, and to be absolv'd. Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely [Exit.

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend! Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn.

Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue

Which she hath prais'd him with above compare So many thousand times? Go, counsellor;

Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain. I'll to the friar to know his remedy; If all else fail, myself have power to die.

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Fria Lawrence's cell.

Exit.

Enter Friar Lawrence and County Paris.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? The time is very short.

Par. My tather Capulet will have it so, And I am nothing slow to slack his haste. Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's mind:

Uneven is the course; I like it not. Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death.

And therefore have I little talk'd of love: For Venus smiles not in a house of tears. Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous That she do give her sorrow so much sway,

And in his wisdom hastes our marriage, II To stop the inundation of her tears; Which, too much minded by herself alone,

May be put from her by society.

Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. L. [Aside] I would I knew not why

it should be slow'd.—

Look, sir, here comes the lady toward my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife!

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul. What must be shall be.

Frt. L. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this father?

Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you that I love him Par. So will ye, I am suie, that you love me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price Being spoke behind your back than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by that,

For it was bad enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it more than tears with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth;

And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast sland'red it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.

Are you at leisure, holy father, now,

Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.

My lord, we must entreat the time alone. 40
Par. God shield I should disturb devotion!

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse ye; Till then, adieu, and keep this holy kiss.

[Exit.

Jul. O, shut the door, and when thou hast done so,

Come weep with me—past hope, past cure, past help.

Fri. L. O, Juliet, I already know thy grief;

It strains me past the compass of my wits.

I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,

On Thursday next be married to this County.

Jul. Tell me not, firar, that thou hear'st of this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it. If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help, Do thou but call my resolution wise, And with this knife I'll help it presently.

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands:

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo's seal'd, Shall be the label to another deed, Or my true heart with treacherous sevolt Turn to another, this shall slav them both Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time, Give me some present counsel; or, beheld, 'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody

Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that
Which the commission of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die,

If what thou speak'st speak not of temedy Fri. L. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution As that is desperate which we would pre-

If, rather than to marry County Paris, Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself.

Then is it likely thou wilt undertake A thing like death to chide away this shame, That cop'st with death himself to scape from it;

And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than many Paris,

From off the battlements of any tower.
Or walk in thevish ways, or bid me luik
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears.

Or hide me nightly in a charnel house, O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,

With recky shanks and yellow chapless skulls:

Or bid me go into a new-made grave, And hide me with a dead man in his shroud—

Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble—

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.
Fri. L. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris. Wednesday is to-morrow;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not the nurse he with thee in thy chamber.

Take thou this vial, being then in bed.

And this distilled liquor drink thou off;

When presently through all thy veins shall run

A cold and drowsy humour; for no puls:
Shall keep his native progress, but surceuse;

No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest:

The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade To paly ashes, thy eyes' windows fall, Like death when he shuts up the day of life; Each part, depriv'd of supple government, Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death:

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death

Thou shalt continue two and forty hours, And then awake as from a pleasant sleep. Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead.

Then, as the manner of our country is, In thy best robes, uncovered on the bier, Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient

Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie. In the meantime, against thou shalt awake, Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift, And hither shall he come; and he and I Will watch thy waking, and that very night Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua. And this shall free thee from this present shame.

If no inconstant toy nor womanish fear Abate thy valous in the acting it. Jul. Give me, give me! O, tell not me of

Fri. L. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord. Jul. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford. Farewell, dear father! [Exeunt.

Scene II. Capulet's house.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and two or three Servingmen.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are [Exit a Servingman. Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks. Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers. Cup. How canst thou try them so?

Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers; therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, be gone.

[Exit second Servingman. We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.

What, is my daughter gone to Friar Lawrence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth. Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look. Cap. How now, my headstrong! Where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learnt me to repent the SIL

Of disobedient opposition

To you and your benests; and am enjoin'd By holy Lawrence to fall prostrate here, 20 To beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech you.

Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you. Cap. Send for the County; go tell him of this.

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Lawrence' cell.

And gave him what becomed love I might, Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is wellstand up--This is as't should be.

Let me see the County; Ay, marry, go, I say, and tetch him hither. Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,

All our whole city is much bound to him. Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet

To help me sort such needful ornaments As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow? Lady C. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her. We'll to church to-morrow.

[Exeunt Juliet and Nurse. Lady C. We shall be short in our provision;

'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush, I will stir about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee. wite.

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her; I'll not to bed to-night; let me alone. I'll play the huswife for this once. What, ho!

They are all forth; well, I will walk myself To County Paris, to prepare up him Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Juliet's chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best; but, gentle nurse, I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night,

For I have need of many orisons To move the heavens to smile upon my state.

Which well thou knowest is cross and ful of sin-

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady C. What, are you busy, ho? Need O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught. you my help?

Jul. No. madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow So please you, let me now be left alone. And let the nurse this night sit up with And, in this rage, with some great kinsyou;

For I am sure you have your hands full all In this so sudden business. Good night.

Lady C. Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast [Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of life: I'll call them back again to comfort me. Nurse !- What should she do here ? My dismal scene I needs must act alone. Come, vial.

What if this mixture do not work at all? Shall I be married, then, to-morrow morning?

No, no; this shall forbid it. Lie thou there. [Laying down her dagger.

What if it be a poison which the friar Subtly hath minist'red to have me dead, 25 Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd.

Because he married me before to Romeo? I fear it is; and yet methinks it should not,

For he hath still been tried a holy man. How if, when I am laid into the tomb, I wake before the time that Romeo Come to redeem me? There's a fearful point.

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault, To whose foul mouth no healthsome air But I will watch you from such watching breathes in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?

Or, if I live, is it not very like The horrible conceit of death and night, Together with the terror of the place-As in a vault, an ancient receptacle Where for this many hundred years the bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd; Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,

Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they

At some hours in the night spirits resort-Alack, alack, is it not like that I, 45 So early waking-what with loathsome smells,

And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth.

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad-

Environed with all these hideous fears, 50

And madly play with my forefathers' joints.

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud.

man's bone,

As with a club, dash out my desp'rate brains?

O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay. Romeo, I come. This do I drink to thee.

[She drinks and falls upon her bed within the curtains.

Scene IV. Capulet's house.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady C. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! The second cock hath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock. Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica: 5 Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go. Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick tomorrow

For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; what! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

Lady C. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;

now. [Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four Servingmen with spits and logs and baskets.

Now, fellow,

What is there? 1 Fellow. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. 1 Fellow] Sirrah, fetch drier logs; Call Peter; he will show thee where they are. 2 Fellow. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson, ha!

Thou shalt be logger-head. [Exit 2 Fellow] Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff. Good faith, 'tis day;

The County will be here with music straight, For so he said he would, [Play music] I hear him near.

Nurse! Wife! What, ho! What, nurse, I say!

Re-uter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up; 25 I'll go and chat with Paris. Hie, make haste, aste. The bridegroom he is come Make haste. already. [Exeunt.

Make haste, I say.

Scene V. Juliet's chamber.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress! What, mistress! Juliet!

Fast, I warrant her, she. Why, lamb! Why, lady! Fie, you slug-abed!

Why, love, I say! madam! sweetheart! Why, bride!

What, not a word? You take your pennyworths now.

Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant.

The County Paris hath set up his rest That you shall rest but little. God forgive Marry, and amen. How sound is she asleep! I needs must wake her. Madam, madam, madam!

Ay, let the County take you in your bed; He'll fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be? [Draws the curtains.

What, dress'd, and in your clothes, and down again!

I must needs wake you. Lady ! lady ! lady ! Alas, alas! Help, help! my lady 's dead! O well-a-day that ever I was born! Some aqua-vitæ, ho! My lord! My lady!

Enter LADY CAPULET.

Lady C. What noise is here? O lamentable day! Lady C. What is the matter

Look, look! O heavy day! Nurse. Lady C. O me, O me! My child, my only life, Revive, look up, or I will die with thee! 20 Help, help! Call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her Dead art thou; alack, my child is dead, lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead; alack the day!

dead, she's dead!

Cap. Ha! let me see her. Out, alas! she's cold;

Life and these lips have long been separated.

Death lies on her like an untimely frost Upon the sweetest flower of all the field. Nurse. O lamentable day!

Lady C. O woeful time! 10 Cab. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail.

Ties up my tongue and will not let me speak.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and COUNTY PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return. O son, the night before thy wedding day 35 Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies.

Flower as she was, deflowered by him. Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir: My daughter he hath wedded; I will die. And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this? Lady C. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour that e'er time saw In lasting labour of his pilgrimage! But one, poor one, one poor and loving child.

But one thing to rejoice and solace in. And cruel Death hath catch'd it from my sight!

Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!

Most lamentable day, most woeful day 50 That ever, ever, I did yet behold! O day! O day! O day! O hateful day! Never was seen so black a day as this.

O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!

Most detestable Death, by thee beguil'd. By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd !-Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now

To murder, murder our solemnity? O child! O child! my soul, and not my child!

And with my child my joys are buried.

Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! Confusion's cure lives not Lady C. Alack the day, she's dead, she's In these confusions. Heaven and yourself Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all.

25 And all the better is it for the maid.

Your part in her you could not keep from crotchets: I'll re you, I'll fa you: do you death.

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life. 70 The most you sought was her promotion, For 'twas your heaven she should be advanc'd;

And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself? O, in this love, you love your child so ill 75 That you run mad, seeing that she is well.

She's not well married that lives married long,

But she's best married that dies married young.

Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary On this fair corse, and, as the custom is, 80 In all her best array bear her to church; For though fond nature bids us all lament,

Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment. Cab. All things that we ordained festival Turn from their office to black funeral: 85 Our instruments to melancholy bells,

Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast. Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change; Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse; And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. L. Sir. go you in; and, madam, go with hım ;

And go, Sir Paris. Every one prepare To follow this fair corse unto her grave. The heavens do lour upon you for some ill; Move them no more by crossing their high Exeunt all but Nurse and Musicians. 1 Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up; For well you know this is a pitiful case.

[Exit. 1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, 'Heart's ease', 'Heart's ease'! O, an you will have me live, play 'Heart's ease'

1 Mus. Why 'Heart's ease'?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe'. O, play me some merry dump to comfort me.

1 Mus. Not a dump we! 'Tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not, then?

1 Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly. 1 Mus. What will you give us?

 Pet. No money, on my faith, but the gleek. I will give you the minstrel.

1 Mus. Then will I give you the servingcreature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no News from Verona! How now, Balthasar!

note me?

1 Mus. An you re us and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men.

When griping grief the heart doth wound And doleful dumps the mind oppress, Then music with her silver sound '- 125

Why 'silver sound'? Why 'music with her silver sound'? What say you, Simon Catling?

1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you. Hugh Rebeck? 2 Mus. I say 'silver sound' because musicians sound for silver. Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James Soundpost? 3 Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy, you are the singer; I will say for you. It is 'music with her silver sound' because musicians have no gold for sounding.

'Then music with her silver sound With speedy help doth lend redress.'

Exit.

I Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same!

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. Mantua. A street.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.

My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne. And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead-

Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think !-

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips

That I reviv'd, and was an emperor. Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd, When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR, Romeo's man.

Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?

How doth my lady? Is my father well? How fares my Juliet? That I ask again, 15 For nothing can be ill if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill. Her body sleeps in Capels' monument, And her immortal part with angels lives. I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, -0 And presently took post to tell it you. O. pardon me for bringing these ill news, Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it e'en so? Then I defy you, stars.

Thou knowest my lodging: get me ink and paper,

And hire post-horses; I will hence tonight. Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience;

Your looks are pale and wild, and do import

Some misadventure.

Tush, thou art deceiv'd; Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do. Hast thou no letters to me from the friar ? Bal. No, my good loid.

Rom. No matter; get thee gone, And hire those horses; I'll be with thee [Exit Balthasar. straight.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night. Let's see for means. O mischief, thou ait Of twenty men, it would dispatch you

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men! I do remember an apothecary, And hereabouts 'a dwells, which late I noted tatt'red weeds, with overwhelming brows,

Culling of simples. Meagre were his looks; Sharp misery had worn him to the bones; And in his needy shop a tortoise hung, An alligator stuff'd, and other skins

Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves A beggarly account of empty boxes, Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,

Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses.

Were thinly scattered, to make up a show. Noting this penury, to myself I said An if a man did need a poison now. Whose sale is present death in Mantua, Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it hım '.

O, this same thought did but forerun my need;

And this same needy man must sell it me. As I remember, this should be the house. 55 Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut. What, ho! Apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thou art poor.

Hold, there is forty ducats; let me have A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear As will disperse itself through all the veins That the life-weary taker may fall dead. And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath

As violently as hasty powder fir'd Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb. Ab. Such mortal drugs I have: but Mantua's law

Is death to any he that utters them.

Art thou so bare and full of Rom wretchedness

And fearest to die? Famine is in thy cheeks. Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,

Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back,

The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law:

The world affords no law to make thee rich: Then be not poor, but break it and take

Ap. My poverty but not my will consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty and not thy will. Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will And drink it off; and if you had the strength straight.

Rom. There is thy gold-worse poison to men's souls.

Doing more murder in this loathsome world Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell.

I sell thee poison: thou hast sold me none. Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.

Come, cordial and not poison, go with me To Juliet's grave; for there must I use SCLNI. II. Friar Lawrence's cell.

Enter FRIAR JOHN.

Fig. J. Holy Franciscan triar! Brother,

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John. Welcome from Mantua! What says

Romeo?

Or, it his mind be writ, give me his letter. Fri. J. Going to find a barefoot brother out,

One of our order, to associate me, Here in this city visiting the sick, And finding him, the searchers of the town, Suspecting that we both were in a house Where the infectious pestilence did reign,

Ap.

Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us What cursed foot wanders this way toforth.

So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Fri. L. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo ?

Fri. J. I could not send it-here it is again-

Nor get a messenger to bring it thee. So fearful were they of infection.

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! my brotherhood.

The letter was not nice, but full of charge Of dear import; and the neglecting it May do much danger. Friar John, go hence: Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight

Unto my cell. Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. Exit.

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone.

Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake:

She will beshrew me much that Romeo Hath had no notice of these accidents. But I will write again to Mantua, And keep her at my cell till Romeo come-

Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's [Exit. tomb!

Scene III. Verona. A churchyard; in it the tomb of the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page bearing flowers and a torch.

stand aloof:

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen. Under youd yew trees lay thee all along, Holding thy ear close to the hollow ground; So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread-

Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves-

But thou shalt hear it. Whistle then to me, As signal that thou hearest something approach.

Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go. Page. [Aside] I am almost afraid to stand alone

Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. [Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew-

O woe, thy canopy is dust and stones !--Which with sweet water nightly I will dew; Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans.

To cross my obsequies and true love's rite? What, with a toich! Muffle me, night,

Enter Romeo and Balthasan, with a torch. - mattock, and a crow of from.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning See thou deliver it to my lord and father. Give me the light; upon thy life I charge thee.

Whate'er thou hearest or seest, stand all aloof

And do not interrupt me in my course. Why I descend into this bed of death Is partly to behold my lady's face,

But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger

A precious ring—a ring that I must use In dear employment; therefore hence, be gone.

But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry In what I farther shall intend to do. By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint, And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs.

The time and my intents are savage-wild, More fierce and more mexorable far

Than empty tigers or the roaring sea. Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship. Take thou that:

Par. Give me thy torch, boy; hence, and Live and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. [Aside] For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death.

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth, Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

Breaking open the tomb. And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food.

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague

That murd'red my love's cousin-with which grief

It is supposed the fair creature died-And here is come to do some villainous shame

To the dead bodies. I will apprehend him. Stop thy unhallowed toil, vile Montague. Can vengeance be pursued further than death?

Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee. Obey, and go with me; for thou must die. Rom. I must indeed: and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desp'iate And never from this palace of dim night man:

Fly hence, and leave me. Think upon these gone;

Let them affright thee. I beseech thee.

youth, Put not another sin upon my head By urging me to fury; O, be gone! By heaven, I love thee better than myself. For I come hither arm'd against myself. 65 Stay not, be gone; live, and hereafter say A madman's mercy bid thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjuration,

And apprehend thee for a felon here. Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? Then have at thee, boy ! [They fight. Page. O loid, they fight! I will go call the watch. [Exit. Paris falls.

Par. O. I am slain! If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies. Rom. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face.

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris! What said my man, when my betossed soul Did not attend him as we rode? I think He told me Paris should have married Juliet. Said he not so, or did I dream it so? Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet, 80 To think it was so? O, give me thy hand, One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!

I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave. A grave? O no! A lantern, slaught'red youth:

For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes This vault a feasting presence full of light. Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying Paris in the tomb. How oft when men are at the point of death

Have they been merry! Which their keepers call

A lightning before death. O, how may I 90 Call this a lightning? O my love! my wife! Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath, Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty. Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign

Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks, 95 And death's pale flag is not advanced there. Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?

O, what more favour can I do to thee Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain

To sunder his that was thine enemy? 100 Forgive me, cousin. Ah, dear Juliet, Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe That unsubstantial Death is amorous, And that the lean abhorred monster keeps Thee here in dark to be his paramour? 105 For fear of that I still will stay with thee, Depart again. Here, here will I remain With worms that are thy chambermaids. O. here

Will I set up my everlasting rest, And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look your last.

Arms, take your last embrace. And, lips. O you

The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death! 115 Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide.

Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark. Here's to my love! [Dimks] O true apothecarv!

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die. [Falls.

Enter FRIAR LAWRENCE, with lantern, crow. and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! How oft to-night

Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who's there?

Bal. Here's one, a triend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,

What torch is youd that vainly lends his

To grubs and eyeless skulls? As I discern, It burneth in the Capels' monument. Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master. One that you love.

Fri. L. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo. Fri. L. How long hath he been there? Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir. My master knows not but I am gone hence,

And fearfully did menace me with death. If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay, then, I'll go alone; fear comes upon me;

O, much I fear some ill unthrifty thing. Bal. As I did sleep under this yew tree here.

I dreamt my master and another fought,

And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. Romeo! Alack, alack, what blood is this which stains

The stony entrance of this sepulchre? What mean these masterless and gory swords

To lie discolour'd by this place of peace? [Enters the tomb. Romeo! O, pale! Who else? What, Paris too ?

And steep'd in blood? Ah, what an unkind hour

Is guilty of this lamentable chance! The lady stirs. [Juliet wakes.

Jul. O comfortable friar! Where is vny lord?

I do remember well where I should be, And there I am. Where is my Romeo? 150 [Noise within.

Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest

A greater power than we can contradict Hath thwarted our intents. Come, come awav:

Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead; And Paris too. Come, I'll dispose of thee Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.

coming;

Come, go, good Juliet. I dare no longer stay.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away. [Exit Friar Lawrence. A cup, clos'd in my true What's here? love's hand?

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end. O churl! drunk all, and left no friendly

To help me after? I will kiss thy lips: Haply some poison yet doth hang on them, To make me die with a restorative. 706 [Kisses him.

Thy lips are warm.

1 Watch. [Within] Lead, boy. Which wav?

Jul. Yea, noise? Then I'll be brief. O happy dagger!

[Snatching Romeo's dagger. This is thy sheath; there rust, and let me die.

[She stabs herself and falls on Romeo's bodv.

Enter Watch, with Paris's Page.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody; search about the churchyard.

Go, some of you, whoe'er you find attach. [Exeunt some of the Watch. Pitiful sight! here lies the County slain; And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead, Who here hath lain this two days buried. Go, tell the Prince; run to the Capulets; Raise up the Montagues; some others search. [Exeunt others of the Watch. We see the ground whereon these woes do lie:

But the true ground of all these piteous We cannot without circumstance descry.

Re-enter some of the Watch with Balthasar.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

Watch. Hold him in safety till the Prince come hither.

Re-enter FRIAR LAWRENCE and another Watchman.

3 Watch. Here is a friar that trembles, sighs, and weeps;

We took this mattock and this spade from him,

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep; As he was coming from this churchyard's sıde.

1 Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up. Stay not to question, for the watch is That calls our person from our morning rest?

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Others.

Cab. What should it be that is so shriek'd abroad?

Lady C. The people in the street cry 'Romeo', 190 Some 'Juliet' and some 'Paris'; and all

With open outcry, toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears? 1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County

Paris slain: TOA. And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before.

Warm and new kill'd. Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes. 1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man.

With instruments upon them fit to open These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O heavens! O wife, look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en, for, lo, his house Is empty on the back of Montague,

And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

Lady C. O me! this sight of death is as a bell

That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and Others.

Prince. Come. Montague, for thou art early up

To see thy son and heir more early down. Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath. What further woe conspires against mine age? Prince. Look, and thou shalt see. Mon. O thou untaught! what manners Of her awakening, here untimely lay is in this.

To press before thy father to a grave? Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while.

Till we can clear these ambiguities,

And then will I be general of your woes, And lead you even to death. Meantime forbear.

And let mischance be slave to patience. 220 Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least, Yet most suspected, as the time and place Doth make against me, of this direful murder:

And here I stand, both to impeach and puige

Myself condemned and myself excus'd. Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale. Romeo, there dead, was husband to that

Juliet:

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife.

I married them; and their stol'n marriageday

Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death

Banish'd the new-made bridegiooni from this city;

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd. You, to remove that siege of grief from Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,

To County Paris. Then comes she to me, And with wild looks bid me devise some mean

To rid her from this second marriage, Or in my cell there would she kill heiself. Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art, A sleeping potion; which so took effect As I intended, for it wrought on her The form of death. Meantime I writ to

Romeo That he should hither come as this dire night

To help to take her from her borrowed grave,

Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he which bore my letter, Friar John, Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight Return'd my letter back. Then all alone At the prefixed hour of her waking Came I to take her from her kindred's vault: Meaning to keep her closely at my cell Till I conveniently could send to Romeo. But when I came, some minute ere the time As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Prince We still have known thee for a holy man.

Where's Romeo's man? What can he say to this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death,

And then in post he came from Mantua To this same place, to this same monument, This letter he early bid me give his father; And threat'ned me with death, going in the vault.

Ii I departed not and left him there. Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on Where is the County's page that rais'd the watch?

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Juliet. Where be these enemies? Capulet.

Montague, See what a scourge is laid upon your hate. That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!

And I, for winking at your discords too. Have lost a brace of kinsmen. All are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand.

This is my daughter's jointure, for no more Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more: For I will raise her statue in pure gold, That whiles Verona by that name is known. There shall no figure at such rate be set 300

ACT ONE

Scene I. Athens. Timon's house.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Meicer, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad y'are well. Poet. I have not seen you long; how goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Ay, that's well known. But what particular rarity? What strange. Which manifold record not matches? See. Magic of bounty, all these spirits thy power Hath conjur'd to attend! I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; th' other's a jeweller.

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord!

Nay, that's most fix'd. Jew. A most incomparable man; b.eath'd, as it were,

To an untirable and continuate goodness. 11 He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here-

Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate. But One might interpret. for that-

Poet. When we for recompense have Here is a touch; is't good? prais'd the vile, Poet. It stains the glory in that happy verse

Which aptly sings the good. Mer. [Looking at the jewel] 'Tis a good Jew. And rich. Here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work. some dedication To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me. Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes

From whence 'tis nourish'd. The fire i' th' flint

Shows not till it be struck: our gentle flame

Provokes itself, and like the current flies Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment. sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece. Poet. So 'tis; this comes off well and excellent. Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable. How this grace Speaks his own standing! What a mental power

This eye shoots forth! How big imagination

Mer. O, pray let's see't. For the Lord Moves in this lip! To th' dumbness of the gesture Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.

I will say of it 17 It tutors nature. Artificial strife Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord is followed!

Poet. The senators of Athens—happy Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with man!

Pain. Look, moe!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have in this rough work shap'd out a Drink the free air. man

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment. My free drift Halts not particularly, but moves itself In a wide sea of tax. No levell'd malice 50 Infects one comma in the course I hold, But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on, Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you? I will unbolt to you. Poet.

You see how all conditions, how all minds-As well of glib and slipp'ry creatures as

Of grave and austere quality, tender down Their services to Lord Timon. His large fortune.

To Apemantus, that few things loves better Than to abhor himself; even he drops down

The knee before him, and returns in peace Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together. 65 Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hıll Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd. The base o' th' mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures

That labour on the bosom of this sphere To propagate their states. Amongst them

Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her:

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants

Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope. 75 This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest

Bowing his head against the steepy mount To climb his happiness, would be well express'd

In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on. 80 All those which were his fellows but of late-

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these? Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood

Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants.

Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down. Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common. A thousand moral paintings I can show That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's

More pregnantly than words. Yet you do

To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have

The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor, a Messenger from Ventidius talking with him: Lucilius and other Servants following.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mess. Ay, my good lord. Five talents is his debt:

His means most short, his creditors most strait.

Your honourable letter he desires To those have shut him up; which failing, Periods his comfort.

Noble Ventidius! Well. I am not of that feather to shake off My friend when he must need me.

know him A gentleman that well deserves a help, 105 Which he shall have. I'll pay the debt, and free him. Mess. Your lordship ever binds him. Tim. Commend me to him; I will send his ransom:

And being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up, 110 But to support him after. Fare you well. Mess. All happiness to your honour! Exit.

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak. Freely, good father. Tim. Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him? Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no? Lucilius! Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature, 110 By night frequents my house. I am a man That from my first have been inclin'd to For since dishonour traffics with man's thrift,

And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd He is but outside; these pencill'd figures

Than one which holds a trencher. Well; what further? Tim.

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else.

On whom I may confer what I have got. 125 The maid is fair, o' th' youngest for a bride. And I have bred her at my dearest cost In qualities of the best. This man of thine Attempts her love: I prithee, noble lord, Join with me to forbid him her resort; 130 Myself have spoke in vain.

The man is honest. Tim. Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon.

His honesty rewards him in itself; It must not bear my daughter.

Does she love him? Tim.

Old Ath. She is young and apt: Our own precedent passions do instruct us What levity's in youth.

Love you the maid? Tim. Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,

I call the gods to witness I will choose Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world.

And dispossess her all.

How shall she be endow'd. Tim. If she be mated with an equal husband? Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long;

To build his fortune I will strain a little, 146 For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise, And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord, Pawn me to this your honour, she is his. 150 Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise. Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship.

Never may That state or fortune fall into my keeping by thy name.

Which is not owed to you! [Exeunt Lucilius and Old Athenian.

Poet. [Presenting his poem] Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon;

Go not away. What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech

Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome. The painting is almost the natural man; 160 nature, are

Even such as they give out. I like your work.

And you shall find I like it; wait attendance

Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve ye! 165 Tim. Well fare you, gentleman. Give me your hand:

We must needs dine together. Sir, your iewel

Hath suffered under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! Dispraise? Tim. A mere satiety of commendations: If I should pay you for't as 'tis extoll'd, 170 It would unclew me quite.

My lord, 'tis rated As those which sell would give; but you well know Things of like value, differing in the owners, Are prized by their masters. Believe't, dear lord,

You mend the jewel by the wearing it. 175 Tim. Well mock'd.

Enter APEMANTUS.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue.

Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look who comes here; will you be chid?

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship. Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem. Till I he gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest.

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? Thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians? 185 Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus? Apent. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus. Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou't die for. Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by th' law.

Tim. How lik'st thou this picture, Ape- You must needs dine with me. Go not you mantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it? Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. Y'are a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation; what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus? Apem. No; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'dst anger

Apem. O, they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension. Apem. So thou apprehend'st it take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel,

Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth? Apem. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet!

Poet. How now, philosopher!

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one? Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest. Look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign 1-he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour. He that loves to be flattered is worthy o' th' flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus? Apem. E'en as Apemantus does now: hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.—Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it. Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Mess. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse.

All of companionship.

Tim. Pray entertain them; give them That ever govern'd man. guide to us.

[Exeunt some Attendants.

hence Till I have thank'd you. When dinner's done

Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter Alcibiades, with the rest

Most welcome, sir! [They salute.

Apem. So, so, there!

Aches contract and starve your supple ioints! That there should be small love amongst these sweet knaves, And all this courtesy! The strain of man's bred out Into baboon and monkey.

Alcıb. Sır, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

Most hungerly on your sight.

Tım. Right welcome, sir! 255 Ere we depart we'll share a bounteous time In different pleasures. Piav you, let us in. [Exeunt all but Apemanius Enter two Lords.

1 Lord. What time o' day is't, Apemantus?

Abem. Time to be honest.

220

1 Lord. That time serves still. Apem. The more accursed thou that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timen's teast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves and wine hea' fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself. Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding; make thy requests to thy friend. 2 Lord. A vay, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o' th' ass. IExit.

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in

And taste Loid Timon's bounty? He out-

The very heart of kindness.
2 Lord. He pours it out: Plutus, the god of gold,

Is but his steward; no meed but he repays Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him and But breeds the giver a return exceeding All use of quittance.

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in? 284

1 Lord, I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.

Ven. Most honoured Timon,

It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my fathei's age,

And call him to long peace.

He is gone happy, and has left me rich. Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help

I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O, by no means, Honest Ventidius! You mistake my love; I gave it freely ever; and there's none 10 Can truly say he gives, if he receives. If our betters play at that game, we must lord.

Ven. A noble spirit! Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first

To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes.

Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown : But where there is true friendship there Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the needs none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes

Than my fortunes to me. [They sit. 20 1 Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.

Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it! Hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O, Apemantus, you are welcome. Apem. No;

You shall not make me welcome. I come to have thee thrust me out of doors. Tim. Fie, th'art a churl; ye have got a humour there

Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.

They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est; but youd man is ever angry. Go, let hun have a table by himself; for he does neither affect company nor is he fit for't ındeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil, Timon.

on't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee. Th'art an I myself Athenian, therefore welcome. would have no power; prithee let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should ne'er flatter thee. O you gods, what a number of men eats Timon. and he sees 'em not! It grieves me to see so many dip their meat in one man's blood : and all the madness is, he cheers them un too.

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.

Methinks they should invite them without knives:

Good for their meat and safer for their lives. There's much example for't; the fellow that sits next him now, parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a divided draught, is the readiest man to kill him. 'T has been proved. If I were a huge man I should fear to drink at meals.

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes.

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart! and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair. He keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon. Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner, honest water, which ne'er left man i' th' mire.

This and my food are equals; there's no odds.

Apemantus' Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf; 60 I pray for no man but myself. Grant I may never prove so fond To trust man on his oath or bond. Or a harlot for her weeping, Or a dog that seems a-sleeping, 65 Or a keeper with my freedom, Or my friends, if I should need 'em. Amen. So fall to't. Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eats and drinks. Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding new, my I come to observe; I give thee warning lord, there's no meat like 'em; I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apens. Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em, and bid me to 'em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you. How had you been my friends else? Why have you that charitable title from thousands. did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods. think I, what need we have any friends if we should ne'er have need of 'em? They were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for 'em; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wish'd myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis to have so many like brothers commanding one another's fortunes! O, joy's e'en made away ere't can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks. To forget their faults, I drink

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drink,

Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eves.

And at that instant like a babe sprung up. Abem. Ho. ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

[Sound tucket. Apem. Much! Tim. What means that trump?

Enter a Servant.

How now?

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance. Tim. Ladies! What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon, and to all

That of his bounties taste! The five best Senses

Acknowledge thee their patron, and come freely

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom. Th' Ear, Taste, Touch, Smell, pleas'd from thy table rise;

They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all; let 'em have kınd admıttance.

Music, make their welcome. Exit Cubid. 1 Lord. You see, my lord, how ample v'are belov'd.

Music. Re-enter Cupid, with a Masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance? They are mad women. Like madness is the glory of this life,

As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves.

And spend our flatteries to drink those men Upon whose age we void it up again

With poisonous spite and envy. Who I'ves that's not deprayed or deprayes?

Who dies that bears not one spurn to their graves Of their friends' gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now

Would one day stamp upon me. 'T has been done:

Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of Timon; and to show their loves, each single out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies.

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind: You have added worth unto't and lustre, And entertain'd me with mine own device; I am to thank you for't.

1 Lady. My loid, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you;

Please you to dispose yourselves. All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord.

[Exeunt Cupid and Ladies.

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord?
Tim. The little casket bring me hither. Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside] More jewels vet!

There is no crossing him in's humour, 155 Else I should tell him—well i' faith, I should-

When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind, That man might ne'er be wretched for his IExit. ¥60

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness. 2 Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS, with the casket,

Tim. O my friends,

I have one word to say to you. Look you, my good lord,

I must entreat you honour me so much 16 As to advance this jewel; accept it and lik'd it.

wear it.

Kind my lord.

1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the Senate newly alighted and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

[Exit Servant. Flav. I beseech your honour, vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Why then, another time Tim. Near! I'll hear thee. I prithee let's be provided to show them entertainment.

Flav. [Aside] I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius, out of his free love, hath presented to you four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly. Let the presents

Be worthily entertain'd. [Exit Servant.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! What news? 3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Luculius, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,

Not without fair reward. [Exit Servant. Flav. [Aside] What will this come to? He commands us to provide and give great gifts, And all out of an empty coffer; Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this, To show him what a beggar his heart is, Being of no power to make his wishes good. His promises fly so beyond his state That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes For ev'ry word. He is so kind that he now Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books. Well, would I were gently put out of office Before I were forc'd out!

Happier is he that has no friend to feed 200 Than such that do e'en enemies exceed. I bleed inwardly for my lord.

Tim. You do yourselves much wrong:

You bate too much of your own ments,

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

3 Lord. O, he's the very soul of bounty! Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave good words the other day of a bay courser I rode on. 'Tis yours because you

3 Lord. O, I beseech you pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord: I know no man

Can justly praise but what he does affect. I weigh my friend's affection with mine

I'll tell you true; I'll call to you. All Lords. O, none so welcome!

Tim. I take all and your several visita-

So kind to heart 'tis not enough to give: Methinks I could deal kingdoms to my friends

And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades, Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich. It comes in charity to thee; for all thy hring

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast

Lie in a pitch'd field. 225

Alcib. Ay, deni'd land my lord.

1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound—

Tim. And so am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd— Tim. All to you. Lights, more lights! 230

1 Lord. The best of happiness, honour, and fortunes, keep with you, Lord Timon! Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt all but Apemantus and Timon. Apem. What a coil's here!

Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums!

I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs: Methinks false hearts should never have sound legs. Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on curtsies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen I would be good to thre.

Apem. No. I'll nothing; for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in What needs these feasts, paper shortly. pomps, and vainglories?

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell; and come with better music.

[Exit.

Apem. So. Thou wilt not hear me now : thou shalt not then. I'll lock thy heaven from thee. O that men's ears should be

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.

ACT TWO

Scene I. A Senator's house.

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand. To Varro and to Isidore

He owes nine thousand; besides my former

Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion

Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not. If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold. If I would sell my horse and buy twenty moe Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,

Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me straight,

And able horses. No porter at his gate, 10 But rather one that smiles and still invites All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason Can sound his state in safety. Caphis, ho! Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Here, sir; what is your pleasure? Cap. Sen. Get on your cloak and haste you to Lord Timon:

ceas'd

With slight denial, nor then silenc'd when 'Commend me to your master' and the cap Plays in the right hand, thus; but tell him My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn 20 Out of mine own; his days and times are past,

And my reliances on his fracted dates Have smit my credit. I love and honour

But must not break my back to heal his finger.

Immediate are my needs, and my relief -5 Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words.

But find supply immediate. Get you gone; Put on a most importunate aspect. A visage of demand; for I do fear,

When every feather sticks in his own wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which flashes now a phœnix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir. Take the bonds along prays your speedy payment-Sen.

with you, And have the dates in compt.

I will, sir, Cabh. Sen.

Go. 35 [Exeunt.

Scene II. Before Timon's house.

250 Enter FLAVIUS, Timon's steward, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! So senseless of expense

That he will neither know how to maintain it

Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account How things go from him, nor resumes no care Of what is to continue. Never mind Was to be so unwise to be so kind.

What shall be done? He will not hear till feel.

I must be round with him. Now he comes from hunting. Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good even, Varro. What, you come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too? Caph. It is. And yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so. Cath. Would we were all discharg'd! 14 Var. Serv. 1 tear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON and his Train, with ALCIBIADES.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done we'll forth

Importune him for my moneys; be not My Akibiades.—With me? What is your will?

> Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you? Capli. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward. Caple. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off To the succession of new days this month.

My master is awak'd by great occasion To call upon his own, and humbly prays you

That with your other noble parts you'll suit

In giving him his right. Mine honest friend.

Tim. I prithee but repair to me next morning. Caph. Nay, good my lord-

Contain thyself, good friend. Tim. Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord-Isid. Serv. From Isidore: he humbly

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants-

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks and past. Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord; and I am sent expressly to your superscription of these letters; I know not lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on; I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords. [To Flavius] Come hither. Pray you. 40 How goes the world that I am thus encount'red bonds

And the detention of long-since-due debts, Against my honour?

Please you, gentlemen, The time is unagreeable to this business. 45 Your importunacy cease till after dinner, That I may make his lordship understand Wherefore you are not paid.

Do so, my friends. Tım. IExit. See them well entertain'd. Pray draw near. IExit. Flav.

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus. Let's ha' some sport with Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us! Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog! Var. Serv. How dost, fool? Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No, 'tis to thyself. [To the Fool] Come away

Isid Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Abem. No. thou stand'st single: th'art not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last ask'd the question. Poor rogues and usurers' men! Bawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress?

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth!

Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress'

page. 75

Page [To the Fool] Why, how now,
Captain? What do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably !

Page. Prithee, Apemantus, read me the As I had leave of means.

which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die, then that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou't die a bawd, 87

Page. Thou wast whelp'd a dog, and thou With clamorous demands of date-broke shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not: I am gone. [Exit Page.

Apem. E'en so thou outrun'st grace, Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's, or Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; would they serv'd us! 95 Apem. So would I-as good a trick as ever hangman serv'd thief. Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant. My mistress is one, and I am her tool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily and go away sadly. reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one. Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed. Var. Serv. what is a whoremaster, fool? Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit. Sometime 't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stone; moe than's artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and, generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool. Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man. As much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lack'st.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

Var. Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord Timon. 120

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime the philosopher. [Exeunt Apemantus and Fool.

Flav Pray you walk near; I'll speak with you anon. [Exeunt Servants. Tim. You make me marvel wherefore ere this time

Had you not fully laid my state before me, That I might so have rated my expense

Flav. At many leisures I propos'd.

Go to: When my indisposition put you back. And that unaptness made your minister

Thus to excuse yourself. O my good lord, Flav-At many times I brought in my accounts, Laid them before you; you would throw them off

And say you found them in m.ne honestv. When, for some trifling present, you have bid me

Return so much, I have shook my head and wept;

Yea, 'gainst th' authority of manners, pray'd you

To hold your hand more close. I did endure Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate And your great flow of debts. My lov'd lord.

Though you hear now-too late !--vet now's a time:

The greatest of your having lacks a half 145 To pay your present debts.

Let all my land be sold. Tim. Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth

Of present dues. The future comes apace; What shall defend the interim? And at length

How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend. Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a word:

Were it all yours to give it in a breath, How quickly were it gone!

Tim. You tell me true. 155 Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood.

Call me before th' exactest auditors

And set me on the proof. So the gods bless

When all our offices have been oppress'd With riotous feeders, when our vaults have wept

With drunken spilth of wine, when every room

Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy.

I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock And set mine eyes at flow.

Prithee no more. Flav. 'Heavens,' have I said 'the bounty of this lord!

How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants This night englutted! Who is not Lord That now they are at fall, want treasure, Timon's ?

You would not hear me What heart, head, sword, force, means, but 18 Lord Timon's?

129 Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!' perchance some single vantages you took Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise,

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made.

Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter show'rs.

These flies are couch'd.

Tım. Come, sermon me no further. No villa nous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;

Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given. Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart:

If I would broach the vessels of my love, And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,

Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use As I can bid thee speak.

Assurance bless your thoughts! Flav. Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd

That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends. You shall perceive how Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.

Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and another Servant.

Seriants. My lord! my lord!

Tim. I will dispatch you severally—you to Lord Lucius; to Lord Lucullus you; í hunted with his honour to-day. You to Sempronius. Commend me to their loves; and I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money. Let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my loid. [Exeunt Servants.

Flav. [Aside] Lord Lucius and Luculius? Humh! 195 Tim. Go you, sir, to the senators,

Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing. Bid 'em send o' th' instant

A thousand talents to me.

I have been bold. For that I knew it the most general way, 200 To them to use your signet and your name; But they do shake their heads, and I am here

No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? Can't be? They answer, in a joint and Flav. corporate voice, cannot

Do what they would, are sorry—you are wine. [Exit Servant] And how does that honourable—

But yet they could have wish'd—they know not—

Something hath been amiss—a noble nature

May catch a wrench—would all were well!—
'tis pity—

And so, intending other serious matters, 210
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,

With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods,

They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them! Prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows

Have their ingratitude in them hereditary.

Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows:

'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind:

And nature, as it grows again toward earth, no counsel, take Is fashion'd for the journey dull and heavy. Every man ha Go to Ventidius. Prithee be not said, and his. I ha' told Thou art true and honest; ingeniously I get him from't.

No blame belongs to thee. Ventidus litely Buried his father, by whose death he's stepp'd

Into a great estate. When he was poor, Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends, I clear'd him with five talents. Greet him from me.

Bid him suppose some good necessity

Touches his friend, which craves to be a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belones to

With those five talents. That had, give't these fellows

To whom 'tis instant due. Nev'i speak or think

That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it That thought is bounty's foe; Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Execut.

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Lucullus' house.

FLAMINIUS waiting to speak with Lucullus.

Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.
Lucul. [Aside] One of Lord Timon's men?
A gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night—Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectively welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sit, which in my lord's behalf I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'Nothing doubting' says he? Alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' din'd with him and told him on't; and come again to supper to him of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming Every man has his fault, and honesty is his. I ha' told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from't.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul Flammus, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason, and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well. Good parts in thee. [To Servant] Get you gone, sirrah. [Exi Servant] Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise, and thou know'st well enough, although thou com'st to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship without security. Here's three solidares for thee. Good boy, wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ,

And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness,

To him that worships thee.

[Throwing the money back.
Lucul. Ha! Now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation,

Thou disease of a friend and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart It turns in less than two nights? O you gods.

I feel my master's passion! This slave 55 Unto his honour has my lord's meat in him;

Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment When he is turn'd to poison?

O, may diseases only work upon't!

And when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature

Which my lord paid to be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour!
[Exit.

Scene II. A public place.

Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

I Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no: do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents; nay, urg'd extremely for't, and showed what necessity belong'd to't, and vet was denied.

Luc. How?

2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord. 15
Luc. What a strange case was that!
Now, before the gods, I am asham'd on't.
Denied that honourable man! There was very little honour show'd in't. For my own part, I must needs confess I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such-like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents. 23

Enter SERVILIUS.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honour'd lord!

Luc. Servilius? You are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well; commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent-

Luc. Ha! What has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending. How shall I thank him, think'st thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. Has only sent his present occasion now, my lord, requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me;

He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents. For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous

I should not urge it half so faithfully. 40 Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius? Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! How unluckily it happ'ned that I should purchase the day before for a little part and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to dothe more beast, I say! I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship, and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind. And tell him this from me: I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius. [Exit Servilius. True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed; And he that's once denied will hardly speed.

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius? 2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stren. Why, this is the world's soul;

and just of the same piece
Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him his friend

That dips in the same dish? For, in my knowing, 65

Timon has been this lord's father, And kept his credit with his purse; Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money Has paid his men their wages. He ne'er drinks

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip; 100

And yet—O, see the monstrousness of man When he looks out man ungrateful shape!—

He does deny him, in respect of his, What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran. For mine own part, I never tasted Timon in my life, 76 Nor came any of his bounties over me To mark me for his friend; yet I protest, For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue, And honourable carriage, 80

Had his necessity made use of me, I would have put my wealth into donation, And the best half should have return'd to him,

So much I love his heart. But I perceive
Men must learn now with pity to dispense;

Scene III. Sempronius' house.

Enter SEMPRONIUS and a Servant of Timon's.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't? Hum! 'Bove all others? He might have tried Lord Lucius or

Lucullus:

And now Ventidius is wealthy too, Whom he redeem'd from prison. All these Owe their estates unto him. My lord.

Serv. They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for

They have all denied him.

How! Have they denied him? Sem. Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him? And does he send to me? Three? Humh! It shows but little love or judgment in him. Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians, Thrice give him over. Must I take th' cure upon me?

Has much disgrac'd me in't; I'm angry at him.

That might have known my place. I see no sense for't.

But his occasions might have woo'd me

For, in my conscience, I was the first man That e'er received gift from him.

And does he think so backwardly of me now That I'll requite it last? No;

So it may prove an argument of laughter 20 To th' rest, and I 'mongst lords be thought a fool.

I'd rather than the worth of thrice the sum Had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake:

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return.

And with their faint reply this answer join: Who bates mine honour shall not know my [Exit.

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic-he cross'd himself by't; and I cannot think but, in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! Takes virtuous copies to be wicked, like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire.

Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled,

Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead.

Doors that were ne'er acquainted with their crowns; what's yours? wards

Scene IV. A hall in Timon's house.

Enter two of Varro's Men, meeting Lucius' Servant, and Others, all being servants of Timon's creditors, to wait for his coming out. Then enter TITUS and HORTENSIUS.

1 Var. Serv. Well met; good morrow. Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius! What, do we meet together? Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think one business does command us all; for mine is money. Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once. Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother, what 11 do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on't; he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are wax'd shorter with him;

You must consider that a prodigal course Is like the sun's, but not like his recoverable.

I fear

'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse: That is, one may reach deep enough and vet Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that. Tit. I'll show you how t' observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does. Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift, For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark how strange it shows Timon in this should pay more than he owes;

And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels

And send for money for 'em.

Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness;

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,

And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine. 1 Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep; and it should seem by th' sum

And this is all a liberal course allows: 40 Your master's confidence was above mine,

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of Lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not. Tit. We attend his lordship; pray signify Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. IExit. 40

Enter FLAVIUS, in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! Is not that his steward muffled so? He goes away in a cloud. Call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

2 Var. Serv. By your leave, sir.

Flav. What do ye ask of me, my friend? Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir. Ay, Flav.

If money were as certain as your waiting, 'Twere sure enough.

Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills

When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?

Then they could smile, and fawn upon his debts.

And take down th' int'rest into their glutt'nous maws.

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;

Let me pass quietly. Believe't, my lord and I have made an end: I have no more to reckon, he to spend. 56 Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve. Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you, For you serve knaves.

Exit. 1 Var. Serv. How! What does his cashier'd worship mutter?

2 Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? Such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O. here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't; for take't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him: he's much out of health and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick;

And if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks he should the sooner pay his

And make a clear way to the gods.

Good gods! Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam. [Within] Servilius, help! My lord! my lord !

Enter Timon, in a rage, Flaminius following,

Tim. What, are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house 80 Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place which I have feasted, does it now, Like all mankind, show me an non heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus. Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em; cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord-

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood. Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours? and yours?

1 Var. Serv. My lord-2 Var. Serv. My lord—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you!

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money. debts may well be call'd desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves.

Creditors? Devils!

Flav. My dear lord-

Tim. What it it should be so? Flam. My lord-

Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord. Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again:

Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius-all. I'll once more feast the rascals.

O my lord. Flav. You only speak from your distracted soul;

There is not so much left to furnish out A moderate table.

Tim. Be it not in thy care. Go, I charge thee, invite them all; let in the tide

Of knaves once more: my cook and I'll provide. [Exeunt.

Scene V. The Senate House.

Enter three Senators at one door, ALCIBIADES meeting them, with Attendants.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to't: the fault's bloody.

'Tis necessary he should die:

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise

Alcıb. Honour, health, and compassion, to the Sanate!

1 Sen. Now, Captain?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues:

For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy to Upon a friend of mine, who in hot blood
Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth

To those that without heed do plunge into't.

He is a man, setting his fate aside,

Of comely virtues;

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice— An honour in him which buys out his fault—

But with a noble fury and fair spirit, Seeing his reputation touch'd to death, He did oppose his foe;

And with such sober and unnoted passion He did behove his anger ere 'twas spent, As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox, Striving to make an ugly deed look fair; 25 Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form and set Quarrelling upon the head of valour; which, indeed,

Is valour misbegot, and came into the

When sects and factions were newly born. He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer The worst that man can breathe, And make his wrongs his outsides, To wear them like his raiment, carelessly, And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart, To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill, What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill!

Alcib. My lord—
1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear:

To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me

If I speak like a captain:

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,

And not endure all threats? Sleep upon't, And let the foes quietly cut their throats, Without repugnancy? If there be 45 Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? Why, then, women are more valiant,

That stay at home, if bearing carry it; And the ass more captain than the lion; the fellow

Loaden with irons wiser than the judge, 50 If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords, As you are great, be pitifully good. Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust; But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just. 55 To be in anger is impiety; But who is man that is not angry? Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain! His service done

At Lacedaemon and Byzantium

Were a sufficient briber for his life.

1 Sen. What's that?

Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, has done fair service,

And slain in fight many of your enemies; How full of valour did he bear himself In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds!

2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em.

He's a sworn rioter; he has a sin that often Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner. If there were no foes, that were enough To overcome him. In that beastly fury 70 He has been known to commit outrages And cherish factions. 'Tis inferr'd to us His days are foul and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate! He might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him— 75

Though his right arm might purchase his own time.

And be in debt to none—yet, more to move you,

Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both; And, for I know your reverend ages love Security, I'll pawn my victories, all 80 My honours to you, upon his good returns. If by this crime he owes the law his life, Why, let the war receive't in valiant gore; For law is strict, and war is nothing more. 1 Sen. We are for law: he dies. Urge it no more 85 On height of our displeasure. Friend or brother,

He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

Alcib. Must it be so? It must not be. My lords,

I do beseech you, know me.

2 Sen. How! Alcib. Call me to your remembrances. 3 Sen. What!

Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot me;

It could not else be I should prove so base To sue, and be denied such common grace. My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare our anger? 'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect: 97

We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me! Banish your dotage! Banish usury

That makes the Senate ugly. 1000 1 Sen. If after two days' shine Athens contain thee, Attend our weightier judgment. And, not Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,

He shall be executed presently.

[Exeunt Senators.

Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough that you may live 104

Only in bone, that none may look on you!

I'm worse than mad; I have kept back their foes.

While they have told their money and let

Their coin upon large interest, I myself 108 Rich only in large hurts. All those for this?

Is this the balsam that the usuring Senate Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment! It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd; It is a cause worthy my spleen and furv, That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up My discontented troops, and lay for hearts. 'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds; Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. [Exit.

Scene VI. A banqueting hall in Timon's house.

Music. Tables set out; Servants attending. Enter divers Lords, friends of Timon, at several doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, sir. 2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encount'red. I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

2 Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

I Lord. I should think so. He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjur'd me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to horrow of me that my provision was out to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

1 Lord. A thousand pieces.

2 Lord. A thousand pieces! 1 Lord. What of you?

2 Lord. He sent to me, sir—here he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both! And how fare you?

1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship. 30

Tim. [Aside] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay; feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o'th' trumpet's sound; we shall to't presently.

1 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I return'd you an empty messenger.

Tim. O sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord—
Tim. Ah, my good friend, what cheer?

2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. [The banquet brought in. Come, bring in all together.

2 Lord. All cover'd dishes!

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

3 Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

1 Lord. How do you? What's the news? 3 Lord. Alcibiades is banish'd. Hear you of it?

1 & 2 Lord. Alcibiades banish'd!

3 Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1 Lord. How? how?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3 Lord. I'll tell you more anon Here's a noble feast toward.

2 Lord. This is the old man still.
3 Lord. Will't hold? Will't hold?

2 Lord. It does; but time will—and so—

3 Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress; your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place. Sit, sit. The gods require our thanks:

You great benefactors, sprinkie our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts make yourselves prais'd; but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains. If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be-as they are. The rest of your foes, O gods, the Senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people, what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of warm water. Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold.

You knot of mouth-friends! Smoke and lukewarm water

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last; 90 Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries.

Of man and beast the infinite malady Crust you quite o'er! What, dost thou go? Soft, take thy physic first; thou too, and Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none. Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast

Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest. Burn house! Sink Athens! Henceforth hated be Re-enter the Lords.

1 Lord. How now, my lords!

Timon's fury?

3 Lord. Push! Did you see my cap? 4 Lord. I have lost my gown.

1 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humours sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat. Did you see my jewel? 3 Lord. Did you see my cap?

2 Lord. Here 'tis.

4 Lord. Here lies my gown.

1 Lord. Let's make no stay.

2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

3 Lo.d. I feel't upon my bones. 4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds. next day stones. Exeunt.

For tubs and haths; bring down rosecheek'd youth

To the tub-fast and the diet.

Timan. Hang thee, monster! Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof doth daily make revolt
In my penurious band. I have heard, and griev'd,

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them—

Tim. I prithee beat thy drum and get thee gone.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well;

Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it: I cannot eat it. 1000
Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens or a heap—
Tim. War'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Akib. Ay, Timon, and have cause. Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest;

And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!
Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That by killing of villains 105 Thou wast born to conquer my country. Put up thy gold. Go on. Here's gold. Go

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison

In the sick air; let not thy sword skip one.
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard:
He is an usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron:

It is her habit only that is honest,

Herselt's a bawd. Let not the virgin's check Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk paps

That through the window bars bore at men's eyes

Are not within the leaf of pity writ.

But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy;

Think it a bastard whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut.

And mince it sans remorse. Swear against abjects:

Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes, Whose proof nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding. 125

Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers.

Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent, Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou givest me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee!

Phr. & Timan. Give us some gold, good Timon. Hast thou more?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade.

And to make whores a bawd. Hold up, you sluts,

Your aprons mountant; you are not oathable,

Although I know you'll swear, terribly swear,

Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues, Th' immortal gods that hear you. Spare your oaths;

I'll trust to your conditions. Be whores still;

And he whose pious breath seeks to convert

Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;

Let your close fire predominate his smoke, And be no turncoats. Yet may your pains six months

Be quite contrary! And thatch your poor thin roofs

With burdens of the dead—some that were hang'd,

No matter. Wear them, betray with them. Whore still;

Paint till a horse may mire upon your face. A pox of winkles!

Phr. & Timan. Well, more gold. What then?

Believe't that we'll do anything for gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow 150
In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp

shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,

That he may never more false title plead, Nor sound his quillets shrilly. Hoar the flamen.

That scolds against the quality of flesh 155 And not believes himself. Down with the nose,

Down with it flat, take the bridge quite away

Of him that, his particular to foresee,

Smells from the general weal. Make curl'dpate ruffians bald, 159 And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war Derive some pain from you. Plague all, That your activity may defeat and que!! The source of all erection. There's more gold.

5 Do you damn others, and let this damn you,

And ditches grave you all!

Phr. & Timan. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whore, more mischief first; I From change of fortune. Why this spade have given you earnest.

Strike up the drum towards Athens. Farewell, Timon; Alcib. If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have more.

Alcib. I never did thee haim.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. Call'st thou that harm? Tim. Men gaily find it. Get thee away.

and take Thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. Drum beats. Exeunt all but Timon.

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness.

Should yet be hungry! Common mother, Digging. thou.

Whose womb unmeasurable and infinite breast Teems and feeds all: whose self-same mettle.

Whereof they proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,

Engenders the black toad and adder blue. The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm, With all th' abhorred births below crisp heaven

Whereon Hyperion's quick'ning fire doth shine-

Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate.

From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root!

Ensear thy fertile and conceptious womb, Let it no more bring out ingrateful man! Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears:

Teem with new monsters whom thy upward face

Hath to the marbled mansion all above 190 Never presented!—O, a root! Dear thanks !-

Dry up thy marrows, vines, and ploughtorn leas,

Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts

And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind.

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man? Plague, plague! Apem. I was directed hither. Men report Thou dost affect my manners and dost use

Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog,

Whom I would imitate. Consumption catch thee! 200

Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected. A poor unmanly melancholy sprung this place?

This slave-like habit and these looks of care? Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, he soft, forgot That ever Tumon was. Shame not these woods

By putting on the cunning of a carper. Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee, We but offend him. Strike. And let his very breath whom thou'lt observe Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain.

And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus: Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bade welcome.

To knaves and all approachers. 'Tis most iust

That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again

Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness. Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself. Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself: A madman so long, now a fool.

think'st That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,

Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moist trees.

That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook.

Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste To cure thy o'ernight's surfeit? Call the creatures

Whose naked natures live in all the spite Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks.

To the conflicting elements expos'd, Answer mere nature—bid them flatter thee. O, thou shalt find— Tim.

A fool of thee. Depart. Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse. Abem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery. Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a caitiff. Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee. 235 Tim. Always a villain's office or a fool's. Dost please thyself in't?

Apem. Tim. What, a knave too? Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but Thus would I eat it.

Dost it enforcedly. Thou'dst courtier be again

Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before. The one is filling still, never complete; The other, at high wish. Best state, contentless.

Hath a distracted and most wretched being, Worse than the worst, content.

Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave whom Fortune's tender arm

With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog. Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords

In general riot, melted down thy youth 255 In different beds of lust, and never learn'd The icy precepts of respect, but followed The sug'red game before thee. But myself, Who had the world as my confectionary; The mouths, the tongues the eyes, and hearts of men

At duty, more than I could frame employment:

That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush

For every storm that blows—I to bear this, That never knew but better, is some burden. Thy nature did commence in sufferance; time Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee. What hast thou given?

If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag, Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff

To some she-beggar and compounded thee Poor rogue hereditary. Hence, be gone. If thou hadst not been born the worst of men.

Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet? Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was 276 No prodigal.

I, that I am one now. Tim.

Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee, I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee [Eating a root. Here! I will mend thy feast. Apem. [Offering him food.

Tim. First mend my company: take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own by th' lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so; it is but botch'd.

If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt.

Tell them there I have gold: look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold. Tim.

The best and truest: For here it sleeps and does no hired harm. Apem. Where liest a nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me. Where feed'st thou a days, Apemantus? Apem. Where my stomach finds meat;

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind !

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mock'd thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou know'st none, but art despis'd for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Apem. An th'hadst hated medlars sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better What man didst thou ever know now. unthrift that was beloved after his means? Tim. Who, without those means thou ta k'st of, didst thou ever know belov'd? Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee: thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers? 316

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee t' attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee; if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee; if That the whole life of Athens were in this! thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect when, peradventure, thou wer accus'd by the ass. If thou wert the ass thy dulness wou'd torment thee; and still thou liv'dst but as a breakfast to the wolf. If thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner. West thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest Wert thou a bear, thou of thy fury. wouldst be kill'd by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seiz'd by the leopard; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life. All thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence. What beast couldst thou be that were not subject to a beast? And what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation!

that thou ait out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter. The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!

Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.

I'll beat thee—but I should infect my hands Apem. I would my tongue could not them off !

Tim. Thy back, I prithee. Live, and love thy misery! Apem. Tim. Long live so, and so die! [Exit Apemanitus] I am quit. Moe things like men? Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter the Banditti.

I Ban. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder. The mere want of gold and the falling-from of his friends drove him into this melancholy.

2 Ban. It is nois'd he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Ban. Let us make the assay upon him: it he care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

2 Ban. True: for he bears it not about him. 'I is hid.

1 Ban. Is not this he? 405 Banditti. Where? 2 Ban. "I'm his description.

Tim. Now, thieves? Banditti. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim.Both too, and women's sons. Banditti. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

3 Ban. Has almost charm'd me from my profession by persuading me to it.

1 Ban. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Ban. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Ban. Let us first see peace in Athens. There is no time so miserable but a man may be true. [Exeunt Thieves.

Enter FLAVIUS, to Timon.

Flav. O you gods!

Is youd despis'd and ruinous man my lord? Full of decay and failing? O monument And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd! What an alteration of honour Has desp'rate want made!

What viler thing upon the earth than friends.

Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise.

When man was wish'd to love his enemies! Grant I may ever love, and rather woo Those that would mischief me than those that do!

Has caught me in his eye; I will present My honest grief unto him, and as my lord Trust not the Still serve him with my life. My dearest master!

> Tim. Away! What art thou? Flav. Have you forgot me, sir? Tun. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men: I'll example you with Then, if thou grant'st th'art a man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours. Tim. Then I know thee not. I never had honest man about me, I. All I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness, Nev'r did poor steward wear a truer grief For his undone lord than mine eyes for you. Tim. What, dost thou weep? nearer. Then I love thee

Because thou art a woman and disclaim'st Flinty mankind, whose eyes do never give But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping.

Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,

T' accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth lasts

To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward So true, so just, and now so comfortable? It almost turns my dangerous nature mild. Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man Was born of woman.

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness, You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim One honest man-mistake me not, but one; No more, I pray—and he's a steward. How fain would I have hated all mankind!

And thou redeem'st thyself. But all, save 500 I fell with curses.

Methinks thou art more honest now than wise:

For by oppressing and betraying me Thou mightst have sooner got another service:

For many so arrive at second masters Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me

For I must ever doubt though ne'er so sure, Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,

If not a usuring kindness, and as rich men deal gifts, Expecting in return twenty for one? 510

Flav. No, my most worthy master, in whose breast Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late!

You should have fear'd false times when you did feast: Suspect still comes where an estate is least.

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely Duty, and zeal, to your unmatched mind.

Care of your food and living; and believe of an intent that's coming toward him. 27 ıt,

My most honour'd lord,

For any benefit that points to me,

Either in hope or present, I'd exchange 520 For this one wish, that you had power and

To requite me by making rich yourself. Tim. Look thee, 'tis so! Thou singly honest man, Here, take. The gods, out of my misery, Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy,

But thus condition'd: thou shalt build from men;

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none, But let the famish'd flesh slide from the hone

Ere thou relieve the beggar. Give to dogs What thou deniest to men; let prisons swallow 'em.

Debts wither 'em to nothing. Be men like blasted woods,

And may diseases lick up their false bloods! And so, farewell and thrive.

O, let me stay Flav.

And comfort you, my master. If thou hat'st curses. Tim.

Stay not; fly whilst thou art blest and Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee. [Exeunt severally.

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. The woods. Before Timon's cave. Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides. Poet. What's to be thought of him?

Does the rumour hold for true that he's so full of gold?

Pain. Certain. Alcibiades reports it: Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him. He likewise enrich'd poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'Tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends?

Pam. Nothing else. You shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him in this suppos'd distress of his; it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation; only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too, tell him

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' th' time; it opens the eyes of expectation. Performance is ever the duller for his act, and but in the plainer and simpler kind of people the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable; performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes

Enter TIMON from his cave.

Tim. [Aside] Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.30 Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him. It must be a personating of himself; a satue against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. [Aside] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him;

Then do we sin against our own estate When we may profit meet and come too late.

Pain. True;

When the day serves, before blackcorner'd night,

Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.

Come.

Tim. [Aside] I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's gold,

That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple Than where swine feed!

'Tis thou that rig'st the bark and plough'st the foam.

Our late noble master! Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet, Sir.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord; but therefore

Came not my friend nor I.

Tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit

Best in all Athens. Th'art indeed the best; Thou counterfeit'st most lively. So, so, my lord. 80 Pain.

Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. [To the Poet] And for thy fiction.

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth

That thou art even natural in thine art. But for all this, my honest-natur'd friends, I must needs say you have a little fault. 85 Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I

You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour

49 To make it known to us.

You'll take it ill. Tim.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord. Tim. Will you indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord. Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave

That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord? Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble.

him,

Keep in your bosom; yet remain assur'd 95 That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know not such, my lord.

Poet.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give vou gold.

Rid me these villains from your companies. Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,

Confound them by some course, and come to me,

Both. Name them, my lord; let's know

Tim. You that way, and you this-but two in company;

Each man apart, all single and alone, 105 Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

[To the Painter] If, where thou art, two villains shall not be, Come not near him. [To the Poet] If thou wouldst not reside Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall But where one villain is, then him abandon.-

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water— Hence, pack! there's gold; you came for gold, ye slaves.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you [To the Painter] You have work for me; there's payment; hence!

Tim. Y'are honest men. Y'have heard [To the Poet] You are an alchemist; make gold of that .-

Beats and drives them out.

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is vain that you would speak with Timon;

For he is set so only to himself That nothing but himself which looks like man

Is friendly with him. Bring us to his cave. 1 Sen. It is our part and promise to th' Athenians

To speak with Timon. 2 Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same; 'twas time and griefs

That fram'd him thus. Time, with his fairer hand, Offering the fortunes of his former days, The former man may make him. Bring us to him.

TIMON OF ATHENS

And chance it as it may.

Here is his cave. Flan. Peace and content be here! Lord Timon Timon! 121

Look out, and speak to friends. Athenians

By two of their most reverend Senate greet thee.

Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter Timon out of his cave.

Tim. Thou sun that comforts, burn Speak and be hang'd! For each true word a blister, and each false Be as a cauterizing to the root o' th' tongue, Consuming it with speaking!

Worthy Timon— 1 Sen. Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

1 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,

Could I but catch it for them.

O. forget What we are sorry for ourselves in thee. The senators with one consent of love

Entreat thee back to Athens, who have thought

 Sen. Therefore, Timon-Tim. Well, sir, I will. Therefore I will. sir, thus:

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,

Let Alcibiades know this of Timon.

That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,

And take our goodly aged men by th' beards. Giving our holy virgins to the stain

Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war. Then let him know-and tell him Timon speaks it

In pity of our aged and our youth-I cannot choose but tell him that I care

And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not.

While you have throats to answer. myself.

There's not a whittle in th' unruly camp But I do prize it at my love before The reverend'st throat in Athens, So I leave you 180

To the protection of the prosperous gods, As thieves to keepers.

Stay not, all's in vain. Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph: It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness Of health and living now begins to mend. And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still:

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his, And last so long enough!

We speak in vain. 1 Sen. Tim. But yet I love my country, and am not

One that rejoices in the common wreck, 190 As common bruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke. Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen-1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass thorough them.

2 Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers

Commend me to them, 195 Tim. nd tell them that, to ease them of their griefs,

'Il teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

1 Sen. I like this well; he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close.

That mine own use invites me to cut down, and shortly must I fell it. Tell my friends, Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree and high to low throughout, that whose please

To stop affliction, let him take his haste, Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, And hang himself. I pray you do my greeting.

Flav. Trouble him no further; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion Upon the beached verge of the salt flood, Who once a day with his embossed froth 215 The turbulent surge shall cover. Thither come.

And let my gravestone be your oracle. Lips, let sour words go by and language

What is amiss, plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works and death their

Sun, hide thy beams. Timon hath done his reign. [Exit Timon into his care.

1 Sen. His discontents are unremovably

Coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead. Let us return

224

And strain what other means is left unto us

In our dear peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Before the walls of Athens. Enter two other Senators with a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd; are his files

As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least. Besides, his expedition promises Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend, Whom, though in general part we were whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,

Yet our old love had a particular force.

Yet our old love had a particular force, And made us speak like friends. This man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave with letters of entreaty, which imported His fellowship i' th' cause against your city, In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter the other Senators, from Timon.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.

3 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.

The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouling

Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare.

Outs is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare.

Scene III. The woods. Timon's cave, and a rude tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier in the woods, seeking Timon.

Sold. By al' description this should be the place.

Who's here? Speak, ho! No answer? What is this? Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span.

Some beast rear'd this; here does not live

a man.

Dead, suic; and this his grave. What's on this tomb

I cannot lead; the character I'll take with

Our captain hath in every figure skill, An ag'd interpreter, though young in days; Before proud Athens he's set down by this, Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. 10 [Exit.]

Scene IV. Before the walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his Powers before Athens.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town

Our termble approach.

Sound a parley. The Senators appear upon the walls.

ACT ONE

Scene I. Rome. A street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain Commoners over the stage.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home. Is this a holiday? What! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a labouring day without the sign Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

1 Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?

You, sir, what trade are you? 2 Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

with a safe conscience, which is indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? Thou naughty knave, what trade?

2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me; yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What mean'st thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow!

2 Cit. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl. I meddle with no tradesman's matters nor women's matters, but with awl. I am indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes. When they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Cæsar, and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome, To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels? You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things! 2 Cit. A trade, sir, that I hope I may use O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and > oft Have you climb'd up to walls and battle> ments, To tow'rs and windows, yea, to chimney-

Your infants in your arms, and there have

The livelong day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome.

And when you saw his chariot but appear Have you not made an universal shout, That Tiber trembled underneath her banks To hear the replication of your sounds Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire And do you now cull out a holiday? And do you now strew flowers in his way That comes in triumph over Pompey' blood?

Be gone!

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees Pray to the gods to intermit the plague That needs must light on this ingratitude Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and for this fault Assemble all the poor men of your sort;

Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears

Into the channel, till the lowest stream 60 Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[Exeunt all the Commoners. See whe'r their basest metal be not mov'd; They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness. Go you down that way towards the Capitol; This way will I. Disrobe the images If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies. Mar. May we do so?

You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter: let no images (9) Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about, And drive away the vulgar from the streets; So do you too, where you perceive them thick.

And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Rome. A public place.

Music. Enter Cæsar; Antony, for the course; Calphurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, and Casca; a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer; after them, MARULLUS and FLAVIUS.

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks. [Music ceases.

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way

When he doth run his course. Antonius! Ant. Cæsar, my lord.

Cæs. Forget not in your speed, Antonius, To touch Calphurnia; for our elders say, The barren, touched in this holy chase, Shake off their sterile curse.

I shall remember. Ant.

When Cæsar says 'Do this', it is perform'd. Cæs. Set on, and leave no ceremony out. [Music.

Sooth. Cæsar!

Cæs. Ha! Who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still. Peace yet again. [Music ceases. Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me?

I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music, Cry 'Cæsar!' Speak. Cæsar is turn'd te Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that? Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of Maich.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face.

Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar.

Cæs. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him. Pass. [Sennet. Exeunt all but Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?

Bru. Not I. Cas. I pray you do.

Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some part

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony. 29 Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires: I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of

I have not from your eyes that gentleness And show of love as I was wont to have. You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius, Be not deceiv'd. If I have veil'd my look, I turn the trouble of my countenance Merely upon myself. Vexed I am Of late with passions of some difference, 40 Conceptions only proper to myself,

Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours;

Buc let not therefore my good friends be griev'd-

Among which number, Cassius, be you one-

Nor construe any further my neglect Than that poor Brutus, with himself at Forgets the shows of love to other men. Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion, By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogita-

Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores. face?

Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself

But by reflection, by some other things. Cas. 'Tis just;

And it is very much lamented, Brutus. That you have no such mirrors as will turn Your hidden worthiness into your eye, That you might see your shadow. I have heard.

Where many of the best respect in Romeimmortal Cæsar—speaking Brutus,

And groaning underneath this age's voke, Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes. Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear: And since you know you cannot see yourself

So well as by reflection, I, your glass, Will modestly discover to yourself That of yourself which you yet know not of. And be not realous on me, gentle Brutus: Were I a common laughter, or did use To stale with ordinary oaths my love To every new protester; if you know That I do fawn on men and hug them hard, And after scandal them; or if you know That I profess myself in banqueting

To all the rout, then hold me dangerous. [Flourish and shout.

Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear the people

Choose Cæsar for their king.

Ay, do you fear it? 80 Cas. Then must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so long? What is it that you would impart to me? If it be aught toward the general good, 85 Set honour in one eye and death i' th' other.

And I will look on both indifferently; For let the gods so speed me as I love The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you. Brutus.

As well as I do know your outward favour. Well, honour is the subject of my story. I cannot tell what you and other men Think of this life; but, for my single self, I had as lief not be as live to be In awe of such a thing as I myself. I was born free as Cæsar; so were you. We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he. For once, upon a raw and gusty day, Cæsar said to me ' Dar'st thou, Cassius, now Leap in with me into this angry flood, And swim to yonder point?" Upon the word.

Accourred as I was, I plunged in And bade him follow. So indeed he did. The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it With lusty sinews, throwing it aside And stemming it with hearts of controversy:

But ere we could arrive the point propos'd, Cæsar cried ' Help me, Cassius, or I sink! I, as Æneas, our great ancestor, Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder

The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber

Did I the tired Cæsai. And this man Is now become a god; and Cassius is A wretched creature, and must bend his body

If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him. He had a fever when he was in Spain, And when the fit was on him I did mark 120 How he did shake. 'Tis true, this god did

His coward Lps did from their colour fly, And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the world.

Did lose his lustre. I did hear him groan. Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans

Mark him, and write his speeches in their books.

it cried 'Give me some drink, Alas! Titinius'

As a sick girl. Ye gods! it doth amaze me A man of such a feeble temper should So get the start of the majestic world, And bear the palm alone. Shout. Flourish

Bru. Another general shout! I do believe that these applauses are For some new honours that are heap'd on Cæsar. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world

Like a Colossus, and we petty men Walk under his huge legs, and peep about To find ourselves dishonourable graves Men at some time are masters of their fates: The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

Brutus ' and ' Cæsar'. What should be in that 'Cæsar'?

Why should that name be sounded more than yours?

Write them together: yours is as fair a name.

Sound them: it doth become the mouth as Weigh them: it is as heavy. Conjure with Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as ' Cæsar '

Now, in the names of all the gods at once, Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed, That he is grown so great? Age, thou ait sham'd! Rome, thou has lost the breed of noble bloods!

When went there by an age, since the great flood.

But it was fam'd with more than with one

When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome.

That her wide walls encompass'd but one man?

Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough, When there is in it but one only man. O! you and I have heard our fathers say There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd The etcend devil to keep his state in Rome

As easily as a king. Pod. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;

What you would work me to, I have some aim;

How I have thought of this, and of these times.

I shall recount hereafter. For this present, I would not, so with love I might entreat

Be any further mov'd: What you have said I will consider; what you have to say I will with patience hear; and find a time Both meet to hear and answer such high things.

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this: Brutus had rather be a villager

Than to repute himself a son of Rome Under these hard conditions as this time Is like to lav upon us.

Cas. I am glad that my weak words Have struck but thus much show of fire from Biutus.

Re-enter CASAR and his Train.

Biu. The games are done, and Cæsar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve,

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius, The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow, And all the rest look like a chidden train; Calphurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes As we have seen him in the Capitol,

Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is. Cæs. Antonius!

Ant. Cæsar?

Cæs. Let me have men about me that are fat:

Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights.

Youd Cassius has a lean and hungty look: He thinks too much. Such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous:

He is a noble Roman, and well given. Cæs. Would he were tatter! But I fear him not Yet if my name were liable to fear.

I do not know the man I should avoid 200 So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much,

He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men. He loves no plays.

As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music. Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit

That could be mov'd to smile at anything. Such men as he be never at heart's ease Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,

And therefore are they very dangerous. 210 I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd Than what I fear; for always I am Cæsar.

Come on my right hand, for this ear is deat. And tell me truly what thou think'st of him. [Sennet. Exeunt Cæsar and his Train.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak. Would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day.

That Cæsar looks so sad?

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him; and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for? Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice; what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice? Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other: and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why. Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown- yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets-and, as I told you, he put it by once; but for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again; but to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; he put it the third time by; and still as he refus'd it, the rabblement hooted, and clapp'd their chopt hands, and threw up the r sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refus'd the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swooned and fell down at it. And for mine own part I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But soft, I pray you. What, did Cæsar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless. Bru. 'Tis very like. He hath the falling sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I,

And honest Casca, we have the falling sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleas'd and displeas'd them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he when he came unto 260 himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refus'd the crown, he pluckt me ope his doublet, and offer'd them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done of said anything amiss, he desir'd then worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried 'Alas, good soul!' and forgave him with all then hearts. But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabb'd their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came thus sad away? 275

Casca, Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say anything? Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect? Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' th' face again. But those that understood him smil'd at one another, and shook their heads; but for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put Have 11v'd the knotty oaks, and I have seen to silence. Fare you well. There was more I'h' ambitious occan swell, and rage, and foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow? Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating, 291

Cas. Good: I will expect you. Casca. Do so Farewell, both. Exit. Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be! He was quick mettle when he went to school. 295 Cas. So is he now, in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form. This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you.

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you; or, if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you, Cas. I will do so. Till then, think of the world. Exit Brutus.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see, Thy honourable metal may be wrought From that it is dispos'd. Therefore it is

That noble minds keep ever with their likes:

For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd? Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus.

If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius, He should not humour me. I will this night, In several hands, in at his windows throw, As if they came from several citizens, 316 Writings, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscu.ely Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at. And, after this, let Cæsar seat him sure; 320 For we will shake him, or worse days endure. (Exit.

Scene III. Rome. A street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca. Brought you Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero. I have seen tempests when the scolding winds touto,

To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds; And when the cross blue lightning seem'd But never till to-night, never till now, Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. 10 Either there is a civil strife in heaven, Or else the world, too saucy with the gods, Incenses them to send destruction.

Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave-you know him well by sight-Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn

Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand.

Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd. Besides-I ha' not since put up my sword-Against the Capitol I met a lion, Who glaz'd upon me, and went surly by Without annoying me; and there were drawn

Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw

Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.

And yesterday the bird of night did sit, Even at noon-day, upon the market-place, Hooting and shricking. When these prodigies

Do so conjointly meet, let not men say 'These are their reasons—they are natural', For I believe they are portentous things 31 Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time; But men may construe things after their fashion.

Clean from the purpose of the things themselves. Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow? Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius Send word to you he would be there tomorrow.

Good night, then, Casca; this Cic. disturbed sky Is not to walk in.

Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero. Casca.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice. Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men. Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,

Submitting me unto the perilous night, And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see, Have bar'd my bosom to the thunderstone:

to open The breast of heaven, I did present myself

Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble When the most mighty gods by tokens send Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman you do want. Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,

And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,

To see the strange impatience of the heavens;

But if you would consider the true cause-Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,

Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind;

Why old men, fools, and children calculate: Why all these things change from their ordinance,

Their natures and preformed faculties. To monstrous quality-why, you shall find That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits,

To make them instruments of fear and warning

Unto some monstrous state.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man Most like this dreadful night

That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars

As doth the lion in the Capitol: A man no mightier than thyself or me In personal action, yet prodigious grown, And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Casar that you mean, is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is; for Romans now Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors. But woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,

And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits ;

Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish. Casca. Indeed they say the senators tomorrow

Mean to establish Cæsar as a king: And he shall wear his crown by sea and land.

In every place save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then;

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius. Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat.

Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass, Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,

Can be retentive to the strength of spirit; But life, being weary of these worldly bars, Never lacks power to dismiss itself. If I know this, know all the world besides,

That part of tyranny that I do bear, I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still. Casca. So can I; 100

So every bondman in his own hand bears The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant, then?

Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf But that he sees the Romans are but sheep; He were no loon, were not Romans hinds. Those that with haste will make a mighty fire Begin it with weak straws. What trash is Rome.

What rubbish, and what offal, when it

For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief, Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak

this
Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a man

That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand. Be factious for redress of all these griefs, And I will set this foot of mine as far As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made. 120 Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already

Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans

To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know by this they stay for me 125
In Pompey's porch; for now, this fearful
night,

There is no stir or walking in the streets, And the complexion of the element In favour's like the work we have in hand, Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter CINNA.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;

He is a friend. Cinna, where haste you so?
Cin. To find out you. Who's that?
Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca, one incorporate 135
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this!

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me 139 Cin. Yes, you are. O Cassius, if you could But win the noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair, Where Brutus may but find it; and throw

In at his window; set this up with wax 145 Upon old Brutus' statue. All this done, Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?
Cin. All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie, And so bestow these papers as you bade me. Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre. [Exit Cinna. Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day See Brutus at his house. Three parts of him Is ours already, and the man entire 155 Upon the next encounter yields him ours.

Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's hearts:

And that which would appear offence in us His countenance, like richest alchemy, Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 160

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him

You have right well conceited. Let us go, For it is after mudnight; and ere day We will awake him and be sure of him.

[Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Rome.

Enter BRUTUS in his orchard.

Bru. What, Lucius, ho! I cannot by the progress of the stars Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say! I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly. When, Lucius, when? Awake, I say! What. Lucius!

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius; When it is lighted, come and call me here. Luc. I will, my lord.

[Exit.

Bru. It must be by his death; and for my part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him, But for the general: he would be crown'd. How that might change his nature, there's the question.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder,

And that craves wary walking. Crown him —that!

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him

975

That as his will be may do danger with. Th' abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins Remorse from power; and to speak truth Since Cassius first did whet me against of Cæsai,

I have not known when his affections sway'd

More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof

That lowliness is young ambition's ladder, Whereto the climber-upward turns his face; But when he once attains the upmost iound.

He then unto the ladder turns his back, Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees

By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may. Then, lest he may, prevent. And since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is, Fashion it thus-that what he is, augmented.

Would run to these and these extremities: And therefore think him as a serpent's egg, Which, hatch'd, would as his kind grow mischievous,

And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet.

Searching the window for a flint, I found This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure It did not lie there when I went to bed.

IGwang him a letter. Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day. Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March? Luc. I know not, sn. Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, sir. IExit. Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air, Give so much light that I may read by them. Opens the letter and reads.

Brutus, thou sleep'st. Awake, and see thyselt. Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress'

Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake.' Such instigations have been often dropp'd

Where I have took them up. 'Snail Rome, &c.' Thus must I piece it out:

Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What, Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.

'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise.

If the redress will follow, thou receivest Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March 15 wasted fifteen days.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. Exit Lucius. Casar.

I have not slept. Between the acting of a dreadful thing And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma or a hideous dream, The Genius and the mortal instituments

Are then in council; and the state of man. Like to a little kingdom, suffers then The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone? Luc. No, sir, there are more with him, Bru. Do you know them? Luc. No, sit; then hats are pluck'd about their ears And half their faces buried in their cloaks. that by no mean. I may discover them 25 By any mark of favour

Let 'em enter.

[Exit Lucius. They are the faction. O conspiracy,

Sham'st thou to show thy dang'rous brow by night. When evils are most tree? O, then by day

Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none. conspiracy:

Hide it in smiles and affability! For if thou path, thy native semblance on, Not Ereous itself were dim enough so hide thee from prevention.

Enter the conspirators, Cassius, Casca, DECILS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER. and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your Good morrow, Brutus. Do we trouble you? Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all night.

Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here

But honours you; and every one doth wish You had but that opinion of yourself Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither. Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too. 95 Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;

And this, Metellus Cimber.

They are all welcome. Вти. What watchful cares do interpose themselves [Knocking within. Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? 100 They whister. Dec. Here lies the east. Doth not the day break here?

Casca. No. grev lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day. Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises; Which is a great way growing on the south, Weighing the youthful season of the year. Some two months hence up higher toward the north He first presents his fire; and the high east Stands as the Capitol, directly here. Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution. Bru. No, not an oath. If not the face of men,

The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse.

If these be mctives weak, break off betimes.

And every man hence to his idle bed. So let high-sighted tyranny range on, Till each man drop by lottery. But if these, As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 120 To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour The melting spirits of women, then, countrymen, What need we any spur but our own cause To prick us to redress? What other bond Than secret Romans that have spoke the word And will not palter? And what other oath Than honesty to honesty engag'd

That this shall be or we will fall for it? priests and cowards and men Swear cautelous.

Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear stain

The even virtue of our enterprise,

Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits, To think that or our cause or our performance

Did need an oath; when every drop of blood

That every Roman bears, and nobly bears. Is guilty of a several bastardy.

If he do break the smallest particle Of any promise that hath pass'd from him. Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?

I think he will stand very strong with us. Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means. Met. O, let us have him; for his silver hairs

Will purchase us a good opinion, And buy men's voices to commend our deeds.

It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands:

Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yon Our youths and wildness shall no what appear,

But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O, name him not! Let us not break with him:

For he will never follow any thing That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out. Casca. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd. I think it is not

Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar. Should outlive Cæsar We shall find of him

A shrewd contriver; and you know his means,

If he improve them, may well stretch so far As to annoy us all; which to prevent, 160 Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius.

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs-

Like wrath in death and envy afterwards; For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar. Let's be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius. We all stand up against the spuit of Cæsar. And in the spirit of men there is no blood. O that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit.

And not dismember Cæsar! But, alas. 170 Cæsar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,

Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully; Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods, Not hew him as a carcase fit for hounds; And let our hearts, as subtle masters do. 175 Stir up their servants to an act of rage, Such creatures as men doubt; but do not And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make

Our purpose necessary, and not envious; Which so appearing to the common eyes. We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. And for Mark Antony, think not of him; For he can do no more than Casar's arm When Cæsar's head is off.

Yet I fear him: Cas. For in the engrafted love he bears to Cæsar-Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of hım!

If he love Cæsar, all that he can do Is to himself take thought and die for Cæsar ;

And that were much he should, for he is

To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him. Le' him not die:

For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter. IClock strikes.

Bru. Peace! Count the clock. Cas. The clock hath stricken three. Treb. 'Tis time to part.

But it is doubtful yet Cas. Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or

For he is superstitious grown of late, Quite from the main opinion he held once Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies. It may be these apparent prodigies,

The unaccustom'd terror of this night, And the persuasion of his augurers, May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that. If he be so 'esolv'd, I can o'ersway him; for he loves to hear That unicorns may be betray'd with trees, And bears with glasses, elephants with holes.

Lions with toils, and men with flatterers; But when I tell him he hates flatterers, He says he does, being then most flattered. Let me work;

For I can give his humour the true bent, 210 And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

Bru. By the eighth hour. Is that the uttermost? then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard.

Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey.

I wonder none of you have thought of him. Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him.

He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;

Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him. Cas. The morning comes upon's. We'll leave you, Brutus.

And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;

Let not our looks put on our purposes, 225 But bear it as our Roman actors do. With untir'd spirits and formal constancy. And so good morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but Brutus. Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;

Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber. 230 Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies Which busy care draws in the brains of men:

Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my bid!

Brn. Poitia, what hean you? Wherefore tice you nov

It is not for your health that to commit 235 Your wear condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. Y'have ungently, Binius,

Stole from my bed; and yesternight at supper

You suddenly arose and walk'd about, 239 Musing and sighing, with your arms across: And when I ask'd you what the matter was. You star'd upon me with ungentle looks. I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head

And too impariently stamp'd with your foot.

Yet I insisted; yet you answer'd not, 245 But with an angry wasture of your hand Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did, Fearing to strengthen that impatience Which seem d too much enkindled; and withal

Hoping it was but an effect of humour, 250 Which sometime hath his hour with every

It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep: And, could it work so much upon your shape Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not As it hath much prevail'd on your condition.

I should not know you Brutus. Dear my lord. Make me acquainted with your cause of grief. Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it. Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical To walk unbraced and suck up the humours Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick.

And will he steal out of his wholesome bed, To dare the vile contagion of the night, 265 And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus; You have some sick offence within your mind,

Which by the right and virtue of my place

I ought to know of: and upon my knees 270 I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,

By all your vows of love, and that great vow

Which did incorporate and make us one, That you unfold to me, your self, your half,

978

[Exeunt.

Why you are heavy-and what men tonight

Have had resort to you; for here have been Some six or seven, who did hide their faces Even from darkness.

Kneel not, gentle Portia. Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus, 280

Is it excepted I should know no secrets That appertain to you? Am I your self But, as it were, in sort or limitation? To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed.

And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more, Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife.

As dear to me as are the ruddy drops That visit my sad heart. 200

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman; but withal A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife. I grant I am a woman; but withal A woman well reputed, Cato's daughter. 295 Think you I am no stronger than my sex. Being so father'd and so husbanded? Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.

I have made strong proof of my constancy. Giving myself a voluntary wound 300 Here, in the thigh. Can I bear that with patience.

And not my husband's secrets?

O ve gods. Render me worthy of this noble wife! [Knocking within.

Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in awhile.

And by and by thy bosom shall partake 305 The secrets of my heart. All my engagements I will construe to thee,

All the charactery of my sad brows. Leave me with haste. [Exit Portia. Lucius, who's that knocks?

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake

Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how? Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave Caius,

To wear a kerchief! Would you were not sick!

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand. Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before, I here discard my sickness. [Pulls off his kerchief | Soul of Rome!

Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins! Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up My mortified spirit. Now bid me run, 324 And I will strive with things impossible; Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius.

I shall unfold to thee, as we are going 330 To whom it must be done.

Set on your foot, Lig. And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you To do I know not what: but it sufficeth That Brutus leads me on. [Thunder. Bru. Follow me, then.

SCENE II. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Thunder and lightning. Enter CÆSAR in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night. Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out 'Help, ho! They murder Cæsar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord?

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,

And bring me their opinions of success. Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day. Cæs. Cæsar shall forth; the things that threaten'd me

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak Ne'er look'd but on my back. When they shall see

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Cal. Cæsar. I never stood on ceremonies. Yet now they fright me. There is one within.

Besides the things that we have heard and seen,

Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.

A lioness hath whelped in the streets, And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead;

Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds, In ranks and squadions and right form of war.

Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol; The noise of battle huitled in the air; Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan, And ghosts did shirek and squeal about the streets.

O Cresar, these things are beyond all use, 25 And I do tear them!

Cies. What can be avoided. Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods? Yet Casar shall go forth; for the predictions

Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

Cul. When beggars die there are no comets seen:

The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cas. Cowards die many times before their deaths:

The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear,

Seeing that death, a necessary end, Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurers?

Serr. They would not have you to stir torth to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth, They could not find a heart within the beast. 40

Cas. The gods do this in shame of cowardice.

Caesar should be a beast without a heart, It he should stay at home to-day for tear. No, Cæsar shall not. Danger knows full well That Cæsar is more dangerous than he: 45 We are two hons litter'd in one day, And I the elder and more terrible; And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day. Call it my fear 50
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.

We'll send Mark Antony to the Senate House,

And he shall say you are not well to-day. Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this. Cas. Mark Antony shall say I am not

And for thy humour I will stay at home.

Enter DECIUS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar.

I come to tetch you to the Senate House.

Ces. And you are come in very happy time.

60

To bear my greeting to the senators And tell them that I will not come to-day. Cannot, is take; and that I dare not, falser;

I will not come to day. Tell them so,

Cal. Say he is sick.

Cas. Shall Casar send a lie? 65 Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,

To be aleard to tell greybeards the truth? Decrus, go teil them Casar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Casar, let me know some cause,

Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so. 70 Cæs. The cause is in my will: I will not come.

That is enough to satisfy the Senate. But for your private satisfaction, Because I love you, I will let you know: Colphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home. 75

She dreamt to-night she saw my statua,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred spouts,

Did run pure blood; and many lusty
Romans

Came smiling and did bathe their hands

And these does she apply for warnings and portents

Ant. evils imminent, and on her knee Hath begg'd that I will stay at home today.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted; It was a vision fair and fortunate. 84 Your statue spouting blood in many pipes, In which so many smiling Romans bath'd, Signifies that from you great Rome shall

Reviving blood, and that great men shall press

For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance. This by Calphurnia's dream is signified, 90 Caes. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say-

And know it now: the Senate have concluded

To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar. If you shall send them word you will not come.

Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say 'Break up the Senate till another time, When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams'.

If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper

Lo, Cæsar is afraid '?

suck

Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear dear love To your proceeding bids me tell you this, And reas n to my love is liable.

Cas. I ow toolish do your fears seem If thou read this, O Casar, thou mayest 1 .w. Calphurnia!

I am ash med I did yield to them. τού Give me 1y 10be, for I will go.

Enter BRU JUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA TREBUNIUS, CINNA, and PUBLIUS.

And look where Publius is come to retch me. Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.

Welcome, Publius. Cæs. What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too? Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius, Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy As that same ague which hath made you lean. What is't o'clock?

Cæsar, 'tis strucken eight. Bru. Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights, Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.

Bid them prepare within. Cos. I am to blame to be thus waited for. What. Now, Cinna. Now, Metellus.

Trebonius! I have an hour's talk in store for you. Remember that you call on me to-day; Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will. [Aside] And so near will I be.

That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Cæs. Good friends, go in and taste some wine with me:

And we like triends, will straightway go together. Bru. [Aside] That every like is not the same, O Cæsar, The heart of Brutus earns to think upon! [Exeunt.

Scene III. Rome. A street near the Capitol. Enter ARTEMIDORUS reading a paper.

Art. 'Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber: Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wrong'd Caius Ligarius. There is but one faind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou beest not immortal, look about you. Security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, ARTEMIDORUS.

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along, And as a suitor will I give him this. My heart laments that virtue cannot live 10 Out of the teeth of emulation.

live;

If not, the fates with traitors do contrive,

SCENE IV. Rome. Before the house of Brueus.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. 1 prithee, boy, run to the Senate House.

Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam. Por. I would have had thee there and here again,

Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there.

[Aside] O constancy, be strong upon my side! Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue!

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might. How hard it is for women to keep counsel!-Art thou here vet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do? 10 Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else? Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well.

For he went sickly forth: and take good

What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him

Hark, boy! What noise is that? Luc. I hear none, madam.

Prithee listen well. I heard a bustling rumour, like a tray,

And the wind brings it from the Capitol. Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow. 20 Which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady. Por. What is't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady. Por. Is Casar yet gone to the Capitol? Sooth. Madam, not yet. I go to take my stand,

To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have, lady. If it will please Cæsar

To be so good to Cæsar as to hear me, I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him? Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance. Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:

68E

The throng that follows Casar at the heels, Of senators, of prætors, common saltors, Will crowd a feeble man almost to death. 35 I'll get me to a place more void, and there Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along.

Por. I must go in. [Aside] Ay me, how weak a thing

The heart of woman is! O Brutus, The neavens speed thee in thine enterprise! Sure the boy heard me. - Brutus hath a suit That Cæsar will not grant .- O, I grow faint.-

Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord; Say I am merry. Come to me again, And bring me word what he doth say to [Exeunt severally. thee.

ACT THREE.

SCENE I. Rome. A street before the Capitol.

Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, LEPIDUS. ARTEMI-CINNA, ANTONY, and the Popilius, Publius, DORUS, Soothsayer.

Cæs. The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Cæsar, but not gone. Art. Hail, Cæsar! Read this schedule. Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-

At your best leisure, this his humble suit. Art. O Cæsar, read mine first; for mine's a cont

That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it, great Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd. Art. Delay not, Cæsar; read it instantly.

Cæs. What, is the fellow mad? Pub. Sirrah, give place. 10

Cas. What, urge you your petitions in the street?

Come to the Capitol.

Cæsar enters the Capitol, the rest following.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.

Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?

Pob. Fare you well. [Advances to Cæsar.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena? Cas. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.

I fear our purpose is discovered.

Bru. Look how he makes to Cæsar. Mark him.

Cas. Casca, be sudden, for we rear prevention.

Brutus, what shall be done?

Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back, For I will slay myself.

Bru. Cassius, be constant. Populius Lena speaks not of our purposes: For look, he smiles, and Casar doth not change.

Cas. Trebomus knows his time; for look you, Brutus,

He draws Mark Antony out of the way. [Exeunt Antony and Trebonius.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him

And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar. Bru. He is address'd; piess near and second nim.

Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Cas. Are we all ready? What is now amiss

That Casar and his Senate must redress? Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsai.

Metellus Cumber throws before thy seat An humble heart. [Kneeling. Cæs. I must prevent thee, Cimber.

These couchings and these lowly courtesies Might fire the blood of ordinary men, And turn pre-ordinance and first decree Into the law of children. Be not fond To think that Casar bears such rebel blood That will be thaw'd from the true quality With that which melteth fools-I mean, sweet words,

Low-crooked curtsies, and base spaniel fawning.

Thy brother by decree is banished: If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for

I spurn thee like a cur out of my way. Know, Cæsar doth not wrong; nor without cause

Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own

To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear For the repealing of my banish'd brother? Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Cæsar,

Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal. 54

Cæs. What, Brutus! Cas. Pardon, Cæsar! Cæsar, pardon! As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,

To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber. Cæs. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you:

If I could pray to move, prayers would move me;

But I am constant as the northern star. 60 Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumb'red sparks,

They are all fire, and every one doth shine; But there's but one in all doth hold his place.

Scene 11 So in the vorld: 'tis furnish'd well with And drawing days out, that men stand me e flesh and blood, and appreand men he ave: Yet in the umber I do know but one That unass slable holds on his rank. Unshak'd o' motion; and that I am he. 70 Let me a little show it, even in this-That I was constant Cunber should be banish'd. And constant do remain to keep him so. Cin. O Cæsar! Hence! Wilt thou lift up Cæs. Olympus? Dec. Great Cæsar! Cæs. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel? Casca. Speak, hands, for me! [They stab Cæsar. Casca strikes the first, Brutus the last blow. Cæs. Et tu. Brute ?—Then fall, Cæsar!

Dies. Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!

Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets. Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!' People and Senators, be not affrighted.

Fly not; stand still. Ambition's debt is Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's Should chance ---

Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius, good

There is no harm intended to your person, Nor to no Roman else. So tell them, Publius.

Rushing on us, should do your age some nuschief.

Bru. Do so: and let no man abide this deed

But we the doers.

Re-enter That NIUS.

Cas. Where is Antony?

Fled to his house amaz'd. Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run.

As it were doomsday.

upon.

Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life

Cuts off so many years of fearing death. Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit. So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abride'd

His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans. stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood

Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords. Then walk we forth, even to the marketplace.

And waving our red weapons o'er our heads, Let's all cry 'Peace, freedom, : al liberty!' Cas. Stoop then, and wash. How many ages hence

85

Shall this our lofty scene be acted over In states unboin and accents yet unknown. Bru. How many times shall Cæsa: in sport,

That now on Pompey's basis lies along No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be, So often shall the knot of us be call'd

The men that gave helr country liberty. Dec. What, shan we torth?

Cas. Ay, every man away. 120 Brutus shall lead, and we will grace his heels

With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel: Thus did Mark Antony bid me tall down; And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say: Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest; Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving. Say I love Brutus, and I honour him; Cos. And leave us, Publius, lest that the Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd him. If Brutus a . vouchsate that Antony May sately come to him, and be resolv'd How Casar hath deserv'd to lie in death, Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead So well as Brutus live; but will follow 135 The fortunes and a trais of noble Brutus Thorough the haz. . . of this untrod state With all true faim. So says my master Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman:

I never thought him worse. Fates, we will know your Tell him, so please him come unto this

That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the He shall be satisfied and, by my honour, 100 Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit. Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may. But yet have I a mind

That fears him much; and my misgiving still

Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony. Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?

Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee

well.

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank.

If I must the text is no bour so fit

If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour; nor no instrument

155

Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world. I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard, Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die.

No place will please me so, no mean of

No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off, 163

As here by Cæsar, and by you cut on, 163
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us. Though now we must appear bloody and cruel.

As by our hands and this our present act You see we do; yet see you but our hands, And this the bleeding business they have done.

Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful; And pity to the general wrong of Rome, As fire drives out fire, so pity pity,— Hath done this deed on Casar. For your part,

To you our swords have leaden points,

Mark Antony;
Our arms in strength of malice, and our hearts

Of brothers' temper, do receive you in With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd

The multitude, beside themselves with fear, And then we will deliver you the cause Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck

Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand.
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; Low yours,
Metellus;

Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours.

Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentlemen ali—alas, what shall I say?

Gentlemen ali—alas, what shall I say?

My credit now stands on such slippery
ground

That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,

Either a coward or a flatterer.

That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true! 195 If then thy spirit look upon us now, Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death

To see thy Antony making his peace, Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes, Most noble! in the presence of thy corse? Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, Weeping as tast as they stream forth thy blood.

It would become me better than to close In terms of friendship with thine enemies. Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand, stand, 206

Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.

O world, thou wast the forest to this hart; And this indeed, O world, the heart of thee! How like a deer strucken by many princes Dost thou here lie!

Cas. Mark Antony-

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius. The enemies of Cæsar shall say this; Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so; 215
But what compact mean you to have with us?

Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,

Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was indeed

Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar. 220

Friends am I with you all, and love you all, Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons

Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard 225

That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar, You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek;

And am moreover suitor that I may

283 Produce his body to the market-place

And, in the pulpit, as becomes a friend, 230 That this foul deed shall smell above the Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony. Brutus, a word with you. [Aside to Brutus] You know not what you do. Do not consent

That Antony speak in his funeral.

Know you how much the people may be mov'd

By that which he will utter?

Bru. [Aside to Cassius] By your pardon-I will myself into the pulpit first, And show the reason of our Cæsar's death.

What Antony shall speak, I will protest He speaks by leave and by permission; 240 And that we are contented Cæsar shall Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies. It shall advantage more than do us wrong. Cas. I know not what may fall I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's body. 2 1 5 You shall not in your funeral speech blame

But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar :

And say you do't by our permission ; Else shall you not have any hand at all About his funeral. And you shall speak 250 In the same pulpit whereto I am going, After my speech is ended.

Be it so; Ant.

I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow [Exeunt all but Antony. Ant. O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth.

That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!

Thou art the ruins of the noblest man That ever lived in the tide of times. Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood! Over thy wounds now do I prophesy— Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue-

A curse shall light upon the limbs of men; Domestic fury and fierce civil strife Shall cumber all the parts of Italy; Blood and destruction shall be so in use, And dreadful objects so familiar,

That mothers shall but smile when they behold Their infants quartered with the hands of war,

All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds; And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge, With Até by his side come hot from hell. Shall in these confines with a monarch's earth

With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter Octavius' Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not? Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming,

And bid me say to you by word of mouth-O Cæsar! [Seeing the body. Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes, Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine, Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd.

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,

No Rome of safety for Octavius yet; 290 Hie hence and tell him so. Yet stay awhile; Thou shalt not back till I have borne this

Into the market-place. There shall I try, In my oration, how the people take The cruel issue of these bloody men; 295 According to the which thou shalt discourse To young Octavius of the state of things. Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt with Cæsar's body.

Scene II. Rome. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, with the Pleberans.

Citizens. We will be satisfied! Let us be satisfied!

Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.

Cassius, go you into the other street, And part the numbers.

Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;

Those that will follow Cassius, go with him; And public reasons shall be rendered Of Cæsar's death.

1 Pleb. I will hear Brutus speak. 2 Pleb. I will hear Cassius, and compare their reasons.

When severally we hear them rendered. 10 [Exit Cassius, with some of the Plebeians. Brutus goes into the pulpa.

3 Pleb. The noble Brutus is ascended. Silence!

Bru. Be patient till the last.

Romai , countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear. Believe me for mine honour, and Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of war, have respect to mine honour. that you may believe. Censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than lus. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: Not that I lov'd Cæsar less, but that I lov'd Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar lov'd me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but—as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love: 10v for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Wno is here so base that would be a bondman? It any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I oftended. I have done no more to Casar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enroll'd in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforc'd, for which he suitcred

Enter MARK ANTONY and Others with Cæsar's body.

Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony, who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth, as which of you shall not? With this I depart, that, as I siew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All. Live, Brutus! live, live!

1 Pleb. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Pleb. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Pleb. Let him be Cæsar.

4 Pleb. Cæsar's better parts 50 Shall be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Pleb. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen— 2 Pleb. Peace, silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Pleb. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart

alone, 55
And for my sake stay here with Antony.
Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech

Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark
Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart 6c
Save I alone, till antony have spoke, [Exit.

1 Pleb. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark

Antony.

3 Pleb. Let ham go up into the public chair. We'li hear him. Noble Antony, go up. Ant. For Brutus' sake I am beholding to you.

to you.

4 Pleb. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Pleb. He says, for Brutus' sake
He finds himself beholding to us all.

4 Pleb. 'I were best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Pleb. This Casar was a tyrant.

3 Pleb. Nay, that's certain. We are blest that Rome is rid of him. 70 2 Pleb. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans-

All. Peace, ho! let us hear him, Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me vour ears;

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him. The evil that men do lives after them; 75 The good is oft interred with their bones; 30 let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious. If it were so, it was a grievous fault; 80 Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest—For Brutus is an honourable man; 80 are they all, all honourable men—Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral. He was my friend, faithful and just to

But Brutus says he was ambitious,
And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,

Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill; Did this in Casar seem ambitious? 90 When that the poor have cried, Casar hath wept;

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff. Yet Brutus says he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man. You all did see that on the Lupercal I thrice presented him a kingly crown, Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And sure he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without

cause:

What cause withholds you, then, to mourn for him?

O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts, And men have lost their reason! Bear with me;

My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar, And I must pause till it come back to me.

death.

1 Pleb. Methinks there is much reason in his savings.

matter,

Cæsar has had great wrong.

3 Pleb. Has he, masters! 110 I fear there will a worse come in his place. 4 Pleb. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown:

Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

1 Pleb. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

2 Pleb. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

3 Pleb. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

4 Pleb. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But vesterday the word of Cæsar might Have stood against the world: now lies he there.

And none so poor to do him reverence. 120 O masters, if I were dispos'd to stir Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage.

I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wiong,

Who, you all know, are honourable men. ill not do them wrong; I rather choose To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you,

Than I will wrong such honourable men. But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar :

I found it in his closet—'tis his will. Let but the commons hear this testament. Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read, And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood; Yea, beg a hair of him for memory And, dying, mention it within their wills, 135 Bequeathing it as a rich legacy Unto their issue.

4 Pleb. We'll hear the will. Read it, Mark Antony.

All. The will, the will! We will hear Cæsar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it; It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you.

You are not wood, you are not stones, but men:

And being men, hearing the will of Casar, It will inflame you, it will make you

'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;

For if you should, O, what would come of it?

4 Pleb. Read the will; we'll hear it, Antony!

You shall read us the will—Cæsar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile?

2 Pleb. If thou consider rightly of the I have o'ershot myself to teil you of it. 150 I fear I wrong the honourable men Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar fear it.

4 Pleb. They were traitors. Horomable men!

All. The will! the testament!
2 Pleb. They were viliains, murderers.
The will! Read the will. Ant. You will compel me, then, to read the will?

Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar.

And let me show you him that made the will.

Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

All. Come down. 2 Pleb. Descend. [Antony comes down.

3 Pleb. You shall have leave.

4 Pleb. A ring! Stand round.

1 Pleb. Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.

2 Pleb. Room for Antony, most noble Antony!

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

All. Stand back. Room! Bear back. Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now

You all do know this mantle. I remember The first time ever Cæsar put it on : 'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,

That day he overcame the Nervii. Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through; See what a rent the envious Casca made; Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd,

And as he pluck'd his cursed steel away, Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it, As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no; 180 For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel.

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar lov'd him!

This was the most unkindest cut of all; For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab, Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,

Quite vanquish'd him. Then burst his mighty heart:

And in his mantle muffling up his face, Even at the base of Pompey's statua, Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen! Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us. O, now you weep, and I perceive you feel The dint of pity. These are gracious drops.

245

Kind souls, what weep you when you but Wherein hath Caesar thus deserv'd your behold 10. Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you

Here is himself, marr'd as you see with traitors.

1 Pleb. O piteous spectacle!

2 Pleb. O noble Cæsar!

3 Pleb. O woeful day!

4 Pleb. O traitors, villains!

1 Pleb. O most bloody sight!

2 Pleb. We will be reveng'd.

All. Revenge! About! Seek! Burn! Kill! Slay! Let not a traitor Fire! live!

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

1 Pleb. Peace there! Hear the noble Antony.

we'll die with him.

not stir you up 210

To such a sudden flood of mutiny.

They that have done this deed are honour-

What private griefs they have, alas, I know

That made them do it: they are wise and honourable,

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:

I am no orator, as Brutus is,

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man, That love my friend; and that they know full well

That gave me public leave to speak of him. For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,

Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,

To stir men's blood; I only speak right on. I tell you that which you yourselves do know;

Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths.

And bid them speak for me. But were I Brutus.

And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue

In every wound of Cæsar, that should move The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny. 230 All. We'll mutiny.

1 Pleb. We'll burn the house of Brutus. 3 Pleb. Away, then! Come seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.

All. Peace, ho! Hear Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what.

loves?

Alas, you know not! I must tell you, then: You have forgot the will I told you of.

All. Most true. The will! Let's stay and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Capar's scal:

200 To every Roman citizen he gives.

To every several man, seventy-five drach-

2 Pleb. Most noble Cæsar! We'll revenge his death.

3 Pleb. O royal Casar!

Ant. Hear me with patience.

All. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks.

2 Pleb. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, His private arbours, and new-planted orchards.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me On this side Tiber; ne hath left them you. And to your heirs for ever-common pleasures.

To walk abroad and recreate yourselves. Here was a Casar! When comes such another?

1 Pleb. Never, never! Come away, away! We'll burn his body in the holy place, 255 And with the brands are the traitors' houses.

Take up the body.

2 Pleb. Go, fetch fire.

3 Pleb. Pluck down benches.

4 Pleb. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing. [Exeunt Plebeians with the body.

Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot,

Take thou what course thou wilt.

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow! Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.

He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us any thing. Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius

Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people,

How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exeunt.

Scene III. Rome. A street.

Enter CINNA the Poet, and after him the Plebelans.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,

And things unluckily charge my fantasy. I have no will to wander forth of doors, Yet something leads me forth.

1 Pleb. What is your name?

2 Pleb. Whither are you going ?

3 Pleb. Where do you dwell?

4 Pleb. Are you a married man or a bachelor?

2 Pleb. Answer every man directly.

1 Pleb. Ay, and briefly.

4 Pleb. Ay, and wisely.

3 Pleb. Ay, and truly, you were best. Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely, I say I am a bachelor.

2 Pleb. That's as much as to say they are fools that marry. You'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.

1 Pleb. As a friend or an enemy?

Cin. As a friend.

2 Pleb. That matter is answered directly. 4 Pleb. For your dwelling—briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

3 Pleb. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna. 1 Pleb. Tear him to pieces; he's a con-spirator!

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the turn him going.

3 Pleb. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! fire-brands! To Brutus', to Cassius'! Burn all! Some to Decius' hous, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'. Away, go!

ACT FOUR

Scene I. Rome. Antony's house.

Enter Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die. Consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Oct. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,

Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony. 5
Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot
I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house; Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in legacies. Lep. What, shall I find you here? zo Oct. Or here or at the Capitol.

[Exit Lepidus.

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on errands. Is it fit,

The threefold world divided, he should stand

One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him, 15
And took his voice who should be prick'd to die

In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you;

And though we lay these honours on this man,

To ease ourselves of divers sland'rous loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,

To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven as we point the way; And having brought our treasure where we will,

Then take we down his load, and turn him off,

Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will; But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius, and for that

I do appoint him store of provender. 30 It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on, His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.

And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so:
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;
35

A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On abjects, orts, and imitations,
Which, out of use and stal'd by other men,
Begin his fashion. Do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius
Are levying powers; we must straight make head;

Therefore let our alliance be combin'd, Our best friends made, our means stretch'd; And let us presently go sit in council 45 How covert matters may be best disclos'd, And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so; for we are at the stake, And bay'd about with many enemies; And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear.

Millions of mischiefs.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Camp near Sardis. Before the tent of Brutus.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and the AIMY. TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet them.

Bru. Stand, ho!

Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Bru. What now, Lucilius? Is Cassius Let us not wrangle. Bid them move away: near?

Lucil. He is at hand, and Pindarus is come

To do you salutation from his master. Bru. He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus. In his own change, or by ill officers,

Hath given me some worthy cause to wish Things done undone: but if he be at hand I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt But that my noble master will appear Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted. Lucilius,

How he receiv'd you; let me be resolv'd. Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough.

But not with such familiar instances Nor with such free and friendly conference As he hath us'd of old.

Thou hast describ'd Bru. A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius, When love begins to sicken and decay, 20 It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:

But hollow men, like horses hot at hand, Make gallant show and promise of their mettle :

But when they should endure the bloody

They fall their crests, and like deceitful iades

Sink in the trial. Comes his army on? Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd.

The greater part, the horse in general, Are come with Cassius. [Low march within. Hark! he is arriv'd: 30 Bru. March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and his Powers.

Cas. Stand, ho! Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along. 1 Sold. Stand ! 2 Sold. Stand!

3 Sold. Stand! Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods! wrong I mine enemies?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;

And when you do them-

Cassius, be content; Speak your griefs softly; I do know you

Before the eyes of both our armies here.

Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs.

And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus. Bid our commanders lead their charges off A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no man

Come to our tent till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

A word, Scene III. The Camp near Sardis. Within the tent of Brutus.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this: You have condemn'd and noted Lucius

Pella For taking bribes neie of the Sardians:

Wherein my letters, praying on his side. 4 Because I knew the man, were slighted off. Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case. Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offence should bear his comment. Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself

Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm.

To sell and mart your offices for gold To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm! You know that you are Brutus that speaks this,

Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,

And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!

Remember March, the ides of March remember:

Did not great Julius bleed for justice sake? What villain touch'd his body, that did stab.

And not for justice? What, shall one of us. That struck the foremost man of all this world

But for supporting robbers, shall we now Contaminate our fingers with base bribes. And sell the mighty space of our large honours

For so much trash as may be grasped thus? I had rather be a dog and bay the moon Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bai+ not me! Which should perceive nothing but love I'll not endure it. You forget yourself, from us, To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I,

30

Older in practice, abler than yourself To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you are not. Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget my.elf;

35

Have mind upon your health, tempt me no farther.

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.

Must I give way and room to your rash choler?

Shall I be frighted when a madman stares?

Cas. O ye gods, ye gods! must I endure all this?

Bru. Ali this? Ay, more! Fret till your proud heart break.

Go show your slaves how cholene you are, And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?

Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch

Under your testy humour? By the gods, You shall digest the venom of your spleen Though it do split you; for from this day forth

I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,

When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this? 50 Bru. You say you are a better soldier.

Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,

And it shall please me well. For mine own part,

I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me, Brutus; 55
I said an elder soldier, not a better.

Did I say 'better'?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace! You durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not?

Bru. No.

Cas. What, durst not tempt him?
Bru. For your life you durst not.
Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love;

I may do that I shall be sorry for. Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you

Which I respect not. I did send to you For certain sums of gold, which you denied me; 70

For I can raise no money by vile means. By heaven, I had rather coin my heart, And drop my blood for drachmas, than to

From the haid hands of peasants their vile trash

By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,

75

Which you denied me; was that done like Cassius?

Should I have answer'd Casus Cassius so? When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous, To lock such rascal counters from his friends, 80

Re ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not. He was but a fool That brought my answer back. Brutus hath 11v'd my heart.

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,

But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me. Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults. Cas. A triendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come.

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius, For Cassius is aweary of the world:

Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother:

Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd.

Set in a notebook, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,

To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep My spirit from mine eyes! There is my dagger,

And here my naked breast; within, a

Dearer than Plutus' mine, richei than gold; If that thou be'st a Roman, take it foith. I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart. Strike as thou didst at Cæsar; for I know, When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheathe your dagger.
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.

O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb, That carries anger as the flint bears fire; 110 Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark, And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,

When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth Bru. She is dead. Cas. How scap'd I killing when I cross'd him? When I spoke that I was ill-Bru. vou so? O insupportable and touching loss! temper'd too. Cas. Nothing but death shall stay me. Cas. How now! What's the matter? Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA. Bru. Come in, Titinius! Welcome, good Poet. For shame, you generals! What do you mean? Messala! Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die, Messala.

With meditating that she must die once, I have the patience to endure it now. 1900 Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you, But yet my nature could not bear it so. Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?
Cas. This it is:

This it is:
"Tis better that the enemy seek us,
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers, Doing himself offence, whilst we, lying still,

Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness. 2000
Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection;
For they have grudg'd us contribution
The enemy, marching along by them, 205
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and en-courag'd; From which advantage shall we cut him

If at Philippi we do face him there, These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother. 210
Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside

That we have tried the utmost of our friends,

Our legions are brim full, our cause is ripe. The enemy increaseth every day:
We, at the height, are ready to decline, 215

We, at the height, are ready to decline. 215
There is a tide in the affairs of men Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune:

Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves.

Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on; We'll along ourselves and meet them at Philipps.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk.

And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good night: Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius! [Enter Lucius] My gown. [Exit Lucius] Farewell, good Messala. Good night, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius, Good night, and good repose!

Cas. O my dear brother, This was an ill beginning of the night! Never come such division 'tween our souls!

Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Everything is well. 234

Cas. Good night, my loid.

Bru. Good night, good brother. Tit. and Mes. Good night, Lord Brutus. Bru. Farewell, every one. [Exeunt Cassius, Titimus, and Messala.

Re-enter Lucius with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily? Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius and some other of my men; 240
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.
Luc. Varro and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sus, lie in my tent and sleep;

It may be I shall raise you by and by 245 On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you we will stand and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so. Lie down, good sirs;

It may be I shall otherwise bethink me. Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;

I put it in the pocket cr my gown.

[Varro and Cla dius he down.

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Caust thou hold up they heavy eyes awhile, And touch they instrument a strain or two? Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my boy.

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;

I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already. 261
Bru. It was well done; and thou shalt sleep again;

I will not hold thee long. If I do live,

I will be good to thee.

[Music and a song. Lucius falls asleep. This is a sleepy tune. O murd'rous slumbe!! Layest thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,

That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good And we will follow. night. 267 I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument: I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night. You said the enemy would not come down, But keep the hills and upper regions : It proves not so. Their battles are at hand: They mean to warn us at Philippi here, 5 Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it. They could be content To visit other places, and come down With fearful bravery, thinking by this face I'o faster in our thoughts that they have courage; But 'tis not so. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Prepare you, generals: The enemy comes on in gallant thow: Then bloody sign of battle is hung out, And something to be done immediately. 15 Am Octavius, lead your battle softly on, Upon the left hand of the even field. Oct. Upon the right hand I: keep thou the left. Ani. Why do you cross me in this exigent? Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. Drum. And leave them honeyless

Not stingless too? 35 Ant. Bru. O yes, and scundless too; For you have stol'n then buzzing, Antony,

And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains, you did not so when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar 10 You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feei:

Whilst damned Casca, like a cui, behind Struck Cæsai on the neck. O you flatterers! Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank vourself:

Oct. Come, come, the cause. If arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops. Look.

I draw a sword against conspirators: When think you that the sword goes up again?

Never till Cæsai's three and thirty wounds Be well aveng'd, or till another Cæsar Have added slaughter to the sword of traitois

Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by tautors' hands,

Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

So I hope. I was not boin to die on Brutus' sword. Bru. O, it thou wert the noblest of thy strain.

Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of The time of lite—aiming myself with such honour.

Join'd with a masker and a reveller! Ant. Old Cassius still!

Come, Antony; away! Defiance, traitois, hurl we in your teeth. If you dare fight to-day, come to the field; If not, when you have stomachs. [Exeunt Cctavius, Antony, and their Army. Cas. Why, now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!

The sto m is up, and all is on the hazard. Bru. Ho, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.

Lucil. My lord.

[Brutus and Lucilius converse apart. Cas. Messala.

Mes. What says my general? Messala, 70 This is my birth-day; as this very day Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand Messala.

Be thou my witness that against my will, As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set

You know that I held Epicurus strong. And his operion; now I change my mind And partly credit things that do presage Coming from Saidis, on our former ensign Two mighty eagles fell; and there they peich'd.

Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands.

Who to Philippi here consorted us.

This morning are they fled away and gone, And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites,

Fly o'er our heads and downward look on us

As we were sickly prev. Their shadows seem

A canopy most fatal, under which Our army hes, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so. Cas. I but believe it partly: For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd

To meet all pends very constantly. Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus, The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may.

Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age! But, since the affairs of men rest still in-

Let's reason with the worst that may betall. If we do lose this battle, then is this The very last time we shall speak together. What are you then determined to do? 90 Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy

By which I did blame Cato to: the death Which he did give himself-I know not how. But I do find it cowardly and vile,

For fear of what might fall, so to prevent patience To stay the providence of some high powers

That govern us below. Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,

You are contented to be led in trium; h Thorough the streets of Rome?

Bru. No. Cassius, no. Think not, theu noble Roman, That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome:

He bears too great a mind. But this same dav

Must end that work the ides of Maich begun,

And whether we shall meet again I know

Therefore our everlasting farewell take: 111 For ever and for ever farewell, Cassius! If we do meet again, why, we shall smile; If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever and for ever farewell Brutus!

If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed; :: If not, 'tis true this parting was well made. Bru. Why then, lead on. O that a man might know

The end of this day's business ere it come! But it sufficeth that the day will end, 121 And then the end is known. Come, ho! away! [Exeunt.

Near Philippi. SCENE II. battle.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills

Unto the legions on the other side

[Loud alarum. Let them set on at once; for I perceive But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing, And sudden push gives them the overthrow. Ride, ride, Messala; let them all come down. Exeunt.

Scene III. Another part of the field.

Alarums. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!

Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy. This ensign here of mine was turning back; I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too

Who, having some advantage on Octavius, Took it too eagerly. His soldiers fell to spoil.

Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;

Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord; 10 Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off. Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius. Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lovest me,

Mount thou my horse and lude thy spurs in him,

Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops

And here again, that I may rest assur'd Whether youd troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again even with a thought. Hxit.

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill; My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,

And tell me what thou not'st about the field. [Pindarus goes up. This day I breathed first. Time is come round, And where I did begin there shall I end; My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

Pin. [Above] O my lord! Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about With horsemen that make to him on the > Cas. Come down; behold no more. O, coward that I am to live so long To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

Enter PINDARUS.

Come hither, sirrah. In Parthia did I take thee prisoner: And then I swore thee, saving of thy life.

That whatsoever I did bid thee do Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath;

Now be a freeman, and with this good sword. That ian through Casai's bowels, search

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius: for Octavius

Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,

As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him? Tit.

All disconsolate, 55 With Pindarus, his bondman, on this hill. Mes. Is not that he that hes upon the ground?

Tit. He hes not like the living. O my heart!

Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala: But Cassius is no more. O setting sun, As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night, So in his red blood Cassius' day is set!

The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone; Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done.

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed. Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child, Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of 'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere

The things that are not? O error, soon We shall try fortune in a second fight. conceiv'd, Thou never com'st unto a happy birth. 70 But kill'st the mother that engend'red thee!

Tit. What. Pindarus! Where art thou. Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet

The noble Brutus, thrusting this report Into his eacs. I may say 'thrusting 'it; 75 For piercing steel and darts envenomed Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie vou, Messala. And I will seek for Pindaius the while. IExit Messala.

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius? Did I not meet thy friends, and did not they Put on my blows this wreath of victory, And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas, thou hast misconstitued every thins But hold thee, take this gailand on thy brow;

Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace, And see how I regarded Carus Cassius. By your leave, gods. This is a Roman's part. Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. Dies.

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, Young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? Mes. Lo yonder, and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward. Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Cæsar, thou ait mighty yet! Thy spirit walks abroad and turns our swords

In our own proper entrails. [Low alarums. Brave Titinius! Cato. Look whe'r he have not crown'd dead Cassius! Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these ?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well! It is impossible that ever Rome Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe moe tears

To this dead man than you shall see me pay. I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time. Come, therefore, and to Thasos send his body.

His funerals shall not be in our camp, 105 Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come; And come, young Cato; let us to the field. Labeo and Flavius set our battles on. night

(Exeunt.

Scene IV. Another part of the field Alarum. Enter BRUIUS, MESSALA, YOUNG CATO, LUCILIUS, and FLAVIUS.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, vet hold up vour heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field. I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend. - I am the son of Maicus Cato, ho!

Enter Soldiers and fight.

Bru. And I am Brutus, Maicus Bretus, I! Brutus, my country's friend! Know me for Biutus! [Exit. Young Cato falls. Lucil. O young and noble Cato, ait thou down?

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius, And mayst be honour'd, being Cato's son

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest. Lucil. Only I yield to die [Offering money] There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death 1 Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner! Enter ANTONY.

2 Sold, Room, ho! Teli Antony Brutus is ta'en.

1 Sold. I'll tell the news. Here comes the general.

Brutus is ta'en! Brutus is ta'en, my lord! Ant. Where is he?

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Blueus is safe cnough.

I dare assure thee that no enemy Shall ever take alive the noble Brurus. The gods defend him from so great a shame! When you do find him, or alive or dead, Ie will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assine you,

A puze no less in worth. Keep this man safe; live him all kindness. I had rather have uch men my friends than enemies. Go on, And see whe'r Brutus be alive or dead; se And bring us word unto Octavius' tent How everything is chanc'd. Exeunt.

Scene V. Another part of the field. Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cli. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord.

He came not back. He is or ta'en or slain Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus. Slaying is the word:

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus. 5 [Whispering.

Cli. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace, then, no words.

Cli. I'll rather kill myself. Bru. Hark thee, Dardamus!
Dar. Shall I do such a deed?

Dar. Sh Cli. O Dardanius!

Dar. O Clitus!

Cli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Cli. Now is that noble vessel full of griet, That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius: The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me Two several times by night—at Sardis once. And this last night here in Philippi fields. I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord. Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.
Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how is goes:

Our enemies have beat us to the pit;

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves
Than tarry till they push us. Good
Volumnius.

Thou know'st that we two went to school together;

Even for that our love of old. I prithee, Hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it. Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord. [Alarum still.

Cli. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here.

Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and you, Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen, My heart doth joy that yet in all my lite I found no man but he was true to me. I shall have glory by this losing day, More than Octavius and Mark Antony By this vile conquest shall attain unto. So fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history. 10 Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest,

That have but labour'd to attain this hour. [Alarum. Cry within 'Fly, fly, fly, fly!'

Cli. Fly, my lord, fly.

Hence! I will follow.
[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.

I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord; Thou art a fellow of a good respect; 45 Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it.

Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato? Stra. Give me your hand first. Fare you well, my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato. Cæsar, now be still.

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.
[He runs on his sword, and dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Octavius, Antony, Messala, Lucilius, and the Army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is tny master?

Stra. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala.

The conquerors can but make a fire of him; For Brutus only overcame himself, 56 And no man else hath honour by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be fixed at the conduction of the conduction Lucil. So Brutus should be found.

thank thee, Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.
Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them.

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me? Stra. Ay, it Messala will prefer me to you. Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?
Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all.

All the conspirators save only he Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;
He only in a general honest thought 71
And common good to all made one of them.
His life was gentle; and the elements

So anx'd in him that Nature might stand up And say to all the world 'This was a man!' Oct. According to his virtue let us use

With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

him.

Most like a soldier, ordered honourably. So call the field to rest, and let's away 80 To part the glories of this happy day.

[Exeunt.

THE SCENE: Scotland and England.

ACT ONE

Scene I. An open place.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again?

In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done, When the battle's lost and won.

3 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.
1 Witch. Where the place?
2 Witch. Upon the heath.

3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth. 1 Witch. I come, Graymalkin.

2 Witch. Paddock calls.

3 Witch. Anon!

All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair: Hover through the fog and filthy air. [Witches vanish.

Scene II. A camp near Forres.

Alarum within. Enter KING DUNCAN. MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Seigeant. Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,

As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt

The newest state. Mal. This is the sergeant Who like a good and hardy soldier fought 'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend! Say to the King the knowledge of the broil As thou didst leave it. Serg. Doubtful it stood.

As two spent swimmers that do cling together derers, Attendants, and Messengers.

And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald-Worthy to be a rebel, for to that

The multiplying villainies of nature Do swarm upon him-from the Western Isles

Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied; And Fortune, on his damned quarrel smuling.

Show'd like a rebel's whore. But all's too weak: For brave Macbeth-well he deserves that name-Disdaining Fortune, with his brandish'd steel

Which smok'd with bloody execution, Like valour's minion, carv'd out passage Till he fac'd the slave; Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him. Till he unseam'd him from the nave to th' chaps,

And fix'd his head upon our battlements. Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!

Serg. As whence the sun gins his reflection

Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break. So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to come Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland. mark:

MACBETH [Act 1

No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd, Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels. But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage, With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men. Began a fresh assault. Dismay'd not this Ďun. Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo? Serg. As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion. 35 If I say sooth, I must report they were As cannons overchaig'd with double cracks: So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds. Or memorize another Golgotha, I cannot tell-But I am faint; my gashes cry for help. Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds; They smack of honour both -- Go get him surgeons. [Exit Sergeant, attended. Enter Ross. Who comes here? The worthy Thane of Ross. Mal. Len. What a haste looks through his eyes! So should he look that seems to speak things strange. Ross. God save the King! Whence cam'st thou, worthy Dun. thane? From Fife, great King, Ross. Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky And fan our people cold. Norway himself, with terrible numbers. Assisted by that most disloyal traitor The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict. Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof, Confronted him with self-comparisons, Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm, Curbing his lavish spirit; and to conclude, The victory fell on us. Dun. Great happiness! Ross. That now Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition: Nor would we deign him burial of his men Till he disbursed, at Saint Colme's Inch, Ten thousand dollars to our general use. Dun. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive Our bosom interest. Go pronounce his present death. And with his former title greet Macbeth. Ross. I'll sec it done.

Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macheth hatle woo. Exeunt. SCENE III. A blasted heath. Enter the three Witches Thunder. 1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister? 2 Witch. Killing swine. 3 Witch. Sister, where thou? 1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap, And mounch'd. and mounch'd, mounch'd. 'Give mc 'quot!i I. 'Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fed ronvon cries. Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' th' Tiger; But in a sieve I'll thither sail And, like a rat without a tail. I'll de, I'll do, and I'll do. 10 2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind. 1 Witch. Th'art kind. 3 Witch. And I another. 1 Witch. I myself have all the other: And the very ports they blow, All the quarters that they know I' th' shipman's card. I'll drain him dry as hay: Sleep shall neither night nor day Hang upon his pent-house hd; 20 He shall live a man forbid; Weary sev'nights, nine times nine. Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine. Though his bark cannot be lost. Yet it shall be tempest-tost. 25 Look what I have. 2 Witch. Show me, show me. I Witch. Here I have a pilot's thump, Wreck'd as homeward he did come. Drum within. 3 Witch, A drum, a drum! Macbeth doth come. All. The Weird Sisters, hand in hand, Posters of the sea and land, Thus do go about, about; Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine, 35 And thrice again, to make up nine. Peace! The charm's wound up. Enter MACBETH and BANQUO. Mach. So foul and fair a day I have not

Ban. How far 15't call'd to Forres? What are these,

So wither'd, and so wild in their attire, 40 'The r look not like th' inhabitants o' th' earth,

And yet are on't? Live you, or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying

Scene 31 MACBETH

Upon her skinny lips. You should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpre-That you are so.

Macb. Speak if you can. What are you 1 Witch. All hul, Macbeth! Hay to thee, Thane or Gramis!

2 Witch. All hul, Macbeth! Hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hul, Macbeth, that shalt be King hereafter!

Ban. Good sii, why do you start, and seem to fear Things that do sound so fair? I' th' name of truth.

Are ve fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace and great prediction

Of noble having and of royal hope, speak not.

If you can look into the seeds of time And say which grain will grow and which will not.

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear Your favours nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!

2 Witch. Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet pluch happier. 3 Witch. Thou shalf get kings, though thou be none.

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

1 Witch, Banquo and Macbeth, all hail! Mach. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more.

By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? The Thane of Cawdor lives,

A prosperous gentleman; and to be King Stands not within the prospect of belief, No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence

You owe this strange intelligence, or why Upon this blasted heath you stop our way With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I 19 itches vanish. charge you.

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd?

Mach. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about?

Or have we eaten on the insane root That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings. You shall be King. B.111. Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?

Ban. To th' self-same tune and words. Whe's here ?

Enter Ross and Angus.

Ross. The King hath happily receiv'd, Macheth.

The news of thy success; and when he reads

Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight, His wonders and his praises do contend Wnich should be thine or his. Silenc'd with tnat.

In viewing o'er the rest o' th' self-same day, He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks, Noting ateard of what thyself didst make, Strange images of death. As thick as tale

That he seems tapt withal. To me you Carre post with post, and every one did bear

Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence, And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent 100 To give thee, from our royal master, thanks:

Only to herald thee into his sight,

Not pay thee.

Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater honoui.

He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor:

In which addition, hail, most worthy Thane!

For it is thine.

Ban. What, can the devil speak true? Marb. The Thane of Cawdor hves; why do you diess me

In borrowed robes?

Who was the Thane lives yet; Ana But under heavy judgment bears that life Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd

With those of Norway, or did line the rebel With hidden help and vantage, or that with both

He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;

But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd. Have overthrown him.

Mach, [Asidel Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor! The greatest is behind.—Thanks for your pains. [Aside to Banquo] Do you not hope your children shall be kings. When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me

Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. [Aside to Macbeth] That, trusted home, 85 Might vet enkindle you unto the crown.

TOOL

MACBETH [Act 1

But be the serpent under't. He that's coming

Must be provided for; and you shall put This night's great business into my dispatch:

Which shall to all our nights and days to come

Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom. M icb. We will speak further.

Ladv M. Only look up clear. To alter favour ever is to fear. Leave all the rest to me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Inverness. Before Macbeth's castle

Hauthovs and torches. Enter DUNCAN. MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LEN-NOY, MACDUFF, Ross, ANGUS, Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air

Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself Unto our gentle senses.

This guest of summer, Ban. The temple-haunting martlet, does approve By his lov'd mansioury that the heaven's Smells wooingly here; no jutty, frieze, Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird Hath made her pendent bed and proceeant cradle.

Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd

The air is delicate.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess! 10 The love that follows us sometime is our Strong both against the deed; then, as his trouble.

Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach Who should against his murderer shut the you

How you shall bid God 'ield us for your Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this pains,

And thank us for your trouble.

Ladv M.

All our service In every point twice done, and then done double,

Were poor and single business to contend Against those honours deep and broad wherewith

Your Majesty loads our house; for those of old,

And the late dignities heap'd up to them, We rest your hermits.

Where's the Thane of Cawdor? Dun. We cours'd him at the heels and had a purpose

To be his purveyor; but he rides well, And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp him

To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess. 24

We are your guest to-night.

Your servants ever Lalv M. Have thems, themselves, and what is theirs. in compt.

To make their audit at your Highness' pleasure,

Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand; Conduct me to mine host. We love him highly.

And shall continue our graces towards him. By your leave, hostess. I Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Inverness. Macheth's castle. Hautboys, torches. Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service over the stage. Then enter MACBLITH.

Mach. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well

It were done quickly. If th' assassination Could trammel up the consequence, and catch,

With his surcease, success; that but this blow

Might be the be-all and the end-all here-But here upon this bank and sheal of time-We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases

We still have judgment here, that we but teach

Bloedy instructions, which being taught return

To plague th' inventor. This even-handed instice

Commends the ingredience of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips. He's here in double trust: First, as I am his kinsman and his subjecthost, door,

Duncan

Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been So clear in his great office, that his virtues Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongu'd, against

The deep damnation of his taking-off; 20 And pity, like a naked new-born habe, Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin hors'd

Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye, That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur

To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself, And talls on th' other.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

How now! What news? Lady M. He has almost supp'd. Why have you left the chamber?

1004

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Know you not he has? Ladv M. Macb. We will proceed no further in this business.

He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought

Golden opinions from all sorts of people. Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,

Not cast aside so soon.

Was the hope drunk 35 Lady M. Wherein you diess'd yourself? Hath it slent since,

And wakes it now to look so green and pale At what it did so freely? From this time Such I account thy love. Art thou ateard To be the same in thine own act and valour As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that

Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life, And live a coward in thine own esteem, Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would', Like the poor cat i' tu' adage?

Prithee, peace; 45 SCENL I. I dare do all that may become a man; Who dares do more is none.

What beast was't then Lady M. That made you break this enterprise to me? When you durst do it, then you were a man: And to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time nor Did then adhere, and yet you would make both;

They have made themselves, and that then fitness now

Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know

How tender 'tis to love the bane that milks me-

I would, while it was smiling in my face. Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless

And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn Who's there? As you have done to this.

Mach. If we should fail?

Lady M. We fail!

But screw your courage to the sticking place, And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep-Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey

Soundly invite him-his two chamberlains Will I with wine and wassail so convince That memory, the warder of the brain, 65 Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason A limber only. When in swinish sleep Their drenched natures lie as in a death, What cannot you and I perform upon Th' unguarded Duncan? what not put upon

His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt

Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only: For thy undanated metale should compose Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd. When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two

Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers.

That they have done 't?

Who dares receive it other, Lady M. As we shall make our guet, and clamour roai

Upon his death?

Mach. I am settled, and bend up Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. So Away, and mock the tin e with fairest show: False face must hide what the talse heart doth know. [Exerent.

ACT TWO

Inverness. Court of Marbeth's castle.

Enter BANQUO, and FLUANCE with a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelva. Fle. I take 't, 'tis later, or.

Ban. Hold, take my sword. There's husbandry in heaven:

Their candles are all out. Take thee that too.

A heavy summons hes like lead upon nie, And yet I would not sleep. Merciful powers Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature Gives way to in repose!

Finter MACBETH and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword.

Mach. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed.

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your offices. This diamond he preets your wife withal, 15 By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up In measureless content.

Mach. Being unprepar'd. Our will became the servant to defect: Which else should free have wrought. All's well. Ban.

I dreamt last night of the three Weird Sisters. To you they have show'd some truth.

I think not of them: Macb. 20. Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve, Macb. Good repose the while! Ban. Thanks, sir; the like to you! 30 [Exeunt Banquo and Fleance. Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready, She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed. [Exit Servant. Is this a dagger which I see before me, The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee. I have thee not, and yet I see thee still. " Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible To feeling as to sight? or art thou but A dagger of the mind, a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain? I see thee yet, in form as palpable As this which now I draw. Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going: And such an instrument I was to use. Mine eves are made the fools o' th' other senses. Or else worth all the rest. I see thee still : And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood. Which was not so before. There's no such thing: It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one halfworld Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse The curtain'd sleep; now witchcraft celebrates Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder. Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf. Exit.

Scent II. Inverness. Macbeth's castle. Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold : What hath quench'd them hath given me fire. Hark! Perce! It was the owl that shrick'd, the fatal bellman.

Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it.

The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms Do mock their charge with snores. I have drugg'd their possets.

That death and nature do contend about them.

Whether they live or die.

Mach. [Within] Who's there! What, ho! Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd.

And 'tis not done. Th' attempt, and not the deed. Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready;

He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled

My father as he slept, I had done't.

Enfer MACRETH.

My husband! Mach. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.

Did not you speak? Macb. When?

Ladv M. Now. Macb. As I descended? Ladv M. Av.

Macb. Hark! Who lies i' th' second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain. Macb. This is a sorry sight.

Looking on his hands. Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!

That they did wake each other. I stood and heard them:

But they did say their prayers, and address'd them Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together. Macb. One cried 'God bless us', and 'Amen' the other,

As they had seen me with these hangman's hands.

List'ning their fear, I could not say

When they did say 'God bless us!' Lady M. Consider it not so deeply. Macb. But wherefore could not I pro-nounce 'Amen'? I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen

Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought

After these ways: so, it will make u mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep no more; Macbeth does murder sleep '-the innocent

Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleave of

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath, Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would course.

Chief nourisher in life's feast.

What do you mean? Mach. Still it cried 'Sleep no more' to all the house;

'Glamis hath murder'd sleep; and therefore Cawdor Shall sleep no more -Macheth shall sleep no more'. Lady M. Who was it that thus cried?

Why, worthy Thane,

You do unbend your noble strength to think So brainsickly of things. Go get some water And wash this filthy witness from your hand. Why did you bring these daggers from the place? They must lie there. Go carry them, and smear

The sleepy grooms with blood.

I'll go no more: 50 I am afraid to think what I have done: Look on't again I dare not.

Ladv M. Infirm of purpose! Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures; 'tis the eve of childhood

That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed. I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal, For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within. Whence is that knocking? Macb. How is't with me, when every noise appals me?

What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green one red.

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame

To wear a heart so white. [Knock] I hear a knocking At the south entry; retire we to our chamber. A little water clears us of this deed.

How eary is it then! Your constancy Hath left you unatter 'd. [Knock] Hark!

more knockt-Gct on your nightstown, lest occasion call

And slow us to be watchers. Be not lost So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed, 'twere best not know myself. [Knock. thou couldst! Exeunt.

Scene III. Inverness. Macbeth's castle. Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key. [Knock] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' th' name of Beelzebuh? Here's a farmer that hang'd himself on th' expectation of plenty: Come in time; have napkins enow about you; here you'll sweat for't. [Knock] Knock, knock! Who's there, i' th' other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for od's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven. O, come in, equivocator. [Knock] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither or stealing out of a French hose. Come in. ailor, here you may roast your goose. Knock | Knock, knock; never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold or hell. I'll devil-porter it no further. I had thought to have let in some of all professions that go the primrose way to th' everlasting bonfire. [Knock] Apon, anon! [Opens the gate] I pray you remember the porter.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, that you do lie so late? Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes and un-provokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much drink may be said to be an equivoMACBETH 「Act 2 cator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Mac.l. I believe drink gave thee the he last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat on me; but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Len. Good morrow, noble sir!

Mach. Good morrow, both! Macd. Is the King sturring, worthy Thane?

Macb.

Not vet. Macd. He did command me to call timely on him;

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to nim. 45 Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;

But yet 'tis one.
Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call, i. For 'tis my limited service. [Exit Macduly. Len. Goes the King hence to-day? Mach. He does: he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly. Where

Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say,

Lamentings heard i' th' air, strange screams of death.

And prophesying, with accents terrible, ... Of dire combustion and contus'd events New hatch'd to th' woeful time; obscure bird

Clamour'd the livelong night. Some say the earth

Was feverous and did shake.

Macb. Twas a rough night. Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel

A fellow to it.

Re-enter MALDUFF.

Macd. O horror, horror! Tongue nor heart

Cannot conceive nor name thee.

Mach. What's the matter? Len. Macd. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece.

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope 8001

The Lord's mounted temple, and stole thence The life o' th' building.

Macb.

What is't you say-the life? Len. Mean you his Majesty? Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight With a new Gorgon. Do not bid me speak; See, and then speak yourselves.

IExeunt Macbeth and Lennox. Awake, awake!

Ring the alarum bell. Murder and treason! Banquo and Denalbain! Malcolm! awake! Shake off this downy sleep, death's counter-

And look on death itself. Up, up, and see The great doom's mage! Malcolm! Banquo!

As from your graves use up and walk like Sprites

To countenance this horior! Ring the bell. [Bell rings.

Enter LADY MACRETH.

Lady M. What's the business. That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley The sleepers of the house? Speak, speak! Ma d. O gentle 'ade,

"Its not for you to hear what I can speak! The repetition in a noman's ear

Would murder as it fell.

Enter Banaro.

O Binquo, Binquo,

Our royal master's murder'd! Lady M. Woe, alas! 85

What, in our house?

Flor 12 . Too cruel any where. Dear Duff, I prithee contradict thyself. And say it is not so.

Re-enter Machi III, I I NNOX, with Ross.

Mach. Had I but died an hour before this chance.

I had liv'd a b'essed time; ter, from this instant.

There's nothing serious in mortality-All is but toys; renown and grace is dead; the wine of lite is drawn, and the mere

Is left this vault to blag of.

Enter MAICOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?

Mach. You are, and de not know't. 55 The spring, the head, the tountain of your blood.

Is stopp'd: the very source of it is stopp'd. Macl. Your royal father's murder'd. Mal. O, by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't.

Their hands and taces were all badg'd with blood:

So were their daggers, which unwip'd we Shall keep us both the sater. Where we are, found Upon their pillows. They star'd and were distracted:

No man's life was to be trusted with them. Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so? Who Macb. can be wise, amaz'd. temp'rate, and furious, 107 Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man.

The expedition of my violent love Outrun the pauser reason. H Here lav Duncan, His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood : And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers.

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers Unmannerly breech'd with gore. Who could refrain. IIS That had a heart to love, and in that heart Courage to make's love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho! Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. [Aside to Donalhain] Why do we hold our tongues that most may claim This argument for ours?

Don. [Aside to Malcolm] What should be spoken

Here, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole, May rush and seize us? Let's away. Our tears are not yet brew'd.

Mal. [Aside to Donalbain] Nor our strong sorrow Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady.

Lady Macbeth is carried out. And when we have our naked frailties hid, That suffer in exposure, let us meet, And question this most bloody piece of work,

To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us.

In the great hand of God I stand, and thence

Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight 130 Of treasonous malice.

And so do I. Macd. All.

So all. Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readi-

And meet i' th' hall together.

Well contented.

[Exeunt all but Malcolm and Donalbain. Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them.

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office Which the false man does easy. England.

Don. To Ireland I; our separated fortune

There's daggers in men's smiles; the near in blood. The nearer bloody.

This murderous shaft that's shot Mal. Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way Is to avoid the aim. Therefore to horse; And let us not be dainty of leave-taking, But shift away. There's warrant in that theft Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Inverness. Without Macbeth's castle.

Enter Ross with an Old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well:

Within the volume of which time I have seen

Hours dreadful and things strange: but this sore night

Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah, good father. Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act.

Threatens his bloody stage. By th' clock 'tis day

And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.

Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame.

That darkness does the face of earth entomb.

When living light should kiss it?

Tis unnatural, 10 Old M. Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday

A falcon, tow'ring in her pride of place, Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd. Ross. And Duncan's horses-a thing most strange and certain-Beautous and swift, the minions of their race. Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out, ling 'gainst obedience, as they would make Contending

War with mankind.

Old M. 'Tis said they eat each other. Ross. They did so: to the amazement of mine eyes,

That look'd upon't.

Enter MACDUFF.

Here comes the good Macduff. How goes the world, sir, now?

Why, see you not? Macd. Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain. Ross. Alas, the day ! Wi at good could they pretend?

1000

Macd. They were suborn'd Malcolm and Donalbain, the King's two sons.

Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon them

Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. Gainst nature still. Thriftless ambition, that wilt ravin up Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Is't far you ride? Scone

To be invested.

Where is Duncan's body? Ross. Macd. Carned to Colmekill,

The sacred storehouse of his predecessor

And guardian of their bones.

Will you to Scone? 35 Ross. Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither. Macd. Well, may you see things well done there! Adieu.

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new. Ross. Farewell, father.

Old M. God's benison go with you, and with those

That would make good of bad, and friends of foes. Exeunt.

ACT THREE

Scene I. Forres. The balace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now-King, Cawdor, Glamis, all

As the weird women promis'd; and I fear Thou play'dst most foully for't; yet it was

It should not stand in thy posterity; But that myself should be the root and tather

Of many kings. If there come truth from them-

As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine-

Why, by the verities on thee made good. May they not be my oracles as well And set me up in hope? But, hush, no

Sennet sounded. Enter MACBLIII as King, LADY MACBETH as Queen: It inox. Ross, Lords, Ladies, and Attendance.

Macb. Here's our chief guest. Lady M. If he had been forgotten, It had been as a gap in our great feast, And all-thing unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper,

And I'll request your presence.

Let your Highness 15 Command upon me; to the which my duties

Are with a most indissoluble tie For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ay, my good lord. Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice-

Which still hath been both grave and prosperous-

In this day's council; but we'll take tomorrow.

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the 'Twixt this and supper. Go not my horse the better.

I must become a borrower of the night For a dark hour or twain.

Fail not our feast. Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd

In England and in Ireland, not confessing Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers With strange invention; but of that tomorrow,

When therewithal we shall have cause of state

Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: adicu.

Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with vou ?

Ban. Ay, my good lord; our time dees call upon's.

Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot.

And so I do commend you to their backs. Farewell. Exit Banquo. Let every man be master of his time Till seven at night; to make society

The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone. While then, God be with you!

[Exeunt all but Macbeth and a Servant, Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men our pleasure?

Serv. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.

[Exit Servant. To be thus is nothing.

But to be safely thus. Our fears in Banque Stick deep; and in his royalty of nature Reigns that which would be fear'd. 'Tis much he dares,

And to that dauntless temper of his mind He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour

To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear; and under him My Genius is rebuk'd, as it is said Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the Sisters

When first they put the name of King upon

OIOI

Scene 11 MACRETH

And bade them speak to him; then, According to the gift which bounteous prophet-like.

They hail'd him father to a line of kings. Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown And put a barren sceptre in my gripe, Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,

No son of mine succeeding. If't be so, For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind; For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd:

Put rancours in the vessel of my peace Only for them, and mine eternal jewel Given to the common enemy of man To make them kings—the seeds of Banquo kings!

Rather than so, come, Fate, into the list, 70 And champion me to th' utterance! Who's there?

Re-enter Servant and two Murderers.

Now go to the door and stay there till we [Exit Servant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together? 1 Mur. It was, so please your Highness. Well then, now Mach.

Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know

That it was he, in the times past, which held you

So under fortune; which you thought had been

Our innocent self. This I made good to vou

In our last conference, pass'd in probation with you,

How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the instruments,

Who wrought with them, and all things else Who I myself struck down. And thence that might

To half a soul and to a notion craz'd

Say 'Thus did Banquo'. Mur. You made it known to us.

Mach. I did so; and went further, which is now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find Your patience so predominant in your

That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd.

To pray for this good man and for his issue, Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave

And beggar'd yours for ever?

We are men, my liege. 👊 1 Mur. Mach. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men; As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept

All by the name of dogs. The valued file Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle.

The house-keeper, the hunter, every one nature

Hath in him clos'd: whereby he does receive

Particular addition, from the bill That writes them all alike; and so of men. Now, if you have a station in the file. Not i' th' worst rank of manhood, sav't: And I will put that business in your bosoms

Whose execution takes your enemy off, Grapples you to the heart and love of us, Who wear our health but sickly in his life, Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege, Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world Hath so incens'd that I am reckless what I do to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another, 110 weary with disasters, tugg'd with So fortune.

That I would set my life on any chance, To mend it or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you Know Banquo was your enemy.

Both Mur. True, my lord. Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance That every minute of his being thrusts Against my near'st of life; and though I could With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight, And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, For certain friends that are both his and mine, Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall

it is

That I to your assistance do make love, Masking the business from the common eve For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord, 125 Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives-Mach. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most,

I will advise you where to plant yourselves, Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' th'

That I require a clearness; and with him, To leave no rubs nor botches in the work, Fleance his son, that keeps him company, Whose absence is no less material to me 135 Than is his father's, must embrace the fate Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart: I'll come to you anon.

We are resolv'd, my lord. Both Mur.

TOIL

Macb. I'll call upon you straight; abidwithin. [Excunt Murderers It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's fligh If it find heaven must find it out to-night

Scene II. Forres. The palace.

Enter LADY MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?
Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again tonight.

Lady M. Say to the King I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Midam, I will. [Exit Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent, Where our desire is got without content. : 'Tis safer to be that which we destroy, Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy

Enter MACDETH.

Now now, my lord! Why do you keep alone,

Of sorriest fancies your companions making Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without all remedy

Should be without regard. What's done is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:

She'll close, and be herself, whilst our poor malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth. 15
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear and sleep In the affliction of these terrible dreams That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead.

Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace,

Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst; nor steel, nor poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing, 25 Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on.

Genfle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;

Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

Mach. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you.

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo; Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue—

Unsafe the while, that we Must lave our honours in these flattering streams.

And make our faces vizards to our hearts,

Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this. Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wite!

Thou know'st that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are assailable.

Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown

His cloister'd flight; ere to black Hecate's summons
The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done? Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge.

dearest chuck,

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling

Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond Which keeps me pale. Light thickens, and the crow

Makes wing to th' rooky wood;
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,

Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse.

Thou marvell'st at my words; but hold thee still:

Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill.

55
So, prithee go with me.

[Execunt.]

Scene III. Forres. The approaches to the palace.

Enter three Murderers.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

3 Mur. Macbeth

2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers

Our offices, and what we have to do,

To the direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day;

Now spurs the lated traveller apace To gain the timely inn, and near approaches The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark! I hear horses. Ban. [Within] Give us a light there, ho!

2 Mur. Then 'tis he; the rest That are within the note of expectation so Already are i' th' court.

1 Mur. His horses go about.
3 Mur. Almost a mile; but he does usually,

Enter BANOUO, and FLEANCE with a torch.

2 Mur. A light, a light!

'Tis he. 3 Mur.

1 Mur. Stand to 't.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

1 Mur. Let it come down. [Stabs Banquo.

Ban. O. treachery! Fly. good Fleance. fly, fly, fly. Thou mayst revenge. O slave!

[Dies. Fleance escapes.

3 Mur. Who did strike out the light?

Was't not the way? 3 Mu. There's but one down: the son is fled.

We have lost 2 Mur. Best half of our affair.

Well, let's away. 1 Mur. And say how much is done. Exeunt.

Scene IV. Forres. The balace.

Banquet prepar'd. Enter MACBETH. LADY MACBETH, Ross, Lennox, Lords, and Attendants.

Mach. You know your own degrees, sit down.

At first and last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your Majesty. Mach, Our self will mingle with society And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state: but in best time

We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends:

For my heart speaks they are welcome.

Enter First Murderer to the door.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.

Both sides are even; here I'll sit i' th' midst.

Be large in mirth; anon we'll drink a measure

The table round. [Going to the door. There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he within.

Is he despatch'd? My lord, his throat is cut; Mur. That I did for him.

Macb. throats:

Yet he's good that did the like for Fleance. If thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil. Mur. Most royal sir-Fleance is 'scap'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again. I had 21 1 else been perfect,

As broad and general as the casing air. But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in

To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?

Mur. Ay, my good lord. Safe in a ditch he bides.

With twenty trenched gashes on his head. The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that. There the grown serpent lies; the worm that's fled Hath nature that in time will venom breed, No teeth for th' present. Get thee gone:

to-morrow We'll hear, ourselves, again.

[Exit Murderer.

Lady M. My roval lord.

You do not give the cheer; the feast is sold That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making,

'Tis given with welcome. To feed were best at home:

From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony; Meeting were bare without it.

Enter the Ghost of Banquo and sits in Macbeth's place.

Mach. Sweet remembrancer! Now good digestion wait on appetite,

And health on both!

May't please your Highness sit? Len. Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd. Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;

Who may I rather challenge for unkindness Than pity for mischance.

Ross. His absence, sir. Lays blame upon his promise. Please 't your Highness

To grace us with your royal company.

Mach. The table 's full. Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.

Macb. Where? Len. Here, my good lord.

What is't that moves your Highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this? Lords. What, my good lord? Macb. Thou canst not say I did it; never shake Thy gory locks at me.

Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his Highness is not well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends. My lord is often thus.

Thou art the best o' th' cut- And hath been from his youth. Pray you, keep seat.

The fit is momentary; upon a thought 55 He will again be well. If much you note him.

You shall offend him and extend his passion.

Which might appal the devil.

Ladv M. O proper stuff! 60 This is the very painting of your fear, This is the air-drawn dagger which you said Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws and starts-

A woman's story at a winter's fire, Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself! Why do you make such taces? When all's done.

You look but on a stool.

Mach. Prithee see there.

Behold! look! lo! how say you?

Why, what care I? It thou canst ned, speak too. 70 If charnel-houses and our graves must send

Those that we bury back, our monuments Shall be the maws of kites. [Exit Ghost. Lady M. What, quite unmann'd in folly?

Mach. If I stand here, I saw him. Fie, for shame! Lady M.

Mach. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' th' olden time.

Erc humane statute purg'd the gentle weal; Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd

Too terrible for the ear. The time has been That when the brains were out the man would die.

Your noble friends do lack you. Macb. I do forget.

Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends:

I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing To those that know me. Come, love and health to all

Then I'll sit down. Give me some wine, fill full.

Enter Ghost.

And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge. Macb. Avaunt, and quit my sight. Let the earth hide thee.

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold; Thou hast no speculation in those eyes 95 Which thou dost glare with!

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,

Mach. What man dare, I date.

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,

The arm'd thinoceros, or th' Hyrcan tiger: Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves

Shall never tremble. Or be alive again. Impostors to true fear-would well become And dare me to the desert with thy sword: If trembling I inhabit, then protest me 705 The baby of a girl. Hence, hornible shadow! Unreal mock'ry, hence! Lexit Ghost. Why, so; being gone,

I am a man again. Pray you, sit still. Laa, M. You have displac'd the mirth.

broke the good meeting, With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be, 110 And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder? You make inc strange Even to the disposition that I owe.

When now I think you can behold such

And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks, When mine is blanch'd with fear.

What sights, my lord? Ross. Lady M. I pray you speak not: he grows worse and worse;

Question enrages him. At once, good night. Stand not upon the order of your going, But go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health 120 Attend his Majesty!

Lady M. A kind good night to all! (Evenut Lords and Attendants. Macb. It will have blood; they say blood w.li have blood.

Stones have been known to move, and trees to speak .

Augurs and understood relations have By magget-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth The secret'st man of blood. What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou that Macduff denies his person

At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir? Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send-There's not a one of them but in his house

I keep a servant tee'd - I will to-morrow. And betimes I will to the Weird Sisters: More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know By the worst means the worst. For mine own good

All causes shall give way. I am in blood Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no more.

Returning were as tedious as go o'er. Strange things I have in head that will to hand,

Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep. Mach. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse

Is the initiate fear that wants hard use. We are vet but young in deed. Exeunt

SCENE V. A heath

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting HECATE.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecat! You look angerly.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are.

Saucy and overbold? How did you dare To trade and traffic with Macbeth In riddles and affairs of death; And I, the mistress of your charms, The close contriver of all haims, Was never call'd to bear my part, Or show the glory of our art? And, which is worse, all you have done 10 Hath been but for a wayward son, Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do, Loves for his own ends, not for you. But make amends now. Get you gone, And at the pit of Acheron Meet me i' th' morning; thither he Will come to know his destiny. Your vessels and your spells provide, Your charms, and everything beside. I am for th' air; this night I'll spend Unto a dismal and a fatal end. Great business must be wrought ere noon. Upon the corner of the moon There hangs a vap'rous drop profound; I'll catch it ere it come to ground; And that, distill'd by magic sleights, Shall raise such artificial sprites As, by the strength of their illusion, Shall draw him on to his confusion. He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and hear His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear; And you all know security Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

[Music and a song within: Come away, come away, etc.' Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see, Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. 35 [Exit.

1 Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Forres. The palace. Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit The cloudy messenger turns me his back your thoughts, Which can interpret farther. Only I say Things have been strangely boine. The gracious Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth. Marry, he was dead.

And the right-valiant Banque walk'd too late;

Whom, you may say, if't please you, Fleance kill'd, For Fleance fied. Men must not walk too late. W/ho

cannot want the thought how monstrous

It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain To kill their gracious father? Damned fact!

How it did grieve Macbeth! Did he not straight.

In pious rage, the two delinquents tear. That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep?

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;

For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive 15 To hear the men deny't. So that, I say, He has borne all things well; and I do think

That had he Duncan's sons under his key-As, an't please heaven, he shall not-they should find

What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance.

But peace! For from broad words, and 'cause he faii'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear, Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan, From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,

Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd Of the most pious Edward with such grace That the malevolence of fortune nothing Takes from his high respect; thither

Macduif Is gone to pray the holy King upon his aid To wake Northumberland and warlike

Siward, That by the help of these-with Him above To ratify the work-we may again

Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights. Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives,

Do faithful homage and receive free honours-

All which we pine for now. And this report Hath so exasperate the King that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Sent he to Macduff? Len. Lord. He did; and with an absolute 'Sir, not I!'

And hums, as who should say 'You'li rue the time

MACBETH [Act 4

That clogs me with this answer'.

Len.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. A dark cave. In the middle, a cauldron boiling.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

- 1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.
- 2 Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whin'd.
- 3 Witch. Harpier cries; 'tis time, 'tis time.
- 1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go; In the poison'd entrails throw.
 Toad that under cold stone
 Days and nights has thirty-one Swelt'red venom sleeping got
 Boil thou first i' th' charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; refire burn, and cauldron bubble.

2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing—
For a charm of pow'iful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; -c Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf, Witch's mummy, maw and gulf Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark, Root of hemlock digg'd i' th' dark, Liver of blaspheming Jew, Gall of goat, and slips of yew Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse, Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips, Finger of birth-strangled babe Ditch-deliver'd by a drab—Make the gruel thick and slab; Add thereto a tiger's chaudron, For th' ingredience of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 54
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood, Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;

And every one shall share i' th' gams. And now about the cauldron sing, Like elves and fairies in a ring, Enchanting all that you put in.

[Music and a song: 'Black spirits, etc.' Exit Hecate.

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs, Something wicked this way comes.

45 Open, locks, whoever knocks.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!

What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you by that which you profess—
Howe'er you come to know it—answer

me.
Though you untie the winds and let them fight Against the churches; though the yesty waves Confound and swallow navigation up; Though bladed corn be lodg'd and trees blown down; 55

Though castles topple on their warders' heads:

Though palaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of nature's germens tumble all together, Even till destruction sicken—answer me & To what I ask you.

1 Witch. Speak.

2 Witch. Demand.

3 Witch. We'll answer. 1 Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths, Or from our masters?

Mach. Call 'em; let me see 'em. I Witch. Pour in sow's blood that hath

Her nine farrow; grease that's sweaten 65 From the murderer's gibbet throw Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low; Thyself and office deftly show.

Thunder. First Apparition, an Armed Head.

Mach. Tell me, thou unknown power— 1 Witch. He knows thy thought. Hear his speech, but say thou nought. 70

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!
Beware Macduff;

Beware the Thane of Fife. Dismiss me. Enough. [He descends. Mach. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks;

Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more—

1 Witch. He will not be commanded.
Here's another, 75
More potent than the first.

тотб

Thunder. Second Apparition, a Bloody Child.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee. App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute laugh to scorn The pow'r of man, for none of woman born Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff; what need I fear of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure And take a bond of fate. Thou shalt not live:

That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies, 85 And points at them for his. [The show And sleep in spite of thunder.

Third Apparition, a Child Crowned, with a tree in his hand.

What is this

That rises like the Issue of a king, And wears upon his baby brow the round And top of sovereignty?

Listen, but speak not to't. App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane Hill Shall come against him. Descends.

That will never be. Who can impress the forest, bid the tree of Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements, good!

Rebellion's head rise never till the wood Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd

Macbeth Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart Throbs to know one thing; tell me, if your art I O I Can tell so much-shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

Seek to know no more. Mach. I will be satisfied. Deny me this, And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.

Why sinks that cauldron, and what noise is this? [Hautboys.

1 Witch. Show!

2 Witch. Show! 3 Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart; Come like shadows, so depart!

A Show of eight Kings, and Banquo last; the last king with a glass in his hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo; down!

Thy crown does sear mine eye-balls. And thy hair,

Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first.

A third is like the former. Filthy hags! 115 Why do you show me this? A fourth? Start, eyes.

What, will the line stretch out to th' crack of doom?

Another yet? A seventh? I'll see no more. And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass

Which shows me many more; and some I

That twofold balls and treble sceptres carry. Hornble sight! Now I see 'tis true: For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me, vanishes] What ! is this so ?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so. But why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly? Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites. And show the best of our delights: I'll charm the air to give a sound, While you perform your antic round; 130

That this great king may kindly say, Our duties did his welcome pay.

Music. The Witches dance, and vanish.

Macb. Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour

Stand ave accursed in the calendar. Come in, without there.

Enter LENNOX.

What's your Grace's will? 135 Len. Macb. Saw you the Weird Sisters?

No, my loid. Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord. Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride;

And damn'd all those that trust them! I did hear 139 The galloping of horse. Who was't came by?

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England! Len. Ay, my good lord.

Mach. [Aside] Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits.

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook Unless the deed go with it. From this moment

The very firstlings of my heart shall be The firstlings of my hand. And even now, To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:

The castle of Macduft I will surprise, Seize upon Fife, give to the edge o' th' sword

His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls

That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool:

This deed I'll do before this purpose cool.

MACBETH [Act 4

But no more sights !-- Where are these gentlemen?

[Exeant. Come, bring me where they are.

Scene II. Fife. Macduff's castle.

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and Ross.

Lady Macd. What had he done to make him fly the land?

Ross. You must have patience, madam. L. Macd. He had none: His flight was madness. When our actions do not.

Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross.

You know not Whether it was his wisdom or his tear. L. Macd. Wisdom! To leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion, and his titles, in a place From whence himself does fly? He loves us not: He wants the natural touch; for the poor

The most duninutive of birds, will fight, 10 Her young ones in her nest, against the

All is the fear, and nothing is the love: As little is the wisdom, where the flight So runs against all reason.

My dearest cor. I pray you, school yourself. But, for your husband.

He is puble, wise, judicious, and best knows. The fits o' th' season. I dare not speak much further;

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors

And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour

From what we fear, yet know not what we But float upon a wild and violent sea

Each way and none. I take my leave of Shall not be long but I'll be here again. Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward

To what they were before.-My pretty cousin.

Blessing upon you! L. Macd. Facher'd he is, and yet he's fatherless. Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stav longer, It would be my disgrace and your discomfort. [Exit. I take my leave at once.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead; And what will you do now? How will you Live ?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies? Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net nor lime. The pitfall nor the gin.

Sor. Why should I, mother ? Poor birds they are not set for My father is not dead, for all your saying, L. Macd. Yes, he is dead. How wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband? L. Macd Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again u L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit: and yet, i' faith.

With wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother? L. Macd. Av., that he was. Son. What is a trutor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and bes. Son. And be all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hang'd. Son. And must they all be hang'd that swear and lie ?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them? L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the hars and swearers are fools: for there are hars and swearers enow to beat the honest men and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now, God help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. It he were dead, you'd weep for him: it you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to vou known.

Though in your state of honour I am perfect. I doubt some danger does approach you nearly.

It you will take a homely man's advice. Be not found here; hence, with your little opes.

To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;

To do worse to you were fell cruelty, Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer. [Frit. L. Macd. Whither should I fly? I have done no harm. But I remember now I am in this earthly world, where to do harm is aften hudable, to do good sometime 75 Accounted dangerous folly. Why then, alas. Do I pur up that womanly defence To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces ?

Scene 2] MACBETH

1 Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope, in no place so un sanctified

Where such as thou mayst find him.

1 Mur. He's a traitor Son. Thou liest, thou shag-ear'd villain 1 Mur. What, you egg? [Stabbing him. Young fry of treachery!

Son. He has kill'd me, mother Run away, I pray you. [Dies [Exit Lady Macduff, crying 'Murder!

Scene III. England. Before King Edward's balace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUIF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there

Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom. Each

New widows howl, new orphans cry; new serrows

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out Like syllable of dolour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wall What know, believe; and what I can redress.

As I shall find the time to friend, I will. What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.

This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,

Was once thought honest; you have lov'd him well;

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something

You may deserve of him through me, and wisdom

To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb T' appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherons.

Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil

In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon;

That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose;

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell. Though all things foul would wear the brows

Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,

Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child,

Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,

Without leave-taking? I pray you,

Let not my jealousies be your dishonours, But mine own safeties. You may be rightly just.

Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country.
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dare not check thee. Wear thou thy wrongs,

The title is affeer'd. Fare thee well, lord. I would not be the villain that thou think't For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp

And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended. I speak not as in absolute fear of you. I think our country sinks beneath the yoke:

It weeps, it ble ds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds. I think withal

Is added to her wounds. I think withal
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer

Of goodly theusands. But, for all this, When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head, Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country

Shall have more vices than it had before; More suffer, and more sundry ways than

By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?

Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know

All the particulars of vice so grafted That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth

Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state

Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd With my confincless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions 55 Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd

In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody, Luxurious, avaricious, talse, deceiful,

Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,

In my voluptuousness. Your wives, your daughters,

Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up

The cistern of my lust; and my desire All continent impediments would o'erbear That did oppose my will. Better MacPeth Than such an one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemperance In nature is a tyranny; it hath been 57 Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne And fall of many kings. But fear not yet To take upon you what is yours. Yeu may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty.

IOIQ

And vet seem cold, the time you may so To thy good truth and honour. Devilish hoodwink.

We have willing dames enough; there By many of these trains hath sought to win cannot be

That vulture in you to devour so many As will to greatness dedicate themselves, 25 Finding it so inclin'd.

With this there grows Mal. In my most ill-compos'd affection such A stanchless avarice that, were I King, I should cut off the nobles for their lands,

Desire his jewels, and this other's house; 'o And my more-having would be as a sauce To make me hunger more, that I should forge Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal, Destroying them for wealth.

This avarice Macd. Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious

Than summer-seeming lust; and it hath been

The sword of our slain kings. Yet do not fear:

Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will Of your mere own. All these are portable, With other graces weigh'd.

The king-Mal. But I have none.

becoming graces, As justice, verity, temp'rance, stableness, Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness, Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude, I have no relish of them; but abound In the division of each several crime, Acting it many ways. Nay, had I pow'r, I

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell, Uproar the universal peace, confound All unity on earth.

O Scotland, Scotland! Macd. Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak. I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern! No. not to live! O nation miserable. With an untitled tyrant bloody-scept'red, When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,

Since that the truest issue of thy throne By his own interdiction stands accurs'd And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal father

Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore thee,

Oft'ner upon her knees than on her feet, 210 Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well! These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself Hath banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast.

Thy hope ends here!

Macduff, this noble passion, Child of integrity, hath from my soul Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts

Macbeth

me

Into his power; and modest wisdom plucks me

From over-credulous haste. But God above Deal between thee and me; for even now I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction, here abjure The taints and blames I laid upon myself For strangers to my nature. I am yet 125 Unknown to woman, never was forsworn. Scarcely have coveted what was mine own. At no time broke my faith, would not betray

The devil to his fellow, and delight

No less in truth than life. My first false speaking

Was this upon myself. What I am truly Is thine and my poor country's to command:

Whither indeed, before thy here-approach, Old Siward with ten thousand warlike men Already at a point was setting forth. Now we'll together; and the chance of goodness

Be like our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent?

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once 'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon. Comes the King forth, I pray you?

Ay, sir. There are a crew of Doct. Ay, sir. wretched souls

That stay his cure. Their malady convinces The great assay of art; but at his touch, Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor. Macd. What's the disease he means? "Tis called the evil: Mal.

A most miraculous work in this good king; Which often since my here-remain in England

I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,

All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye, The mere despair of surgery, he cures, Hanging a golden stamp about their necks, Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken, To the succeeding royalty he leaves The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,

He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy; And sundry blessings hang about his throne That speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.

Macd. See, who comes here? Scene 31 MACRETH

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know Where hearing should not latch them. him not.

Macd. My ever gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God betimes remove

The means that makes us strangers!

Ross. Sir. amen. Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Alas, poor country, Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot 165 Be call'd our mother, but our grave: where nothing, But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile; Where sighs, and groans, and shricks, that rent the air,

Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems

A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives

Expire before the flowers in their caps. Dying or ere they sicken.

O, relation Macd.

Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What's the newest grief? Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker:

Each minute teems a new one.

How does my wife? Ross, Why, well.

Macd. And all my children? Well too. Ross.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech. How goes't?

Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings,

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour

Of many worthy fellows that were out; Which was to my belief witness'd the rather

For that I saw the tyrant's power afoot. 185 Now is the time of help; your eve in Scotland

Would create soldiers, make our women fight.

To doff their dire distresses.

Be't their comfort Mal. We are coming thither. Gracious England

Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men-

An older and a better soldier none That Christendom gives out.

Would I could answer Ross. This comfort with the like! But I have words

That would be howl'd out in the desert air.

What concern they? Macd. The general cause, or is it a fee-grief Due to some single breast?

Ross. No mind that's honest But in it shares some woe, though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine.

Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it.

Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever. Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound

That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humh! I guess at it. Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes Savagely slaughter'd. To relate the manner. Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer. To add the death of you.

Merciful heaven! What, man! Ne'er pull your hat upon your brows: Give sorrow words. The grief that does not speak

Whispers the o'erfraught heart and bids it 175 break.

Macd. My children too?

Ross. Wife, children, servants, all That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence! My wife kill'd too?

Ross. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted. Let's make us med'cines of our great revenge

To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children. All my pretty ones?

Did you say all? O hell-kite! All?

What, all my pretty chickens and their dam At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so: 220 But I must also feel it as a man.

I cannot but remember such things were That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on.

And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff.

They were all struck for thee-nought that I am:

Not for their own demerits, but for mine, Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword. Let grief

Convert to anger; blunt not the heart. enrage it.

Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes 230

IOZI

And braggart with my tongue! But, gentle what comes from her, to satisfy my rememheavens,

Cut short all intermission: front to tront

Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and mysetf:

Within my sword's length set him; if he scape,

Heaven forgive him too!

This tune goes manly. 235 Mal. Come, go we to the King. Our power is ready;

Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth Is ripe for shaking, and the pow'rs above Receive what Put on their instruments.

cheer you may; The night is long that never finds the day. Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. Dunsinane, Macbeth's castle. Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walk'd?

Gent. Since his Majesty went into the field. I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon t, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumb'ry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report

Doct. You may to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very ruise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light? Gent. Why, it stood by her. She has light More by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see her eyes are open. Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Lock how she rubs her hands.

Cent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands; I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot. Doct. Hark, she speaks. I will set down brance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say! One, two; why then 'tis time to do't. Hell is murky. Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our pow'r to account? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doci. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife; where is she now? What, will these hands ne'er be clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that; you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that. Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still. All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charg'd.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well.

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice. Yet I have known those which have walk'd in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown, look not so pale. I tell you vet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done cannot be undone. To hed, to bed, to bed.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisp'rings are abroad. Unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles; infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets. needs she the divine than the physician.

God, God forgive us all. Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annovance,

And still keep eyes upon her. night. My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight. I think, but dare not speak.

Good night, good doctor. Gent. Exeunt. Scene II. The country near Dunsmane.
Drum and colours. Enter MENTEITH,
CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers.
Ment. The English pow't is near. led on by Malcolm,

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenges burn in them; for their dear causes

Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file

Of all the gentry. There is Siward's son,
And many unrough youths that even now
Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Caith. Great Dunsinane be strongly fortifies.

Some say he's mad; others, that lesser hate him.

Do call it valiant fury; but for certain He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause 15 Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel His secret murders sticking on his hands; Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach;

Those he commands move only in command,

Nothing in love. Now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame His pester'd senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn Itself for being there?

Caith.

Well, march we on 25

To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd.

Meet we the med'cine of the sickly weal;

And with him pour we in our country's purge

Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs
To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds. 30

Make we our march towards Birnam. [Exeunt, marching.

Scene III. Dunsinane. Macbeth's castle. Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all.

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane
I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know

All mortal consequences have pronounc'd me thus:

'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman

Shall e'er have power upon thee'. Then fly, false thanes,

And mingle with the English epicures.
The mind I sway by and the heart I bear Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear.

Enter Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou creamfac'd loon!

Where got'st thou that goose look?

Serv. There is ten thousand—
Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch?

Death of thy soul! Those linen cheeks of thine

Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face?

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Mach. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.

Seyton!—I am sick at heart, When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push Will cheer me ever, or disseat me now. 21 I have liv'd long enough. My way of life Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;

And that which should accompany old age, As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,

I must not look to have; but, in their stead, Curses not loud but deep, mouth-honour, breath,

Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What 's your gracious pleasure? Macb. What news more? Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.

Give me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet. Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out moe horses, skirr the country round; 35

Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies .8

That keep her from her rest.

Mach. Cur

Macb. Cure her of that. Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd, (Exit.

Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow. Raze out the written troubles of the brain.

And with some sweet oblivious antidote Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff

Which weighs upon the heart?

Therein the patient 15 Doct. Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs-I'll none of it.

Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff.

Seyton, send out. Doctor, the thanes fly from me.

Come, sir, dispatch. If thou couldst. doctor, cast

The water of my land, find her disease. And purge it to a sound and pristing health, I would applaud thee to the very echo, That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.-

clear. Profit again should hardly draw me here.

Scene IV. Before Birnam Wood.

Drum and colours. Enter MALCOLM, SIWARD, MACDUFF, Siward's Son. MEN-LENNOX, TEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, Ross, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand

That chambers will be safe.

We doubt it nothing. Ment. Siw. What wood is this before us? Ment. The wood or Birnam Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough

And bear't before him; thereby shall we shadow

The numbers of our host, and make discovery

Err in report of us.

Sol4. It shall be done.

Siw. We learn no other but the confident

Our setting down before't.

'Tis his main hope; ro For where there is advantage to be given, Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player,

Both more and less have given him the revolt:

And none serve with h. a but constrained things.

Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership

The time approaches Siw. That will with due decision make us know What we shall say we have, and what we owe.

Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate.

But certain issue strokes must arbitrate: 20 Towards which advance the war.

Lexeunt, marching.

Scene V. Dunsmane. Macbeth's castle. Enter MACBETH, SLYTON, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls: The cry is still 'They come'. Our castle's strength Your royal Will laugh a siege to scorn. Here let them > Till famine and the ague eat them up. Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours. We might have met them dareful, beard to beard.

(A cry within of women. What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

Macb. I have almost torgot the taste of tears.

The time has been my senses would have cool'd To hear a night-shrick, and my tell of

Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir As hie were in't. I have supp'd full with horrors; Direness, tamiliar to my slaughterous thoughts.

Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SLYTON.

Wherefore was that cry? 15 Sey. The Queen, my lord, is dead, Macb. She should have died hereafter; There would have been a time for such a word.

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day To the last syllable of recorded time, Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!

Scene 5 MACRETH

That struts and frets his hour upon the stage.

And then is heard no more; it is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,

I should report that which I say I saw. But know not how to do't.

Well, say, sir. Macb. Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the Am I to fear, or none.

I look'd toward Birnam, and anon methought

The wood began to move.

Mach. Liar and slave! 35 Mess. Let me endure your wrath, it't be not so.

Within this three mile may you see it coming:

I say, a moving grove

If thou speak'st false, Macb. Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive, Till famine cling thee. If thy speech be sooth.

I care not if thou dost for me as much. I pull in resolution, and begin

To doubt th' equivocation of the fiend That lies like truth. 'Fear not, till Birnam

Do come to Dunsinane.' And now a wood Comes toward Dunsmane. Arm, arm, and out.

If this which he avouches does appear, There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here. I gin to be aweary of the sun,

And wish th' estate o' th' world were now undone. Ring the alarum bell. Blow wind, come wrack: At least we'll die with harness on our back.

IExeunt.

SCENE VI. Dunsinane. Before the castle. Drum and colours. Enter MALCOLM. SIWARD, MACDUFF, and their Army with boughs. Mal. Now near enough; your leavy screens throw down,

And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,

Shall with my cousin, your right noble

Lead our first battle: worthy Macdust and Shall take upon's what else remains to do. According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well. Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night, Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath. Those clamotous harbingers of blood and death. Exernit.

Scene VII. Another part of the field. Enter MACRETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake: I cannot fly,

But bear-like I must fight the course. What's he

That was not born of woman? Such a one

Enter young SIWARD.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it. Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyseli a hotter name

Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth. Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[Fight, and young Sward slam. Macb. Thou wast born of weman.

But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born. IExit.

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face.

If thou beest slain and with no stroke of mine, My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.

I cannot strike at wretched kerns whose arms

Are hir'd to bear their staves; either thou, Macbeth.

Or else my sword with an unbattered edge

I sheathe again undeeded. There thou shouldst be;

By this great clatter, one of greatest note Seems bruited. Let me find him, liortune, And more I beg not. IExit. Alarums.

Enter MALCOLM and old SIWARD.

The castle's Siw. This way, my lord. gently rend'red; The tyrant's people on both sides do fight :

The noble thanes do bravely in the war; The day almost itself professes yours, And little is to do.

We have met with foes Mal.

MACRETH [Act 5

That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle. [Exeunt. Alarum.

SCENE VIII. Another part of the field.

Enler MACBETH.

Mach. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die

On mine own sword? Whiles ! see lives, the gashes Do better upon them.

Enter MACDUFF.

Turn, hell-hound, turn. Macd. Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee.

But get thee back; my soul is too much charg'd

With blood of thine already.

I have no words-Macd.

My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain

Than terms can give thee out.

[Fight. Alarum. Thou losest labour. Mach. As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air

With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed.

Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; I bear a charmed life, which must not yield To one of woman born.

Despair thy charm; Macd. And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd

Tell thee Macduff was from his mother's womb

Untimely ripp'd.

Mach. Accursed be that tongue that tells

For it hath cow'd my better part of man: And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd

That palter with us in a double sense, 20 That keep the word of promise to our ear, And break it to our hope! I'll not fight I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward,

And live to be the show and gaze o' th' time.

We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are, Painted upon a pole, and underwrit ' Here may you see the tyrant'

I will not yield, Mach. To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet

And to be baited with the rabble's curse. Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsi-

And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born, Yet I will try the last. Before my hody I throw my warlike shield. Lay on, Macduff :

And damn'd be him that first cries 'Hold,

Retreat and flourish. Later, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, SIWARD, ROSS, LEN-NOX, ANGUS, CAITHNESS, MENTEITH, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd. Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these

I see. So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.

Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:

He only hy'd but till he was a man; The which no sooner had his prowess con-

In the unshrinking station where he fought, But like a man he died.

Suv. Then he is dead? Ross. Ay, and brought off the field.

Your cause of sorrow Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front. Siw. Why, then, God's soldier be he! Had I as many sons as I have hairs, I would not wish them to a fairer death. And so his knell is knoll'd.

He's worth more sorrow, 50 And that I'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more. They say he parted well and paid his score ;

And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S head.

Macd. Hail, King! for so thou art. Behold where stands Th' usurper's cursed head. The time is

THE SCENE: Denmark.

ACT ONE

Scene I. Elsinore. The guard-platform of the Castle.

Francisco at his post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me. Stand and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the King! Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed. Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks. 'Tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring. Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who is there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane. 15 Fran. Give you good night.

O, farewell, honest soldier! Who hath reliev'd you?

Bernardo hath my place. Fran. Give you good night. Exit. Mar. Holla, Bernado!

Ber. SayWhat, is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him. Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy. And will not let belief take hold of him Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us:

Therefore I have entreated him along With is to watch the minutes of this night, That, it again this apparition come,

He may approve our eyes and speak to it. Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear. Sit down awhile,

And let us once again assail your ears, 32 That are so fortified against our story, What we have two nights seen.

Well, sit we down, And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all, When youd same star that's westward from the pole

Had made his course t' illume that part of heaven

Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself. The bell then beating one ---

Enter Ghost.

Mar. Peace, break thee off; look where it comes again.

Ber. In the same tigure, like the King that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a acholar; speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks 'a not like the King? Mark it, Houtle.

Hor. Most like. It harrows me with fear and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio. 45

Hor. What art thou that usurp'st the time of night

Together with that fair and warlike form In which the majesty of buried Denmark Did sometimes march? By heaven I charge thee, speak!

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See, it stalks away. 50

Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Ext Ghost. Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! You tremble and look pale.

Is not this something more than fantasy? What think you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe

Without the sensible and true avouch Oi mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the King? Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on 60 When he the ambitious Norway combated; So frown'd he once when, in an angry parle, He smote the sledded Polacks on the ice. 'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,

With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;

But, in the gross and scope of mine opinion, This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows, 70 Why this same strict and most observant

watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task

75

Does not divide the Sunday from the week;

What might be toward, that this sweaty
baste

Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day:

Who is't that can inform me?

Hor. That can I; At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, Whose image even but now appear'd to us, Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,

Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,

Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant

For so this side of our known world esteem'd
him—

Did slay this Fortinbias; who, by a seal'd compact,

Well ratified by law and heraldry, Did forfeit, with his life, all those h

Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror; Against the which a moiety competent so Was gaged by our king; which had return'd

To the inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same comait

And carriage of the article design'd, His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young

Fortinbras, 95
Of unimproved mettle hot and full,

Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,

Shark'd up a list of lawless resolutes,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in't; which is no other,

As it doth well appear unto our state, But to recover of us, by strong hand And terms compulsatory, those foresaid lands

So by his father lost; and this, I take it, Is the main motive of our preparations, 105. The source of this our watch, and the chief head

Of this post-haste and romage in the land. Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so.

Well may it sort, that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch; so like the King

That was and is the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome, A little ere the mightiest Julius fell, The graves stood tenantless, and the

Sheeted dead 215
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:

As, stars with trains of fire, and dews of blood.

Disasters in the sun; and the moist star Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands

Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse; And even the like precurse of fear'd events, As harbingers preceding still the fates

And prologue to the omen coming on, Have heaven and earth together demonstrated

Unto our climatures and countrymen. 125

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft, behold! Lo, where it comes again!

I'll cross it, though it blast me. Stay, illusion. [Ghost spreads its arms. If thou hast any sound or use of voice,

Speak to me. If there be any good thing to be done. 130 That may to thee do ease and grace to me, Speak to me. If thou art privy to thy country's fate, Which happily foreknowing may avoid, O, speak! Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life Extorted treasure in the womb of earth, For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death. The cock crows. Speak of it. Stay, and speak, Stop it, Marcellus. Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan? Hor. Do, if it will not stand. 'Tis here ! Ber. 'Tis here! Hor. Mar. 'Tis gone! [Exit Ghost. We do it wrong, being so majestical, To offer it the show of violence; For it is, as the air, invulnerable, IAC And our vain blows malicious mockery. Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew. Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing

Upon a fearful summons. I have heard The cock, that is the crumpet to the morn, Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat

Awake the god of day; and at his warning, Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air, Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies To his confine; and of the truth herein 155 This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock. Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated, This bird of dawning singeth all night long; And then, they say, no spirit dare stir abroad.

The nights are wholesome, then no planets strike,

No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,

So hallowed and so gracious is that time. Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it. But look, the morn, in russet mantle clad, Walks o'er the dew of you high eastward hill. Break we our watch up; and, by my advice.

Let us impart what we have seen to-night Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life, 170 This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him. Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it.

As needful in our loves, fiving our duty? Of these delated articles allow. morning kaww

Where we shall find him most convenient. [Exeunt. SCINE II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. In that and all things will we Vol. show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing, heartly That can denote me truly. These, indeed. farewell.

[Exeunt Volte hand and Cornelius. And now. Laertes, what's the news with vou?

You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?

You cannot speak of reason to the Dane And lose your voice. What wouldst thou beg, Laertes.

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking? The head is not more native to the heart. The hand more instrumental to the mouth. Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.

What wouldst thou have, Laertes? Laer. My dread lord, 50 Your leave and favour to return to France;

From whence though willingly I came to Denmark To show my duty in your coronation, Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,

My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France.

And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you you.
What says Polonius? Have you your father's leave?

Pol. 'A hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave

By laboursome petition: and at last Upon his will I seal'd my haid consent. for I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Lacrtes; time be thine.

And thy best graces spend it at thy will! But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son--Ham. [Aside] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much in the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off.

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not for ever with thy vailed lids Seek for thy noble father in the dust. Thou know'st 'tis common—all that lives must die.

I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw who? Hor. My lord, the King your father. The King my father! Hor. Season your admiration for a while

With an attent ear, till I may deliver, Upon the witness of these gentlemen, This marvel to you.

For God's love, let me hear. Ham. Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen, Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch. In the dead waste and middle of the night. Been thus encount'red. A figure like your father.

Enter LAURTES and OPHELIA his sister.

My necessaries are embark'd. Farewell.

And, sister, as the winds give benefit And convoy is assistant, do not sleep, But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that? Luer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour.

Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood, A violet in the youth of primy nature. Forward not permanent, sweet not lasting, The perfume and suppliance of a minute:

Laer. Think it no more: 10 For nature crescent does not grow alone In thews and bulk, but as this temple waxes.

The inward service of the mind and soul Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you

And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch The virtue of his will; but you must fear, His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own:

For he himself is subject to his birth: He may not, as unvalued persons do,

Carve for himself: for on his choice depends

The sanity and health of this whole state: And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd

Unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it 25 As he in his particular act and place May give his saying deed; which is no further

Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.

Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,

If with too credent ear you list his songs, to Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister; And keep you in the rear of your affection, Out of the shot and danger of desire.

The chariest maid is prodigal enough If she unmask her beauty to the moon. Virtue itself scapes not calumnious strokes; The canker galls the iniants of the spring Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd; 40 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth Contagious blastments are most imminent. Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear: Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

green girl, Unsifted in such perilous circumstance. Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I will teach you: think yourself a haby

That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay

Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;

Or—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,

Running it thus—you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me
